PLANT'S 'HEARTBEAT' THRILLS SCIENTISTS AT OXFORD MEETING

OXFORD, Aug. 6.—Rarely in all its history of nearly a hundred years of scientific achievement has the British Association for the Advancement of Science witnessed a more remarkable scene than this afternoon's, when Sir Jagadis Chandra Bose, the Hindu savant, demonstrated to an audience listening with absorbed interest the experiments by which he says he has proved that plants live lives akin to the lives of human beings.

Using instruments of almost incredible delicacy, one of which he had never exhibited before in public, the Oriental scientist showed his spectators the "heart" of a plant "beating" and the "blood" of a plant "flowing" in a manner which, according to him (and his audience was more than inclined to believe it), was far more similar to the phenomena connected with human life than science was willing to admit.

After explaining his theories by actual experiment, Sir Jagadis declared that present scientific conceptions of plant life were erroneous. One of the changes to be brought about, if his theories are applied, he said, would be the elimination of the vivisection of animals as an aid to scientific investigation.

Program Again Diverse.

The remarkable revelations of the Hindu savant formed only one of the many items on the program of the third session of the British Association at Oxford this afternoon. As was the case yesterday, the program was most diverse, allowing opportunity for experts in various provinces of science to have their innings and advance their views.

Among those men who read papers before sections of the association today were Professor J. Graham Kerr, who predicted dire things if education continues in its now accepted grooves; Dr. James Drever, who spoke on the penal system; Sir Lynden Macassey who suggested a cure for the present-day "strike fever"; Sir Thomas Holland, who attacked the neglect of civic training in our education, and Sir John F. C. Snell, who discussed the future of electricity.

These and others lavished the results of their long and painstaking study on auditors listening so raptly as never to lose a syllable.

Shows Plants Have "Hearts."

Sensational revelations of Sir Jagadis Chandra Bose concerning the "heart beats" of plants were followed with breathless interest by his Oxford audience.

It was known that he had brought to Oxford extraordinarily delicate instruments with which he seeks to prove the existence in plants of life closely resembling that of human beings, including one instrument which he never before has shown in public.

Hence both sexes of the audience were on tiptoe with eager anticipation when the world-renowned Hindu scientist appeared this afternoon in the lecture hall.

Before entering he had plucked at random an ordinary snapdragon and with this he made his experiment.

Savants watching him felt like pinching themselves to see if they were dreaming as Sir Jagadis in a matter-of-fact way began to reveal his wonders.

Placing the snapdragon in a tiny tray amid an awe-inspiring array of bottles and instruments, he showed how his apparatus recorded, by a series of continuous lines, the action of the beating "heart" of the plant, the lines being transcribed on a sensitized plate.

Then, to prove that it was indeed a heart he had under observation, he moved the plant slightly to another tray containing bromide. The plant immediately drooped and the "writing" changed perceptibly. Then he moved it into a tray containing musk, which immediately revived it.

He made further experiments with cobra poison and strychnine, obtaining even more startling results, which he declared proved that the nervous reactions of plants are stimulated by certain drugs exactly as in the case of human beings.

Measures Sap Pressure of Plants.

The hitherto unknown instrument revealed by Sir Jagadis today was designed by him for recording and measuring the rate of movement of sap or "blood" in plants and studying how it is modified by the action of drugs which affect the circulation of the life force.

When the circulation of the sap is stimulated by a drug, his recorder showed an upcurve, and when a depressant was used the struggle between the forces of life and death was clearly visible to the absorbed spectators.

They saw the development of a crisis

Lord Grey Advises British To Keep Their Walking Legs

EPSOM, England, Aug. 6 (AP).—"Keep your legs" was the advice Viscount Grey of Fallodon recently gave to the boys of Epsom College. He warned them against giving up walking and riding bicycles because the means of communication have been so much improved, and said even a middle-aged man is better for walking twenty miles a day or riding fifty on a wheel.

Viscount Grey is doubtful whether all the modern mechanical contrivances which have become part of everyday life are of benefit to humanity and warned his audience against neglecting their minds and bodies because mechanical genius has devised ways of amusing persons without requiring them to make any effort on their own behalf.

HANDS OFF MEXICO, IS COOLIDGE POLICY

He Holds That There Has Been No Cause for Action in Religious Struggle.

NO MOVE ON SOVIET DEBT

President Talks of Fall Campaigns With Tilson—Wades Brook and Lands Trout.

Special to The New York Times.

PLYMOUTH, Vt., Aug. 6.—President Coolidge is watching with great concern the struggle between the Government of Mexico and the Catholic Church, but has not been advised of any developments in Mexico which would justify American intervention, as suggested yesterday by the Supreme Council of the Knights of Columbus at its convention in Philadelphia. The President's policy in the struggle is hands off.

Since coming here the President has not been in touch with the State Department, and, has not been informed of any violation of treaty rights or of violations to American citizens or property rights which would justify any action by the United States in the present domestic problem in Mexico, a problem which has deeply affected Catholics and others in this country.

Sitting on the piazza of his old homestead this afternoon after a day devoted to fishing and calls on relatives, Mr. Coolidge gave his views upon foreign questions that have arisen and have become acute since he began his vacation. The fight between the State and Church in Mexico and other matters concerning American rights have formed the subject of an inquiry by President Coolidge in the last two weeks. He has kept in close touch with reports from Mexico, but it was said here authoritatively that nothing had occurred there that would warrant drastic action by this Government.

No Violence Reported to Him.

While President Coolidge may not accept the action of the Mexican Government as one tending to create a friendly sentiment in the United States, because of the religious issue involved, he has not received any reports of violence against Americans there as the result of the contest. However, he has decided that American rights must be rigidly upheld. The President will act on the protests of the Knights of Columbus and other organizations only if American rights or American property are violated as a result of the conflict.

The Administration policy toward Mexico, which has been one of patience respecting the land and oil laws, would be no more aggressive than at present, it was made clear here today, if treaty rights or the rights of American citizens in that country are violated. President Coolidge is anxious to help that Government, as evidenced in the negotiations on the land and oil troubles and his refusal to lift the arms embargo while the conflict between Church and State was in progress. His patience, it was apparent today, might become exhausted if American rights are not upheld in the present situation.

Concerned with foreign relations as deeply as with domestic affairs, President Coolidge reasserted today the American position in regard to Soviet Russia, as the result of a report that the Soviet Government desires to settle the Russian debt to the United States. He holds that all that the present régime in Russia had to do toward that end was to revoke the ordinance by which it repudiated its debt to the United States. He had not heard that this had been done or that the Soviet Government desired to send agents here to confer on its debt settlement.

Tilson Presents Political Affairs.

President Coolidge had the political situation presented to him in detail today by Representative Tilson of Connecticut, the Republican House leader, who will be in charge of headquarters in New York for the Republican Senate and House campaigns. Offices there will be opened on Aug. 15. Stopping off on his way to his Summer home at Lake Sunapee, Mr. Tilson, accompanied by Mrs. Tilson, had luncheon with the President and Mrs. Coolidge. He told the President that conditions were improving steadily for the Republican Party and that there no longer appeared to be any doubt of Republican control of the next Senate. The Republican majority in the House will be larger, he believed, because of the return of the Farmer-Labor Party voters to the Republican Party in the West.

Mr. Tilson holds that the House majority will be larger, but may be more Independent, due to farm relief agitation. He is hopeful that if conditions do not improve this Fall there will be some agreement among the party leaders in the East and West

FIVE WARRANTS OUT IN HALL-MILLS CASE, BUT ARE NOT SERVED

SIX ARE QUESTIONED AGAIN

Rector's Intrigue Was Known to Many, Maid Says—Denies Call to Mrs. Hall on Murder Night.

HURRY IN BURIAL ALLEGED

Dr. Long Declares Undertaker Seemed in Desperate Rush—Mrs. Riehl Gets Permit to Leave State.

Six witnesses told Assistant Attorney General Alexander Simpson yesterday what they knew about the Hall-Mills case, and the prosecutor and the State troopers, finally in agreement on this phase of the revived investigation, reported that five warrants had been obtained, but would be held unserved.

The examination of the witnesses was conducted at Somerville, N. J. The stories heard included that of Barbara Tough, former maid in the Hall household. She denied that she telephoned to Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, now at liberty in $15,000 bail charged with the slaying of her husband, the Rev. Dr. Edward W. Hall, and Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills shortly before the clergyman and his choir leader were shot to death four years ago near New Brunswick, N. J.

Tells of Gossip in Parish.

The former servant, however, did add to the voluminous history of the case. She told Senator Simpson, according to his version of her narrative, that the intimacy of Mrs. Mills and the rector was "common knowledge" among his parishioners—a fact that all of those who were questioned have denied. Miss Tough, a slow-spoken but emphatic Scotswoman, doubted whether Mrs. Hall knew about it.

The other witnesses examined were Dr. William H. Long, Somerset County physician; Mrs. Maria Gildea, who was cook for the slain clergyman; Peter Tumulty, gardener-chauffeur for the Hall family; Mrs. Minna Clarke, organist of Dr. Hall's church, who was erroneously reported "missing," and Raymond Schneider, a youth, who found the bodies and who was sentenced to the Rahway Reformatory after he had falsely charged a New Brunswick youth, Clifford Hayes, with the double murder.

The warrants included one for Ralph V. Gorsline, vestryman of the Church of St. John the Evangelist. All the warrants were merely for material witnesses except Gorsline's. This warrant charged him as an "accessory after the fact." The documents were obtained, it was explained, for service only if the persons named showed a disposition to leave the State. None of the witnesses has shown any such disposition.

Others Named in Warrants.

Others named in the warrants were Mrs. Nellie Lo Russell, negress, who discredited the story of the State's chief witness to date, Mrs. Jane Gibson, the "pig woman"; Barbara Tough, Tumulty and Mrs. Gildea. It was made clear that nobody would be arrested and that the issuance of the warrants was merely a precautionary step.

The Assistant Attorney General motored from his office in Jersey City to the State Troopers' headquarters in Main Street, Somerville, at noon. He left after he had received a telephone call informing him that troopers had brought in several witnesses he desired to question. Miss Tough came to the headquarters voluntarily, and so did Mrs. Clarke. The latter explained that she had shuttered her home in New Brunswick in order to shield herself against intrusion, and that she had never been "missing."

The questioning of the witnesses lasted from about 2 o'clock until 7 o'clock last night. Mrs. Gildea, Schneider and Tumulty were the last witnesses to be questioned, the examination in their case being conducted by Major Mark O. Kimberling and Captain John J. Lamb, the prosecutor having returned to Jersey City. In his absence the State Troopers declined to give out the substance of what Mrs. Gildea, Schneider and the chauffeur had to offer.

Simpson Quotes Witnesses.

In substance, Senator Simpson gave as the examination of Miss Tough,

American Girl Rescues Another At Lausanne, but Refuses Name

GENEVA, Aug. 6.—A young American girl on a holiday was walking alone along the shore of Lac de Joux, near Lausanne, yesterday, when she saw a small boat containing a young man and a girl overturn.

The man, who could not swim, was hanging to the keel, shouting for help, but the girl had disappeared in the water. Without hesitating, the American girl swam out to the spot and brought the girl to the shore, where she soon recovered, while a man in a boat rescued the other victim.

The American girl when asked for her name said that it did not matter. The plucky, modest girl then smilingly nodded good-bye to a small crowd and walked away amidst the cheers of "Bravo, l'Americaine."

LONG CHASE ABROAD LANDS BANK THIEVES

SHOE TREES ARE SOLE CLUE

Reveal Names of Fugitives Who Are Brought Back on Liner—Pair to Be Sent to Coast.

With the arrival here yesterday of the Berengaria two young Poles ended a ten months' holiday at the expense of a couple of San Francisco banks and there was brought to a close a true detective story containing elements such as movies are made of and emphasizing the relentless persistence of surety company investigators.

The young men, brothers, are charged with having stolen $109,000 in securities. They are Ludwig and Julius Busch, respectively 33 and 29 years old, and they came to this country in 1924. But for a pair of shoe trees—articles which are not known ever to have figured prominently in any detective story—the two would still be at liberty.

The men were traced and brought back to this country by Samuel MacCubbin, head of the investigation and claims department of the Fidelity and Deposit Company of Baltimore, which has an office in this city at 55 Liberty Street, and bonds bank employes. The romantic story of the Busch brothers was told yesterday by Vincent Cullen, Vice President of the company, and pieced out by MacCubbin, the detective, when the ship arrived.

Both Got Bank Jobs.

Coming to the land of the free in search of riches, the two young men arrived in San Francisco in July, 1924, and one, Julius, went to work for the Bank of Italy, while Ludwig got a job with the Anglo-California Trust Company. Neither was bonded individually, but each bank carried a blanket policy with the Fidelity and Deposit Company covering defalcations.

Suddenly, in October, 1925, both young men disappeared. At the time not much was thought of their going, but when a check of their books was made in January it was found that securities valued at about $109,000 had disappeared from the Bank of Italy. Investigation disclosed that one brother, apparently, had taken the securities, disposing of them through the brother employed in the other bank.

The San Francisco police could find no trace of the two, but did find that the Buschs had abandoned certain belongings in their lodgings at 1,927 Jackson Street. From all articles of clothing and everything else, however, marks of possible identification had been carefully removed.

MacCubbin started on the case in March, the fugitives having a lead on him then of five and a half months. Diligent work, according to Mr. Cullen, resulted in MacCubbin's finding that at one time one of the men had shipped some baggage to Montreal. So MacCubbin went to Montreal. There, according to Mr. Cullen, the trail was completely lost, MacCubbin, even with the aid of the Montreal police, being unable to find any trace of the two men. MacCubbin even went to the extent of poring over hotel registers for many months back, but to no purpose. So he returned to San Francisco.

The Telltale Shoe Trees.

Going thoroughly through the effects of the two men again, MacCubbin made a very careful examination of

"The Eel," Noted Paris Criminal, Escapes By Underground Tunnels, Posing as Inspector

PARIS, Aug. 6.—In the case of Georges Reme, known as "The Eel," it seems that something like a "master criminal" really does exist.

Reme is wanted for numerous crimes and felonies and may be characterized as a "con man," his career so far being free from murder or common thieving. Two days ago he was brought to the Palais de Justice in Paris in a Black Maria, similar to that from which the fictional Arsene Lupin escaped by lifting the floor boards.

Reme's method was not so crude. He reached the Palais de Justice with a dozen other offenders, but instead of sitting on the bench to which they were conducted in an antechamber, he went to the bench where there were a number of juvenile delinquents waiting to be questioned.

When one of these was called Reme took him by the arm, having concealed his hat under the bench, and marched him out of the room.

Then taking a number of typewritten letters from his pocket, he went ahead into the underground passage which leads from the Juvenile Court and walked coolly to the end of the tunnel, where a policeman challenged him. "I am a secret service inspector," he said, without batting an eyelash, and with a sure step and apparently complete familiarity with his surroundings he passed through the intricate maze of hallways to the outer door, where he passed the guard and went to the street.

Then his trail was lost, but a black automobile which had been noticed hovering about was discovered to have disappeared.

KEHOE FOUND GUILTY OF MILK CONSPIRACY; IS LOCKED IN TOMBS

Jury Out 6 Hours, 12 Minutes; Judge Refuses to Continue Defendant's $10,000 Bail.

AUG. 12 SET FOR SENTENCE

Maximum Penalty Three Years' Imprisonment, Together With $500 Fine.

LAWYER PROMISES APPEALS

Mrs. Kehoe Hysterical at Verdict—Conviction a Warning, Health Commissioner Says.

Three weeks to a day after he had been placed on trial, William H. Kehoe, formerly Assistant Corporation Counsel, was found guilty last night of conspiracy in the bootleg cream graft scandal. After deliberating six hours and twelve minutes, the jury returned its verdict before Judge Max S. Levine in General Sessions at 10:07 P. M.

Kehoe was taken to the Tombs and locked in a cell after the Court had denied the application of Michael M. Edelstein, his counsel, for the continuance of the $10,000 bail under which he has been at liberty since his indictment. Aug. 12 was named as the date for his sentence.

Kehoe and his wife were chatting together in the corridor outside the court room when word was received that the jury was ready to report. Both had looked for a disagreement because of the length of time which the jury had been out. Mrs. Kehoe remained outside as her husband entered and stood at the bar. He gave a glance of swift appraisement at the faces of the jurymen as they filed in and his own face went white.

When the verdict was announced Kehoe leaned heavily forward on the railing with both hands clutching it. He swayed slightly and sought to steady himself. His pedigree was given in a voice little above a whisper. He was 40 years old, he said; born in the United States, lived at 191st Street and Woodall Avenue, Hollis, Queens; was a lawyer, married and of temperate habits.

Wife Informed of Verdict.

A relative who was seated near the door tiptoed out of the court room and approached Mrs. Kehoe, who had been in daily attendance at the trial. When informed of the verdict Mrs. Kehoe became hysterical and her cries could be heard through the building. She was calmed somewhat later and left the building without seeing her husband before he was taken to the Tombs.

After the verdict had been rendered Edward L. Purves of 54 West 106th Street, Juror No. 9, thanked Judge Levine in behalf of the jury for the consideration shown by the Court.

Kehoe was convicted of conspiracy to do an act injurious to the public health, or for the perversion or obstruction of justice, or of the due administration of the laws. It is a misdemeanor punishable by an indeterminate sentence in the penitentiary, the maximum of which is three years, or by a fine of $500, or both.

Mr. Edelstein said no move could be made to obtain Kehoe's release until after his sentence was pronounced. A certificate of reasonable doubt will then be sought and an attempt made to obtain his admission to bail. The case will be fought through the highest courts, Mr. Edelstein said.

Warning, Says Harris.

In commenting on the result of the trial last night Dr. Louis I. Harris, Health Commissioner, said:

"The hands of the guardians of the lives of the children, the sick and all others in the community have been strengthened by this verdict, and it may properly be interpreted as the utterance of a warning by representatives of the citizens of the community that the people of this city will not tolerate a corrupt act that endangers the welfare of any of our people.

"If Mr. Pecora's address to the jury and his appeal for the protection of the public health were studied by every citizen, it would create a sentiment that would insure against a repetition of the scandalous conditions revealed at this trial. Mr. Pecora's address was a brilliant presentation of the basis of public health service."

It was 3:55 P. M. when Judge Levine finished his charge and the jury retired. Kehoe, his coat removed because of the heat, paced back and forth in the gallery about the central rotunda of the Criminal Courts Building, Mrs. Kehoe clinging to his arm.

At the end of three hours it became apparent that there was a division in the jury. Judge Levine, at 7:15 o'clock, ordered a recess until 8:30 and the jurymen had dinner. They returned at 8:40 o'clock. Up to that time they had asked for no instructions.

Pecora Sums Up.

Assistant District Attorney Ferdinand Pecora began his summing up when court opened. He charged that Kehoe was the real ringleader in the bootleg milk graft. He said the respondent had conspired illegally with Samuel Doner, wholesale cream dealer, to levy tribute of $1 on every can of bootleg cream which the latter brought into the city from uninspected sources and to furnish protection for the illicit traffic.

"Kehoe cared more for the $1 a can he collected on bootleg cream brought in by Doner than he did for the lives of the men, women and children of New York City," Mr. Pecora said.

Mr. Pecora told the jury that he had no apology to make for the character of Doner or Harry Danziger, his chief witnesses.

GERTRUDE EDERLE SWIMS THE CHANNEL IN RECORD TIME OF 14 HOURS 31 MINUTES; AMERICAN IS FIRST WOMAN TO CROSS

"It Had to Be Done, I Did It," Says Miss Ederle; Twice Spurned Burgess's Advice to Give Up

By ALEC RUTHERFORD, British Expert on Channel Swimming.

DOVER, England, Aug. 6.—During the wait on the tug in Dover Harbor and the journey to the hotel after the Channel triumph, I had an opportunity of chatting with Miss Ederle, her father and the rest of the party. Miss Ederle said:

"I just knew if it could be done, it had to be done, and I did it."

Her father said he was never sure until the finish. He was very proud that his daughter had performed the feat, whose achievement he attributed largely to her splendid persistence.

Burgess told me that twice during the swim he wanted Miss Ederle to come out of the water—the first time at noon and the second time at 6 o'clock. It was her father and sister who would not let her come out, he said.

Anyway, Gertrude herself refused and repeatedly declared she had no intention of giving up. She said:

"I am doing it for mummy."

This was in reference to a series of wireless messages urging her to go on sent by her mother in New York during the swim. They were read to Gertrude while she was in the water.

I gather that Gertrude achieved her victory by a margin of only ten minutes. Had she not reached the favorable flood tide when she did she could never have got over.

During the latter half of the swim an amusing dialogue took place between "Pop" Ederle and his daughter. "Pop" continually roared over the side of the boat:

"Trudie, don't forget you won't get that roadster unless you get over."

Gertrude always responded:

"Pop, I will have that roadster."

Aboard the tug on the way back to Dover she constantly reminded her father that the roadster was to be got immediately. After her bath at the hotel when I asked what she was going to do next, she said:

"I shall go to bed and sleep all day. I need it. I am so tired."

I understand she is to return to France tomorrow, then go on to Germany to see her father's people and then go back to Paris to buy some "nice clothes" and presents for "Mum."

She will return to America on the Berengaria on Aug. 21.

MAYOR PICKS KELBY FOR HEALTH INQUIRY

TO TAKE UP MILK GRAFT

Centralization of Inquiry in All Boroughs Planned to Help in Prosecutions.

Mayor Walker authorized yesterday the announcement that Charles H. Kelby, former Justice of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court, Second Department, had accepted appointment as special counsel to take charge of the investigation into the affairs of the Board of Health.

The announcement was made by Charles F. Kerrigan, assistant to the Mayor, after a talk over the telephone with Mayor Walker at Dixville Notch, N. H. Judge Kelby, it was learned, will have charge of a general investigation of conditions in the Health Department and will carry on in each of the five boroughs the inquiry into milk graft, which has already resulted in several indictments, with a view to submitting evidence to the District Attorneys in the several counties.

Judge Kelby has had several conferences with Health Commissioner Louis I. Harris and said he considered it in the public interest to have the whole situation in the Health Department thoroughly investigated and submitted to the prosecuting authorities for action.

The appointment of Judge Kelby, who is a Republican and a law associate of former Controller Charles L. Craig, with offices at 120 Broadway, was the city administration's answer to the demand of the Citizens Union and others, for an investigation of the milk situation by the Attorney General on the ground that an attempt was being made to protect those higher up in milk graft. Governor Smith, it has been said, has been reluctant to put the investigation into the hands of Attorney General Albert Ottinger, a Republican and a candidate for the Republican nomination for Governor, and believes that this would not be the best way to take politics out of the inquiry.

Centralizes the Inquiry.

Mayor Walker, it was said, denied that the centralization of the investigation, which was the chief argument advanced in support of an investigation by the Attorney General, would be obtained by the appointment of Judge Kelby.

The announcement of the selection of Judge Kelby, who will rank as a special aid to the Corporation Counsel, as made at the Mayor's office, read:

"Mayor Walker and Commissioner Harris have agreed that the information collected by the Health Commissioner should be reviewed by a lawyer of high standing who would be able to sift the evidence and prepare cases for prosecution by the District Attorneys in the five counties of the City of New York. Judge Kelby has been assured of the cooperation of all of the District Attorneys in Manhattan, Bronx, Brooklyn, Queens and Richmond.

"Working with Commissioner Harris, it is felt special counsel will be able to develop cases, reinforce those where there are missing links in the evidence

HUNT JERSEY WOODS FOR ROVING LEOPARD

DOGS PUT ON ITS TRAIL

Animal Reported Seen Twice, but It Eludes Hunters—Reward for Capture Raised to $500.

Special to The New York Times.

RED BANK, N. J., Aug. 6.—In the glare of automobile headlights a posse of State troopers, Monmouth County detectives and farmers, armed with high power rifles and pistols, scoured the woodland coverts on and near the Brookdale farm of Lewis S. Thompson near Lincroft until midnight tonight for the full-grown Indian leopard that escaped yesterday from Oliver W. Holton's Twinbrook zoo at Middletown.

With half a dozen dogs trying to pick up the trail, the posse explored the woods and brush land, using flashlights when beyond the beams of the automobile lights. But when the search was given up at midnight the leopard was still at large. It was said that the hunt would be resumed and continued until the animal was found.

Mr. Holton, who offered a reward of $100 yesterday for the capture of the animal dead or alive, increased the offer today to $500, and it was agreed that no effort was to be made to capture the leopard alive, due to a fear that some one might be injured or killed.

The reward and the fear that spread over the countryside that the roving animal might attack a child brought scores of volunteers to the hunt. The search was centered around the Brookdale farm during the day after Jeremiah Vaughan, a watchman at the Harry Payne Whitney breeding farm, reported that he believed he had seen the leopard fleeing from a dog near a barn early in the morning. Abram Lower, superintendent of Mr. Holton's zoo, hurried to the farm and positively identified tracks in a near-by cornfield and a clump of woods as those of the fugitive animal.

Toward sundown the posse closed in on the clump of woods, believing the leopard was cornered there. As the circle of men became smaller the tension increased and a sudden burst of shots in the wood sent all members of the posse in that direction. They were keenly disappointed to find the shots had been fired by jokers in the posse.

The reported presence of the leopard near the Whitney farm caused persons in charge there to establish a guard to protect 200 blooded horses and a score of foals. Farmers in the neighborhood are apprehensive also of their stock, but even more so of their children.

Margaret Ellison, eight-year-old daughter of a farmer on the Nut Swamp Road, was believed to have seen the animal last night near her home. It was skulking along the edge of a wood.

The girl ran home, telling of the "big white dog with yellow spots on it" that she had seen. Before her father reached the spot the animal had disappeared.

Late in the afternoon Superintendent Lower expressed the belief that the leopard was cornered and would be brought down within a short time.

"We found footmarks along the edge of the cornfield and around rabbit burrows," he said. "We traced them into the woods. We failed to find any tracks leading from the woods and I think the leopard is in there and that we have a good chance of getting it tonight."

CONQUERS WIND, RAIN, TIDE

BONFIRES LIGHT LAST DASH

Searchlights Also Sweep From Shore as New York Girl Comes In With Strokes Still Strong.

By T. R. YBARRA.

DOVER, Aug. 6.—Gertrude Ederle, the plucky little New York girl, swam across the English Channel today in 14 hours 31 minutes, thus winning not only the honor of being the first woman to accomplish this feat but breaking by a goodly margin the best record made by a male cross-Channel swimmer.

The speediest cross-Channel swim made before today was that of the Italian swimmer, Sebastian Tirabocchi, who swam from France to England in 1923 in 16 hours 23 minutes.

Gertrude Ederle's successful swim came fifty-one years after the Channel was first conquered by an English swimmer, Captain Matthew Webb. In 1911, the Channel was crossed by another Englishman, T. W. Burgess, who now has achieved the added glory of having trained the young American girl and of having guided her today from start to finish of her magnificent swim.

Fought to Reach Favoring Current.

Miss Ederle plunged into the water this morning at 7:09 o'clock at Cape Gris-Nez, France. She landed at Kingsdown, near Deal, England, at 9:40 o'clock this evening. For three desperate hours she fought the ebb and flow of the tide, with the British shores looming temptingly before her yet apparently hopelessly out of reach. But she gritted her teeth and stuck to it, putting every ounce of strength and will power into her strokes.

She knew that if she could only stick it out a favorable turn in the tide might let her reach the coveted shore. Instead of making for Shakespeare Cliff or St. Margaret's Bay, as swimmers usually do, Gertrude made toward Deal. And at last the favoring current for which she was praying swept her toward the cliffs of England.

English Cheers Greet Smiling Victor.

Soon after 9 o'clock tonight she was off Kingsdown. Just before 10 o'clock she emerged from the water and walked ashore. Delight at her victory had effaced all memory of the terrible hours through which she had passed.

As she came on to the beach she was happy and smiling. And the crowd who had rushed to Kingsdown from all directions at the news that the game little American was struggling toward the English shore surged around her in mad enthusiasm and sent up cheer after cheer of delirious joy.

Miss Ederle had hardly reached the shore before she was hustled into a rowboat which whisked her to the tug which had accompanied her across the Channel.

During the last few hours of her record-breaking swim, Gertrude Ederle had to buck the wickedest possible combination of obstacles. The sea was rough, the tide was running strongly against her and a stinging spray was hurled into her face as she swam doggedly forward. It was a fine piece of headwork which enabled her to take advantage of the favoring current and reach Kingsdown Beach.

DOVER, Aug. 6.—Gertrude Ederle, the nineteen-year-old New York champion girl swimmer, is one of the pluckiest swimmers that ever attempted the huge task of swimming the English Channel. I watched this pretty, tiny atom of humanity in her red bathing dress and skull cap, with goggles like a motorist's, battle for fourteen hours today against the merciless elements.

At 6:30 this evening she was facing the white cliffs of Dover, only six miles away from England. She was still battling pluckily, refusing to give in, though faced with over two hours of further battle against the cross-tides before the favorable inshore tide set in and gave her the chance to progress toward victory. At that time there was a squally rain and a heavy, powerful, swamping sea against the swimmer.

Miss Ederle entered the Channel at Cape Gris-Nez at 7:08 this morning amid the wild cheers of the Channel swimmers assembled at the training camp there. She was accompanied by MEXICO CITY, Aug. 6.—The deadlock between State and Church remains unbroken and there are no signs, official or otherwise, that a settlement of the controversy, admittedly the most grave in the history of the Catholic Church in Mexico, is in sight.

The Government, with the hand of President Calles at the helm, is not giving an inch, while, on the other side, the heads of the Church, with an exception here and there, are continuing their policy of silence, a silence that is in effect in nearly every State, city and town from the Rio Grande to the Guatemalan border and from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

Outwardly all is calm in Mexico City, and it looks as though the Calles Government has the situation firmly in hand. There are no troops patroling the streets, although they are held in barracks ready to suppress any disorder or effort to defy the regulations governing the Church.

The Venerable Archbishop Mora y del Rio is in seclusion and is reported seriously ill, heartbroken, it is said, because of the straits to which his Church has been reduced in the sunset years of his priesthood.

Next Church Move Kept Secret.

Just what the next move of the Church will be no one in position to speak with authority will indicate. The impression, however, is that whatever is done will be inspired from the Vatican, while the propaganda in foreign lands will be entrusted to the Church organizations in those countries, particularly the National Catholic Welfare Conference in Washington, of which Archbishop Hanna and Father Burke are the spokesmen.

Mexico's thousands of churches are still open, but the priests are absent, and there is no way of identifying them when they appear in public, it being against the law for any preacher, priest or religious teacher to wear in the open clothing or insignia that indicate he is a clergyman or religious teacher.

The same rigid rule applies to nuns, hundreds of whom have crossed the Rio Grande into Texas to wait there in the hope that the day will come when the regulations will be modified to an extent acceptable to the heads of the Catholic Church.

Calles Is Firm in Stand.

But that day, it would seem, is a long way off. Those who know President Calles declare his position is final. The only way by which the Church can ever regain its former position in Mexico, informed Mexicans declare, is through the repeal of the religious sections of the Constitution, which are as drastic almost as the regulations ordering their enforcement.

To date there is no indication of any movement worthy of the name looking to repeal of the religious clauses in the fundamental law.

The President does not mince words in his defense of the position of his Government, and, reading his utterances, one cannot but conclude that, at least in the course of his Presidency, there will be no abatement of the Church rules which he has put in force.

The assertions of the Archbishops and Bishops of Mexico that the law, as enforced, limits the preaching of any religion are, the President declares, plain falsehoods.

Freedom of worship within the churches has not been interfered with, and will not be, argue those who speak for the Calles Administration.

Interest Keen in Our Plans.

On the other hand, the prelates, as well as numerous laymen, insist that a continuance of the regulations can mean but one thing, and that the practical end of the Catholic Church in Mexico.

It is, they say, as Father Burke of the National Catholic Welfare Conference in Washington expressed it, a battle in which the Church is fighting for its very life.

Almost the first question put to an American fresh from the United States on his arrival in Mexico City is, "What is the Government of the United States going to do in the present crisis?"

Deespite statements from the Coolidge Summer home in the Adirondacks, which indicate that the position of the American Government will be one of "hands off" so long as no American citizen is molested and no American property rights interfered with, and that for once in more than a generation the United States will not involve itself in a Mexican situation, it is hard to make the average Mexican understand this, and, for that matter, most American citizens resident in Mexico.

Embargo Expected to Remain.

For instance, THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent was informed today by an American that a note from the State Department is now on the way to Ambassador Sheffield.

There was no basis for this statement except a rumor, yet the man who repeated it was apparently convinced that the report was based on facts.

The general opinion in Mexico is that the friends of the Church in and out of Mexico are anxious for the Washington Government to exert its friendly offices to settle the existing critical situation; that many who oppose the present Mexican Government are harboring the hope that the American embargo against the exportation of arms and munitions into Mexico will be lifted; that pressure to that end is already being exerted in the United States, and that the lifting of the embargo would create a dangerous situation along the Rio Grande and in the land from the border at El Paso to the Pacific.

Because of all this the calm, thinking persons, native as well as foreign, are convinced that so long as the present critical controversy continues the embargo will remain in force.

Boycott Reported General.

Close observers go further and declare that the lifting of the embargo would be considered tantamount to a repudiation of the present Administration and as a signal to the Opposition to go ahead, with the assurance that their belligerency would be recognized.

The dynamite in the embargo matter, said a prominent American, cannot be minimized. He said he was convinced that President Coolidge and Secretary eKllogg understood this.

The boycott declared by Catholics against the buying of luxuries by Church members while the conflict between State and Church continues is being lived up to by a large majority of the Catholics in Mexico, according to a spokesman for the Church.

The boycott is expected to last two or three weeks more. If by then there has been no easing of the situation the Church is expected to decide on its next move. Church supporters declared that the success of the boycott is proved by what they assert is a definite decline in the volume of trade, wholesale and retail, since the Catholic manoeuvre became operative last week.

Most of the wealthy Catholics, it is said, are religiously enforcing the boycott, while the poorer classes are applying it less rigorously.

Bishops Say Church Is Firm.

Outside the Federal District the situation, according to reports, is much the same as in Mexico City. The disorders which marked the first days of the going into effect of the regulations have apparently abated, and silence is again the order of the day.

Just two very brief Church statements have been issued in the past twenty-four hours, one by the Archbishop of Morelos and the other by the Archbishop of Jalisco, in which they announce the success of the boycott in their reespective sees.

Mexico City continues quiet and awaits developments. Sunday may produce demonstrations, both on the part of the supporters of the Church and those of the Administration.

This applies to the whole nation as well as to Mexico City. What happens or does not happen on Sunday, therefore, may indicate to some extent just how serious is the cleavage which has rent the Mexican people into such bitterly contending factions.

Catholics Deplore Priests' Absence.

Although the cathedral and the Sagrario Metropolitano are still closed under orders of the Department of Public Health, which will fumigate the churches to prevent the spreading of diseases, which, it is feared, may have been brought there by the thousands of worshippers during the fortnight before they were closed, all other churches are open for prayer.

But no longer do choir boys sweetly chant as the priests perform their sacred offices. All services requiring the intervention of priests in the churches are ended. The ceremonial part of the Catholic religion, which causes fervor to rise to a high decree, is absent. The silent prayers give no opportunity for the congregation to join in the responses and the absence of the spiritual directors from their accustomed places at the altar has caused a heavy pall of gloom to settle over the churches.

Catholics, although they say they feel that Holy Church is still watching over them, admit that something seems missing and their religion does not seem the same now that it is purely personal.

Rites Sought for Dying Mother.

A case typical of many that have been arising continually since the priests abandoned the churches developed today at the home of Bishop Pascual Diaz of the State of Tabasco, now Secretary of the Episcopate, when he received a telephone call from a woman who was anxiously seeking a priest to baptize a newly born child and anoint the dying mother.

The woman stated that her servant had given birth to a child and was in a dying condition. As a good Catholic she was anxious to have the child baptized and the mother receive the last rites of the Church, but there were no priests in the churches and she did not know where to find one.

Bishop Diaz talked to the woman, and giving her a telephone number told her that if a priest could not be found there to advise him at once and he himself would immediately visit the woman.

Referring to the incident Bishop Diaz stated that although the present laws forbade priests giving the last rites or holding any service of any nature in public places, he personally was ready at all times to attend to any one in danger of death, either in the streets or elsewhere.

Referring to rumors of mediation, Bishop Diaz stated that he had heard that a group of diplomats was trying to see President Calles but so far had not been received.

Diaz Reiterates Peace Stand.

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 6 (AP).—That the Catholic authorities are resolute in their opposition to violence in connection with the religious situation was reiterated to The Associated Press today by Bishop Diaz, Secretary of the Mexican Episcopate.

"I am praying to God with all my soul," he said, "to avoid armed conflicts, which would be detrimental. There are many ambitious individuals agitating at the present time, men who dislike the Government and would avail themselves of an opportunity to unloose their passions under the religious banner.

"Besides being ambitious, the men heading or participating in a revolt may, once gaining the victory, easily forget their promises and use the opportunity to attain their own ends, the Church merely being used by them as an instrument."

About a dozen persons have been killed in recent clashes in various parts of the republic, according to reports received by the Episcopate. Five Catholics and several soldiers, it is reported, were killed at Guadalajara on Tuesday in a battle in front of a church which Federal troops were occupying, and two were killed and another wounded outside the Church of Jesus at Guadalajara in a clash between Catholics and police.

At Tlajomulco there was a similar clash, in which several persons were killed, but no details are given. In Covula, it is reported, a crowd killed the District Judge who was attempting to make an inventory of the treasures of the Paris Church.

Government agents who recently took charge of the Episcopal Church of San Jose de Gracia because the Mexican rector failed to register with the municipal authorities have returned the church to the rector. The church is owned by the Protestant Episcopal Church of the United States.

General Anaya, military commandant in Puebla, reports that Father Juan Marin notified the authorities of his readiness to adhere to the Government's religious regulations and register with the municipal authorities.

Special dispatches from Pachuca report that one priest has announced his acceptance of the regulations and that four others are expected to accept.

A group of American educators and religious, business and professional men, headed by Dr. Alva W. Taylor, National Executive of the Social Service Commission of the Church of the Disciples, yesterday called at the Catholic Episcopate and interviewed Bishop Diaz, the Secretary.

The Bishop told the visitors that the clergy in Mexico had been made to appear rebellious merely because they were attempting to fulfill certain duties of conscience. Mgr. Diaz denied that the Catholic clergy was opposing the laws of the country. He said that on the contrary, they were attempting to guard the Church's divine laws, which must be preserved at all costs.

DISPUTES METHODIST BISHOP.

Catholic Editor Holds Miller Erred in Denying Mexican Persecution.

CHICAGO, Aug. 6 (AP).—The Right Rev. Thomas Shannon, editor of The New World, official publication of the Catholic Archdiocese of Chicago, today declared that there was only a slight difference between events in Russia and Mexico.

Replying to Bishop G. A. Miller of the Mexico City area of the Methodist Episcopal Church, who asserted in a recent statement that there was no persecution of Catholics in Mexico, Mgr. Shannon said that Bishop Miller's comment was suggestive of a similar view taken by Bishop Blake concerning Russia.

"The best demonstration of this is found in the fact that when the Soviet Ambassador arrived in Mexico City President Calles proclaimed a national holiday," said Mgr. Shannon.

"In answering Bishop Miller let me put it briefly. If the word 'Methodist' should be substituted for the word 'Catholic' and the Methodist Church should be deprived of the slightest pretense for existing; if all its property were confiscated, and if, in addition, it were made incapable of possessing or holding any property; if the ministers of the Methodist Church were deprived of every vestige of citizenship; if, in addition, they would have to receive their commissions for preaching and administering of the sacraments from the State, is it putting too fine a point on the matter to say the Methodist Church was being persecuted?

"Let us suppose the Methodist Church had in Mexico 5,000 deaconesses carrying on works of mercy and charity. Let us suppose further that many of these good women had spent forty and fifty years of their lives in this consecrated work and were now turned out on the streets to shift as best they might in helpless old age. Would it be stressing a point too far to say the Methodist Church was suffering persecution?"

CHARGES DENIAL OF RIGHTS.

Catholic Welfare Official Says Mexico Robs Clergy of Citizenship.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6 (AP).—Catholic Bishops and priests in Mexico are demanding only the rights guaranteed to Mexicans und re the national constitution of that country, Father John J. Burke, Secretary of the National Catholic Welfare Conference, said in a statement today.

Referring to reports that the Bishops had appealed to President Calles for restoration of "their citizenship," Father Burke said the reason was apparent, adding:

"What are the civic rights denied to Mexican Bishops and priests? They are denied the liberty of speech and press, of assembly and petition, equality before the law and trial by jury, the right to property either as individuals or in corporation, the right to vote and hold office.

"They are denied the right to exercise their profession, excepting under sufferance and by Executive clemency of not only Federal officers, but of every village authority.

"The civil authority usurps the right to determine the qualifications to be required of one entering the ministry.

"By confiscating all buildings used as churches, schools, benevolent institutions, parish rectories, &c., and denying the right to acquire others, it reduces the exercise of the religious ministry to absolute dependence upon the clemency of the Federal and village officials and subjects the minister to the tyranny of every village authority in Mexico."

DECLARES MEXICO USURPER.

Vatican Organ Holds Civil Power Invades Church's Own Domain.

ROME, Aug. 6 (AP).—The Mexican Government's ecclesiastical legislation amounts to "real and true substitution of civil power for that of the Church," says the Osservatore Romano, the organ of the Vatican, commenting on the text of Article 130 of the Mexican Constitution of 1917, dealing with religious affairs, which it prints today.

"This article shows, first, that provincial legislative bodies are empowered to determine the maximum number of priests able to exercise their sacred ministry; second, that priests are obliged to register themselves with the municipal authorities in order to permit the civil authorities to decide which of those registered is to be permitted to carry out his functions, and, third, that a person appointed to each church, together with ten other persons, is required to notify the municipal authorities concerning the ecclesiastic exercising his ministry in the church and changes in such ecclesiastics," the paper says.

MEXICAN CONSUL SEES NO CHURCH STRUGGLE

M. G. Prieto Says Here There Is No Persecution and Catholics May Reopen Churches.

The Mexican situation as it is reflected in religious centres here has settled down to a position of watchful waiting, while the declaration of Manuel G. Prieto, Mexican Consul in New York that there is no controversy sums up the position of Mexican officials in this city. Daily bulletins at the Consulate offices, 225 West Thirty-fourth Street, continue to report quiet in the southern republic.

"There is no controversy at all," Mr. Prieto declared, "in fact, there is too much fuss made in this country about the situation. After nine years the Mexican Government is prepared to enforce its laws and the Church chooses to rebel.

"The Catholic officials will not obey the law. They close their churches. All right, that is their business; the Government will not reopen them, but if the Catholics want to open them again, they can.

"There is no religious persecution. With almost the entire country Catholic, how can any one believe we are persecuting them? That is the situation and meanwhile the Government is continuing quietly along. Business is good. The embargo is not having any bad effect."

AMERICA PROTESTS AGAIN TO MEXICO

Washington Note Challenges Regulations to Enforce Oil and Alien Land Laws.

TEXT NOT YET GIVEN OUT

But It Is Believed That the Retroactive Point in Dispute Will Be Stressed Anew.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—A new note challenging the regulations issued under the recently enacted Mexican petroleum and alien land laws has been sent to the Mexican Government for delivery through Ambassador Sheffield. It is a long document taking up the issue where it was left off last Spring, when only the land law regulations had been issued and the petroleum law regulations were yet to be promulgated.

The general position taken by the American Government in its communication is identical with the policy that has been observed throughout the long controversy in which it insisted that both the new laws—those dealing with American land and oil rights—failed by far to give full recognition to rights lawfully acquired prior to the adoption of the present Mexican Constitution, when Mexican law expressly provided that the owner of surface lands owned also the subsoil rights of petroleum and permitted the legal acquisition also of land by aliens.

In the correspondence of last Winter and early Spring, the diplomatic controversy reached the point where the hope was expressed and what appeared to be some assurance given that when the regulations promulgated under both laws were put into effect they would be found to be neither retractive confiscatory nor violative of American rights legally acquired in Mexico.

American officials were quite hopeful on April 1 that the new laws would be so carried out as to protect American interests without giving either law a retroactive or confiscatory application and that while the laws on their face did not seem to American officials subject to interpretation as affording such protection the regulations issued under that legislation would do so.

American Hopes Not Fulfilled.

There the matter rested pending issuance of the new petroleum regulations and study of the actual procedure under the alien land regulations. That procedure has not been in accord with this Government's hopes in the matter of obtaining protection of valid American rights in Mexico and the whole issue is believed to be handled in direct and straightforward fashion in the new note delivered by Ambassador Sheffield.

The text of the American note has not been made public and no agreement reached with the Calles Government for its release to the press. The State Department tonight declined to comment on the note or the situation which it covers.

In view of the reticence of officials, it was impossible to ascertain whether the note is limited in terms to a vigorous presentation of the American Government's objections to certain of the regulations which are viewed as failing to give full recognition to rights lawfully acquired by American citizens or whether it goes a step beyond the statement of this Government's views.

It is considered significant that the note was timed for delivery almost on the eve of the departure of Ambassador Sheffield from the Mexican capital for the United States. The Ambassador has been granted leave of absence and will leave Mexico City for New York on Aug. 13 and will probably come via Vera Cruz and steamer.

During the Ambassador's absence the embassy will be in charge of a Chargé d'Affaires, but whether the Ambassador will ever return is a matter of some speculation, despite the fact that he will come on leave of absence, which would presuppose his return to his post.

Delivery of the American note, with a strong statement of this Government's attitude at this particular juncture, will probably not be pleasing to the Calles Government, and serves to lend additional importance to a sentence in the statement of July 30, the day before the new religious regulations went into effect and the struggle between the Catholic Church and the Mexican Government entered its present crucial phase.

Situation Foreseen by Cales.

After charging that the Catholic clergy in Mexico "threw its challenge" to the Government of Mexico "precisely at the most difficult moment of my Administration," President Calles in his July 30 statement asserted:

"This challenge was made at a time when questions were arising of an international character, which were defining whether Mexico was a sovereign country or not."

While President Calles did not enter into details as to the inner meaning of this sentence, it is believed he had in mind the situation that was developing as a result of Ambassador Sheffield's objection to various of the oil and alien land regulations.

Whenever the point was raised by the Calles Government that its sovereignty was being challenged by the United States American officials always entered a denial. The position of the American Government, Secretary Kellogg several times emphasized, has been that the so-called land laws contain provisions plainly retroactive and confiscatory in their effect upon property rights of American citizens in Mexico under prior existing Mexican laws.

It was insisted by Secretary Kellogg that this did not in any sense question Mexico's sovereignty right to legislate on her own domestic concerns.

Nathalia Crane, 13, to Publish New Poems; Hits at Critics Who Questioned Her Work

Nathalia Crane, the fluffy-haired, naive little Brooklyn girl, now 13 years old, whose first book of poems, glorifying the red-haired janitor's boy, was published three years ago, is about to put her fourth book in print. The title of the new volume will be "The Singing Crow," and it is scheduled to be brought out Sept. 1, by Thomas Seltzer. Announcement of the forthcoming book was made last night by the girl's father, Clarence P. Crane, of 145 Henry Street, Brooklyn.

In the new volume Nathalia takes one departure at least from the field of colorful idyls in which she previously has placed her work and fights back at those who have questioned the genuineness of her authorship.

Last Winter a spirited controversy, in which her father took part eventually, arose between several authorities on literature as to whether Nathalia actually was the writer of the poems attributed to her. The technique and erudition displayed in them caused them to be seriously challenged. On one side Edwin Markham asserted that "unquestionably the whole thing is a genial hoax," while on the other hand Louis Untermeyer, also a poet of high rank, asserted equally strongly his faith that the poems were the work of Nathalia.

One psychoanalyst dissected some of her poems and found in them, he said, strong evidence that they were the product of the father's psychology and not the girl's. Efforts were made to have the girl examined by competent psychologists, but her father refused to permit this.

The hyrax, it has no tail;
No chimney, the house of the snail.

He has done it these 10,000 years,
With a laugh all his own, half gurgle, half groan,
And an eye for the Freudian seers.

He sidles because of a strain
Involving the crimp in the hyena's limp
That the Freudians can never explain.

The eyeball still sleeps in the mole,
But back of the beast is standing his priest,
The symbol that sanctions each role.

Nathalia's own phrase for psychoanalysts, her father said last night, is "mental spies." She got the idea of using the hyena as a means to express her feelings about psychoanalysts in a story book of animal fables. The hyena's limp was an apparent imperfection, but only an apparent one.

The chief poem in the new book, from which the book takes its name, describes the adventures of a young crow, whose beak is shot off by a young Indian with an arrow. The bird learns to sing and thus transforms his wound into a glorious gift.

PEAY FAR IN LEAD IN TENNESSEE PRIMARY

But McAllister's Backers Insist He Has Won the Nomination for Governor.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 6 (AP).—Unofficial returns tonight from 1,842 of the 2,195 precincts in Tennessee showed Governor Austin Peay, seeking the Democratic Gubernatorial nomination, holding a lead of nearly 5,000 votes over Hill McAllister, State Treasurer, in yesterday's state-wide primary. He had 87,653 votes and McAllister 82,687.

Headquarters of both candidates, however, issued equally optimistic statements tonight. Campaign managers for Mr. McAllister insisted that the final check would give him victory, while Peay headquarters declared the Governor had safely landed the nomination.

The Democrats will be opposed by Walter White, Republican nominee, who had no contest in the primary.

On the face of unofficial returns Finis J. Garrett, minority House leader, was renominated in the Democratic Congressional primary in the Ninth District, and B. Carroll Reese won the Republican nomination in the First District, the only two Congressional contests.

Dr. John R. Neal, senior counsel for John T. Scopes in the evolution trial at Dayton, and Judge John T. Raulston, Fundamentalist and presiding Judge at the Scopes trial, were among the defeated candidates. Dr. Neal was a candidate for the Democratic nomination for the Governorship, but was far outdistanced by his two opponents. Returns tonight accounted for only 1,224 votes polled for him. Judge Raulston, Republican, was defeated for the judicial election in the Eighteenth District by Leslie R. Duir of Jasper, Tenn.

so far collected by Dr. Harris, and determine the location of the crime, if any has been committed, so that there will be no conflict of jurisdiction between counties and speedy trials may result.

Expect Rapid Progress.

"By thus centralizing in the hands of a disinterested and eminent counsel the investigation under the broad powers vested by law in the Commissioner of Health the Mayor believes that much more rapid progress can be made in the investigation and more satisfactory results obtained in cleaning out the corruption in the Health Department.

"Judge Kelby has been assured of a free hand and of whatever assistance he may require in conducting the investigation."

Judge Kelby called at City Hall late in the afternoon and conferred with Health Commissioner Harris and Mr. Kerrigan. He had nothing to say concerning the investigation, except that he would begin work at once.

IOWA REPUBLICANS NOMINATE STEWART

DEMOCRATS MAY NOT ACT

Leaders Expected to Centre Their Fight on Electing Porter for the Long Term.

Special to The New York Times.

DES MOINES, Iowa, Aug. 6.—David Stewart of Sioux City, an attorney and one of the managers for Senator Albert B. Cummins in the June primary campaign, was nominated late today by Iowa Republicans to fill the rest of Senator Cummins's term, which will expire next March.

Mr. Stewart received 884 votes on the third formal ballot, 692 being necessary to win the nomination. Until the Cummins forces united on the Sioux City attorney on this ballot, Smith W. Brookhart, Republican insurgent, who defeated Senator Cummins for renomination in the June primary, had led the voting, but was far short of the nominating majority with 372 votes.

Failing to agree on former Judge Charles Bradshaw of Des Moines or Burton Sweet, former Representative and twice an opponent of Brookhart in primary elections, the Cummins supporters and others of the Old Guard swung their support to Stewart after the Polk County representatives, Bradshaw's home delegation, turned to the Sioux City attorney.

Mr. Stewart, who is comparatively unknown to the mass of Iowa voters, has been active as a worker, though never as a candidate, in State Republican politics. He is Chairman of the Woodbury County Republican Committee.

What effect the nomination of Mr. Stewart will have on the Brookhart political fortunes this Fall is a matter of much speculation. One view is that the party's refusal to nominate the insurgent for the rest of the Cummins term will injure his chances for election for the full six-year term in November. Those who believe this contend that Stewart's nomination is tantamount to a repudiation of Brookhart by his party.

The latter's supporters, however, insist that failure to give him the nomination is an open and dangerous flouting of the farm vote which, they say, gave Brookhart his victory over Cummins in the primary. They foresee an increased Brookhart majority in the Fall as a protest from the farmers against the convention's action in refusing to nominate the insurgent for the short term.

It was generally predicted today that the Democrats will make no nomination for the short term, conserving their energies for the fight to elect Claude Porter, Brookhart's opponent, in the six-year race. Dissatisfaction of the Brookhart forces with the convention's action today is viewed with glee by Democratic leaders, who say it means increased strength for their candidate.

Deny Mme. Semenoff Is Paris Thief.

PARIS, Aug. 6 (AP).—The Russian colony in Paris indignantly denied today that the woman arrested yesterday charged with selling borrowed jewels and furs was Mme. Helene Semenoff, wife of the prominent Czarist General, Gregorie Semenoff. Friends said Mme. Semenoff had not been in Paris for some time. The police have started a new investigation to determine the identity of the woman under arrest.

Wades Brook He Knew as a Boy.

President Coolidge went fishing today in the Pinney Hollow Brook, where he had not fished since he was a freckled-faced youngster. Dressed in his morning suit, wearing a stiff straw hat and smoking a cigar in a long holder, he passed the line of tourists and lost himself in the meanderings of the streams in the wooded vale half a mile from his home. He had on a pair of arctics to wade the streams and keep him from slipping.

Although his luck was not as good as it has been in the lakes in the Adirondacks, he succeeded in landing several small brook trout from the swift-moving stream at the foot of Old Notch Hill. The President appeared to enjoy the sport today. Fishing is a favorite sport with the natives of the Notch, and frequently as a youth the President and other boys of the neighborhood, including John G. Sargent, the Attorney General, went to the hollow for trout.

The President was accompanied today by Richard Jervis and Colonel Bill Starling and Albert Peck of the Secret Service. Mr. Peck gave his bamboo rod, reel and line to the President and sat beneath a tree on the bank of the stream watching the others while they angled. The little party, with the President in the lead, worked its way along the irregular edge of the water for several hundred yards and at times stood upon rocks in the stream.

Mrs. Coolidge Picks Berries.

While her husband was busy with rod and reel Mrs. Coolidge, wearing a simple dress of light material over which was a smock of a bright pink shade, went to a field about a quarter of a mile away and filled a large pail with blueberries. Prudence Prim, her collie, kept close watch while she was in the berry patch.

When she returned to the home five children who had gone beyond the deadline where the sightseers are held back awaited her. A girl of 10 told her they wanted to see the President. Mrs. Coolidge shook hands and introduced her new friends to the collie. When she reached the youngest of the party, a girl of 3 years and with a face well smeared with berries, Mrs. Coolidge picked her up in her arms and kissed her several times. These children had walked more than a mile to the Coolidge home from the camp of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. John S. Kilner of Detroit.

As the President and his party came into the clearing they came upon a party of tourists eating their lunch in the shade by the brook. One of them had a camera and as the President came in sight she made ready to snap the distinguished fisherman. President Coolidge expressed a desire that he should not be pictured. He has refused to pose for the photographers while fishing or pursuing his farm duties and refused the same privilege to an amateur.

President and Mrs. Coolidge drove to Procterville in the afternoon to call upon his aunt, Mrs. Sarah Pollard. She and her two sons, Frank and Park, were there to greet the callers. After a short visit the President returned to Ludlow, where he stopped at the Ludlow Savings and Trust Company, of which his father was a director and he himself is a stockholder. At 4 P. M. he was back on the home porch to confer with the newspaper men.

Select Marker for Son's Grave.

The President and Mrs. Coolidge late this afternoon performed some of the personal things that brought them to Plymouth. They selected a marker for the grave of Calvin Coolidge Jr. from designs submitted by a Rutland monument maker. After the marker had been approved, Mrs. Coolidge placed flowers on her son's grave, a tribute she has paid daily since coming here.

President and Mrs. Coolidge will attend the village church across the road from the homestead on Sunday and return to White Pine Camp on Monday. He feels that the stay here has done him good. The air seems crisper and more exhilarating and he has found that a return to the altitude in which he was born always benefits him. He has done this every year for thirty-five years except for the first three years after he started to practice law,

WAR CRIMES TRIALS SUGGESTED IN VIENNA

British Delegation Splits on a Proposed World Criminal Court at The Hague.

Bower Calls Hindenburg "That Grand Old Soldier" and Others "Gallant Gentlemen."

VIENNA, Aug. 6.—Interest in today's session of the International Law Association centred in the section which is considering the project to establish an international penal court, to sit side by side with the present permanent Hague Court to try war crimes generally, to hear the prosecutions of one State against another State, or between citizens of different States in criminal matters. There was such a divergence of opinion that a vote was not reached and the discussion will continue tomorrow.

While the motion for such a court was made by a British member, Dr. Hugh Bellot, who was instrumental in drawing up the project, it encountered the strongest opposition from another Briton, Sir Graham Bower.

Looking the very picture of an old English aristocrat, Sir Graham denounced trying soldiers and sailors for disobeying war-time orders. He cited instances to show that neither atrocities nor meritorious deeds were restricted to any one country. He made an eloquent plea for all to forget the last war and make a peace of full reconciliation.

He called Admiral von Schee and many others "very gallant gentlemen."

This speech was warmly applauded, but many of the English delegates were restive, thinking it beside the point.

Dr. Walter Simon, Chief Justice of the German Supreme Court, who followed, thanked Sir Graham Bomer for his references to Germany and said that the Germans are willing to forget; that they do not look backward, but forward; and that the German delegation favors the projected court, subject to modification in details.

Dr. Paul Auer, representing another ex-enemy country, Hungary, favored the court in principle, but said that an international criminal law code would be prerequisite. He pointed out that such a court's sentences would likely be nullified by the sovereign right of the States to pardon the offenders it condemned.

Dr. Auer defended the Banque de France counterfeiting trial—an international crime the courts would be expected to deal with—but it was not mentioned in the discussion.

Enrico Ferri stated that Italy, while it thought the proposed trial of war crimes utopian, supported the plan, believing that such a tribunal is highly necessary to handle felonies having an international aspect.

The section dealing with neutrality was adopted with a few amendments proposed in the laws of maritime jurisdiction in time of peace. The three-mile limit was retained, and Article II, which would affect prohibition enforcement and which was expected to be a trouble centre, was adopted without discussion. The article allows a State to continue a high seas pursuit started within its waters for an offense there committed, but not into the territorial waters of another State, and the pursuit cannot be resumed after the ships have entered a foreign port.

Several British members who were prepared to oppose this were dissuaded by Lord Phillimore, who saw no objection to it.

This section adjourned without a discussion of the convention on maritime neutrality.

None of the international lawyers attending the section which is considering the adoption of general rules governing the rate of exchange as applied to payments on contracts supported the standing committee's project to apply the rate prevailing on the date the contract was made. The general tendency to apply the rate of the date the actual payment is made, which is the French project, is backed by the Germans and Dutch.

A drafting committee was appointed with an American member, including Amos Peaslee of New York, Secretary of the American branch of the association.

The section dealing with cost, insurance and freight—c. i. f.—contracts resolved not to take action in Vienna but to continue cooperating with the International Chamber of Commerce.

The American delegates so far have not taken an important part in the work of any sections of the congress.

NEW YORK, August 7—From a stiff and stodgy circlet of leather a man's belt has turned into an object of exceptional richness and smartness. Indeed, it may be as colorful as one's cravat and just as individualized in taste.

At sports and around the club you see light-weight belts of brilliantly striped silk elastic webbing and very thin, flexible cowhide. These are ingeniously reversible, forming two belts in one. Exclusive, but not expensive.

Britain and America Thrilled by Great Achievement of New York Girl Swimmer

By ALEC RUTHERFORD.

the tug Alsace, carrying the Stars and Stripes and a wireless apparatus for flashing to America messages during each mile of progress.

Aboard the tug were the father and sister of the swimmer; Burgess, her trainer; Helmi, the Egyptian Channel aspirant; Miss Cannon, another American girl swimmer, and Timson, the Boston swimmer. There also was a second tug, with newspaper men, photographers and movie cameramen.

Legend on Tug Points Way.

Chalked on the lee side of the tug Alsace in front of Miss Ederle's eyes were the words, "This Way, Ole Kid!" with an arrow pointing forward.

The wind at the start was southwest, the temperature was 61 and there was a rough sea. Miss Ederle set off with strong strokes and covered the first four miles in three hours. She was swimming with a strong crawl and she refused to go slow when ordered to by her trainer.

Her party hung over the side of the boat singing American songs, including frequently "The Star-Spangled Banner." Miss Ederle responded from the water.

The swimmer hugged the leeward shelter of the tug. At 10:30 o'clock this morning she had her first meal—beef extract drunk while floating on her back and also chicken eaten during ten minutes of rest.

Her sister Margaret, Helmi and Timson all took turns accompanying Gertrude in the water for long periods. Gertrude shouted back her confidence in victory repeatedly to cheering messages from the tugs. There was no jazz band similar to last year.

Anthem Sung in Midchannel.

Wild enthusiasm, to which Gertrude responded, greeted her arrival in midchannel just about midday. "The Star-Spangled Banner" was again sung. The demonstration lasted several minutes.

At 1:30 o'clock, nine miles from the English coast, rain started, with a strong, fierce wind causing a heavy swell difficult to battle against.

At 3 o'clock the swimmer was drifting toward Dover with the incoming tide and the rain was stronger than ever.

At 5 o'clock the wind was increasing in power and velocity and the sea was choppy and angry. The tug party was now singing "Yes, We Have No Bananas." A second meal of chocolate was now served to the swimmer.

Miss Cannon, another American aspirant, took the water with Gertrude for an hour. Gertrude offered her a drink of chocolate. The weather was becoming worse every moment and the sea rougher.

At 6 o'clock there was talk of giving up, since the weather and the sea were too bad for victory. Miss Ederle seemed to swim more strongly against the terrible conditions and pluckily shouted: "No! No!" On she struggled a few yards, only to fall back twice as many.

At 6:30 o'clock she was still going strong, holding her own against the cross tides. It was a great swim.

It was when Miss Ederle had passed south of Goodwin Lightship that the party for the first time decided that victory seemed possible. The crowds on shore began to gather in thousands all along the beach and automobiles by the hundreds all sounded their horns. Tugs in the Channel hooted their sirens and scores of flares were lit on the beach to guide her in.

As she approached the shallow water, hundreds of people, regardless of their clothes, waded in the water and surrounded her. Miss Ederle walked ashore unaided, quickly followed by her father, who clasped her in his arms and wrapped her in a dressing gown. She had great difficulty in fighting her way back through the cheering and swaying crowd to the rowboat which took her back to the tug.

The tug at once put out to sea toward Dover. Gertrude was on deck wrapped in Trainer Burgess's coat, the only clothing she had besides her swimming costume.

Regrettable Incident Occurs.

But a regrettable anti-climax was to follow, which certainly will cause considerable public resentment. The tug arrived in the harbor at about 11:30 P. M., but could not get near the pier until a large barge had been moved out. It was midnight before the tug came alongside.

Even then the Channel conqueror was not allowed to land. Trouble arose at once in regard to customs and passports, the party aboard the tug having no passports with them. After a long delay an official was found, and it was 12:30 P. M. before he went aboard. Then followed the most curious scene that could possibly have happened. The solemn officer produced an official document and made Gertrude stand up on deck while he cross-examined her for several minutes, demanding her name, her father's name and her whole family history, until at last he came to her age.

Gertrude, who had been replying smilingly to all questions, said "19." The officer began to write down "13," and then suddenly looked up at her and queried if 13 was right.

It took Gertrude several minutes to recover sufficiently to tell the officer her age was "19." The same catechism was put to Miss Ederle's father, Trainer Burgess, the Egyptian swimmer Helmi, the American swimmer Timson and everybody else aboard the tug.

After this long formality a sudden cheer, mixed with the booes and hisses from the somewhat angry crowd ashore, composed mostly of dockmen whose patience had been sorely tried by this demonstration of officialdom, greeted the announcement that Gertrude would be graciously permitted to enter England, but only on condition that she reported promptly to officials the next morning.

Gertrude then descended the gangway and had to walk afoot over half a mile along the dockside lanes before she could reach her waiting automobile. In this she hurried to the Grand Hotel, where she was given a hot soda bath and put abed.

Bonfires Blazed Way to the Shore.

KINGSDOWN, England, Aug. 6 (AP).—Gertrude Ederle, American swimming marvel, tonight won the proud distinction of being the first of her sex to conquer the treacherous waters of the English Channel. Not only did she succeed after a heroic effort and a sensational finish in accomplishing the feat, but she did it in faster time than any of the previous successful men performers.

Starting from the beach at Gris-Nez, France, at 7:09 o'clock this morning, she landed on the beach at Kingsdown, near Deal, at 9:40 o'clock tonight, having taken but 14 hours 31 minutes to make the difficult passage, as against the former record of 16 hours 23 minutes made by the Italo-Argentine swimmer Tirabocchi when he swam the Channel from Calais to Dover three years ago.

"I am a proud woman," was all Miss Ederle would say as she paused just for a moment on English soil after triumphantly walking up the beach, virtually as fresh as when she started on her long grind.

In fact, she was feeling in such fine fettle she wanted to plunge into the water to swim to the tug waiting about 200 yards offshore to take her back to France. She was dissuaded, however, and was rowed out amid acclamations by the large crowd which had come from the seaside resort of Deal and other watering places near by to watch the climax of the momentous event in Channel swimming history.

The swim came to an end in what might be described as a blaze of glory, for, to guide the swimmer as she neared the goal, huge bonfires were kept burning along the beach, lighting up the waters, so that those ashore could see the strong, steady strokes which Miss Ederle kept up until she was able to touch bottom and walk ashore. The glare of torches on the accompanying boats and their strong searchlights added to the brilliancy.

The swimmer refused all offers of help in landing. Waving all aside, she walked out of the surf unaided, amid tremendous outbursts of cheering which completely drowned the tugboats' sirens.

Sets Out Swimming Strongly.

CAPE GRIS-NEZ, France, Aug. 6 (AP).—Gertrude Ederle, the American swimmer, started at 7:09 o'clock this morning in an attempt to swim the English Channel. The weather conditions when she took her plunge were fine.

It was a grim and determined swimmer that entered the water this morning in sharp contrast to last year, when she dove off as if on a holiday. With set face she walked into the Channel from the sandy beach instead of diving from the rocks of the cape, as before.

She barely acknowledged the cheers of the few onlookers, but walked briskly until the water reached her waist, and then launched off with a steady crawl of twenty-eight strokes to the minute, making for the escorting tug Alsace, 500 yards away.

She was going very strong, and her trainer, T. W. Burgess, was already warning her, "Take your time, Miss Ederle!"

Miss Ederle did not come from Boulogne on board the convoying tug, as in her last attempt, but submitted to the greasing operation in the Hotel Sirene at the Cape.

The greasing was done by her sister, Margaret. First a coat of lanoline about an eighth of an inch thick was applied and then a layer of heavy grease. Miss Ederle then donned her swimming suit, cut deeply under the arms, and over this a third layer of grease was applied.

The swimmer displayed some impatience over the long greasing operation, and said to "Old Bill" Burgess, her trainer: "For heaven's sake, let's get started!"

"Gee, but it's cold," were her first words as she struck off. "It's fresher than last year," was her greeting to the Channel water, which registered 61 degrees Fahrenheit as the sun rose over the cliffs.

For the first two miles after she caught up with the tug, Miss Ederle continued mechanically at 28 to 29 strokes a minute, making good progress.

The sea was very calm, and she raised her goggles over her forehead for several hundred yards, saying: "It will be time enough to look through these things when the breeze freshens."

The pilots of both convoying tugs did their best to shield the swimmer from the increasing breeze which arose about noon after Miss Ederle had been in the water five hours. At that time she was nine miles out.

PAPER RAPS WOMEN ATHLETES

London Daily News Arouses Laughter in View of Miss Ederle's Victory.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Much laughter was aroused here by an ill-timed gibe in The Daily News against women athletes.

Little realizing that Gertrude Ederle would swim the Channel today and have her name blazoned across the front pages of the world's press tomorrow as the woman who surpassed the best efforts ever made by male cross-Channel swimmers, a Daily News editorial, dealing with the question of women athletes in general, will say tomorrow (it is too late not to say it now):

"Even the most uncompromising champion of the rights and capacities of women must admit that in contests of physical skill, speed and endurance they must remain forever the weaker sex."

Irrespective of the amount of general truth there may be in those words there is no question in anybody's mind here that The Daily News would rather have chosen a day for saying them on which Gertrude Ederle had not just swum the English Channel in record time.

WOMEN SWIMMERS HAIL FEAT.

Executives of Association Not Surprised by Miss Ederle's Victory.

Mrs. Winifred Pym and Mrs. Margaret Johnson, President and past President respectively of the Women's Swimming Association, of which Gertrude Ederle is an honorary member, expressed themselves last night as delighted at the performance of Miss Ederle. Both women said that Miss Ederle did only what they expected and that the result, while marking an epoch in swimming progress for women, was no surprise to them.

Mrs. Pym, who was also President of the association for four years after its inception, said that she was not surprised that Miss Ederle had broken the speed record for the swim as well as accomplishing that feat itself.

"Miss Ederle has the physique, the ability and the speed and all the things that go toward making a Channel swimmer," she said, adding that Miss Ederle was as well known for her speed as for her endurance.

Mrs. Johnson described Miss Ederle's feat as "perfectly stupendous." She considered it as exceptional in view of Miss Ederle's age.

Mrs. Johnson was particularly gratified that Miss Ederle had conquered the Channel in view of what she described as her unfailing good nature and cheerful disposition.

"Congratulations to the world's greatest on the greatest achievement in swimming history. We are all immeasurably proud of your courageous victory against tremendous odds."

MRS. BARRETT PRAISES SWIM.

Glad American Won, She Says Her Daughter Won't Try Again Now.

PELHAMWOOD, N. Y., Aug. 6.—"That is certainly fine and I extend my congratulations to Miss Ederle and to her parents," said Mrs. Clara Barrett of 208 Young Avenue, Pelhamwood, mother of Miss Clara Belle Barrett, who on Monday endeavored to swim the Channel, only to meet defeat by losing her course in a heavy fog.

"If she has made the trip according to the time to be reckoned from that given in the papers she certainly did it very quickly. I don't suppose my daughter will try again now, at least not this year. I read that Miss Ederle had said that if my baby was successful she would not try to swim, and I'm sure Clare will do the same.

"I am sorry that Clare didn't win, but she met with handicaps. I am glad, though, that an American girl succeeded in doing what no woman ever did before and I certainly do extend her my heartiest congratulations."

MISS BARRETT STILL RESTING.

She Is Undecided on Attempting the Channel Again This Year.

DOVER, England, Aug. 6 (AP).—Clare Belle Barrett, the New Rochelle, N. Y., woman who early in the week came within two miles of swimming the English Channel from Dover to Cape Gris Nez, is still keeping to her bed under order of her nurse and friend, Miss Grace Leister, of Baltimore.

This is not necessary because of Miss Borrett's inability to be up, but Miss Leister insists that absolute quiet and rest are imperative for a speedy comeback after the exhaustion she experienced in her swim of 21 hours and 35 minutes.

Miss Barrett says that she will probably not decide for several days whether she will again try to conquer the Channel this year.

BREAKING RECORDS MISS EDERLE'S FORTE

Girl Swimmer Began Her Winning Career Three Years Ago and Has Kept It Up.

INHERITED FINE PHYSIQUE

Learned to Swim at Nine, but Did Not Become Expert Until She Was Sixteen.

Gertrude Ederle, the first woman swimmer to vanquish the English Channel, has all the qualities that go to make up the kind of heroine whom America will ungrudgingly and freely worship and honor for her splendid accomplishment. The record of her 19 years shows her to be courageous, determined, modest, sportsmanlike, generous, unaffected and perfectly poised. She has, in addition, beauty of face and figure and the abounding health that is the natural result of the normal life she has led of her own volition.

Although of German parentage, she is a child of "the sidewalks of New York." She was born on the west side of the city, reared there and schooled there. Her home today is at 108 Amsterdam Avenue, although she and her parents spend their Summers in a cottage at Highlands, N. J. Miss Ederle's father is a German butcher and her mother is of the sturdy German housewife type. Some of the qualities of endurance and stamina which have been displayed by Miss Ederle were inherited from her parents and improved by the girl's life and training.

Miss Ederle did not "swim before she walked." She knew nothing of swimming until she was nine years old, when she was taught to swim "dog fashion." She liked swimming, however, and steadily improved, though by her own admission, she did not learn to swim correctly until she was fifteen years old and a member of the Women's Swimming Association, the emblem of which she proudly wears on all her record breaking swims.

Her parentage showed early in the sturdy physique. Her shoulders broadened rapidly with her aquatic training under the tutelage of L. De B. Handley, coach of the Women's Swimming Association of New York. She did not consider that she had learned to swim correctly until she had mastered the crawl stroke which has since carried her to many victories.

Her First Bid for Fame.

Miss Ederle made her first bid for aquatic fame three years ago in the three-mile ocean race for the Joseph P. Day cup, which she won easily, defeating Helen Wainwright, then all-round amateur champion, Hilda James, English champion and others. Following that, world's records fell before her on various courses and for distances ranging from 50 yards to half a mile.

June 15, 1925, Miss Ederle shattered the men's record for the classic twenty-one-mile swim from the Battery to Sandy Hook in New York Bay. She covered the course in 7 hours 11 minutes and 30 seconds. No woman ever before had completed that trip.

Miss Ederle enhanced her natural physical strength and ability by taking the best of care of herself. Although, by her own and her mother's admission, the girl loves all normal pleasures, including a jazzy dance now and then, she never yielded to her interest in such things at the cost of her health or her athletic progress. In quite a few sports Miss Ederle excelled many of her sex, but she settled on swimming, and thereafter stuck to her one purpose.

She does not smoke, drink alcoholic beverages of any kind, or attempt the rôle of "life of the party" at any late affairs. She loves home work, is a good cook, milks cows—occasionally—and lives as much of her life as she consistently can in the open air. According to her mother, young men have never been her weakness, and she is today unattached even to the extent of having a regular "boy friend." She has given no thought to marriage, but has devoted all her attention to conquering the art of swimming.

Captured Senior Championship.

At the age of 16 Miss Ederle captured the Metropolitan A. A. U. senior 100-yard swimming championship, free style, for women. Her time was 1:06. From then on she went from victory to victory, with seldom a defeat in contests in the water. In spite of her accomplishments and her popularity she kept herself well in the background and accepted her victories with becoming modesty.

In spite of the records she has shattered, Miss Ederle has referred to herself as a "lazy swimmer," and she said on one occasion that this might be true of her in other matters. She disclosed some time ago that she quit school after her first year in high school. But, in spite of this, Miss Ederle talks well, speaks grammatically, and is well informed on many topics.

One of Miss Ederle's favorite water performances is that of breaking records heretofore held by men. She has done this in her Channel swim, clipping almost two hours off the fastest time in which the crossing was ever made by a man swimmer. In 1922 she smashed a world's record at Hamilton, Bermuda, in the 150-yard free style race, which she won in 1 minute 49 4-5 seconds.

Records held by Miss Ederle today, as listed in Spalding's Official Athletic Almanac, include:

Women's short course records, free style—150 yards, 1 minute 42 1-5 seconds, Miami Beach, Fla., March 1, 1925; 200 meters, 2 minutes 46 4-5 seconds, Brooklyn, April 4, 1923; 220 yards, 2 minutes 46 4-5 seconds, Brooklyn, April 4, 1923; 300 yards, 3 minutes 45 seconds, Miami Beach, Feb. 28, 1925; 400 meters, 5 minutes 53 1-5 seconds, Brighton Beach, Sept. 4, 1922; 440 yards, 5 minutes 54 3-5 seconds, Brighton Beach, Sept. 4, 1922; 500 yards, 6 minutes 45 1-5 seconds, Brighton Beach, Sept. 4, 1922; 500 meters, 7 minutes 22 1-5 seconds, Brighton Beach, Sept. 4, 1922.

Miss Ederle was one of the swimmers in relay races in which records were established for 200, 250, 400 and 500 yards at Miami Beach in February, 1925.

Her records for women's long course, free style, are: 100 metres, 1 minute 12 1-5 seconds, Honolulu, Oct. 11, 1923; 200 meters, 2 minutes 45 2-5 seconds, Honolulu, Oct. 10, 1923; 220 yards, 2 minutes 49 seconds, Rye Beach, N. Y., July 4, 1923; 400 meters, 5 minutes 54 2-5 seconds, Honolulu, Oct. 13, 1923; 440 yards, 6 minutes 1-5 second, New Brunswick, N. J., Sept. 2, 1922.

Miss Ederle's successful swim yesterday was her second attempt to conquer the Channel. Late last Summer the young woman, then under the training of Jabez Wolff, swam from Cape Gris Nez to within six and one-half miles of the English coast. She was in the water on that occasion 8 hours and 46 minutes, and her performance was regarded as one of the best in the Channel. For a time she was ahead of the records of the five men who have successfully accomplished the Channel swim.

On her return to the United States after her first attempt, Miss Ederle said she could have kept going longer, though she was not certain she could have reached shore. She said Wolff touched her, disqualifying her, and ordered her out of the water.

Wolff replied that he had not touched her, or ordered her out, but that she had collapsed as a result of having swallowed a quantity of salt water.

CHANNEL EXPLOIT THRILLS THE CITY

MOTHER DEEPLY STIRRED

Germans Plan a Demonstration When Swimmer Returns Home.

The achievement of Miss Gertrude Ederle in conquering the English Channel caused a profound stir in New York yesterday. Not only in swimming and sporting circles and among family and friends was the feat applauded but officials and prominent men voiced their admiration.

Although there was no set celebration here last night in honor of her victory, there were many impromptu gatherings where her swim was the sole subject of conversation. She was toasted at the night clubs, where she has never gone, and Acting Mayor Joseph V. McKee and other public officials and citizens offered their congratulations to Miss Ederle, to New York and to the United States in the form of statements.

Her Mother Is Thrilled.

At her Summer home in Highlands, N. J., the face of Miss Ederle's mother beamed with joy in the accomplishment of her daughter. She said at her Summer cottage there tonight that she had known no prouder moment than that which followed the news of her "Gertie's" arrival on the shores of England. And her joy was enhanced, she added, by the lifting of a load of anxiety for her daughter's safety, which had burdened her despite the splendid confidence she felt in the girl's ability to accomplish the Channel swim.

"I am the proudest and the happiest mother in the world tonight," said Mrs. Ederle. "But I knew she would do it this time. She left here with her mind made up to let nothing keep her from her goal, and she has won it. Gertie is the best swimmer in the world, man or woman. She would have made it in less time than she did had it not been for her having to battle a storm.

"I have received no message from her direct as yet, but I am expecting one from her and her father, who is with her, as soon as they can get the chance to cable me. No, I don't know just when she is coming home, but I hope she will start at once and that it will be a quick trip.

"Gertie tried hard last year to swim the Channel, and it hurt her when she failed. It was right that she should be the first woman to do it, but I feel sincerely sorry for Miss Clare Belle Barrett of Pelham Manor, N. Y., who made such a splendid effort and failed."

Calls Her Plain Home Girl.

Mrs. Ederle seemed unable to get her mind on any plans or possibilities for herself or her daughter as a result of the latter's victory. She said she had no idea what Miss Ederle would do and had given thought to nothing except her daughter's early return.

"Gertrude is just a plain home girl," she added. "She does not smoke or drink. She does not go out with young men, except just now and then. She loves home things and home duties and she loves swimming. She has always been determined to succeed as a swimmer since she took it up as a specialty after joining the Women's Swimming Association.

"Her attempt to swim the Channel last year and this year had my thorough approval. In fact, I knew all along she could do it, and now she has done it. I am so proud of her.

"No," said Mrs. Ederle, in answer to a question, "Gertie has not even a sweetheart."

Mrs. Ederle had spent the day at the telephone receiving messages about the progress her daughter was making. She had displayed confidence from the outset and this did not appear to diminish even when the report reached her that Miss Ederle was "tiring" as she battled the tide near the Dover shore.

Hundreds of people called at the Ederle Summer cottage this afternoon and evening, and to one after the other Mrs. Ederle repeated her assertion that she was the "proudest mother on earth." Often, pointing at the river, she said:

"There is where my Gertie learned to swim."

Mrs. Ederle, in addition to answering the telephone, never went far from the radio in her cottage, over which she received news of her daughter's progress. With her were her daughter, Emma, and her son, Henry. Newspapers were sent to the cottage throughout the afternoon and from the Highlands Hotel the latest news was telephoned every half hour. Charts and maps of the Channel and Miss Ederle's course were spread about the place.

It was recalled at the Ederle Summer home that Miss Ederle's father had said after she failed on her first attempt to swim the Channel that she would conquer it. For this attempt Mr. Ederle accompanied his daughter to give her his "moral support." The family thought this may have played an important part in keeping the girl's morale up to a high point throughout her battle with the wind and tides.

Although John Ederle, Miss Ederle's uncle, was the only member of her family at her home, 108 Amsterdam Avenue, last night, there was an impromptu celebration in which friends and neighbors joined until the house and street in front of it were filled with people. The meat shop next door to the home, which is owned by Miss Ederle's father and uncle, was draped with American flags. In the windows large placards in red and blue announced:

"Miss Ederle swims the English Channel in fourteen hours."

"We were all sure of her victory," said "Uncle John." "In spite of her first failure we knew that she would not come home again until she had made the crossing."

In all manner of gatherings Miss Ederle was lauded for her achievement. New York seemed in the mood to overflow with enthusiasm for the game girl whose fourteen-hour battle against the choppy Channel was rewarded with a victory greater than that of any of the men who had conquered it before her.

Messages of Congratulation.

Acting Mayor McKee—With a spirit of personal pride and as Acting Mayor of the City of New York, I hasten to congratulate, in the name of the people of the city, Miss Gertrude Ederle for her successful attempt to swim the English Channel. We are proud of her accomplishments. As a New York girl she has not only brought honor to us, but to the nation as well.

Albert Goldman, Commissioner of the Department of Plant and Structures—Miss Ederle's remarkable achievement gives every one of us a real thrill. She is indeed a great credit to our metropolis, in which she was born and reared. She is the ideal type of American womanhood. I would be remiss if I did not give a meed of praise to her sturdy father and mother, whose careful teachings were manifested in all her activities. All New York and, I dare say, the entire nation take their hats off to Miss Ederle.

Colonel Jacob Ruppert—My heartiest congratulations to Miss Ederle upon her wonderful achievement. I also want to extend my felicitations to her splendid mother and father. What a great American triumph! What an unusual privilege to point with pride to the accomplishment of a girl born and bred in this great city!

Arthur S. Somers, President of the Long Island Chamber of Commerce—America may well be proud of the accomplishment of Miss Ederle, the first woman to swim across the English Channel. She has won many honors before, but so remarkable is this feat that it belittles all other honors and victories she has enjoyed in the past. It gives her the distinction of being the world's foremost woman swimmer, and the people of New York, who claim her as their own, offer her their heartiest congratulations.

William C. Alexander, Vice President of the Kiwanis International (telegram to Miss Ederle)—We, all of Kiwanis, glory with you in your great achievement and have a just pride in your tremendous accomplishment. One hundred thousand Kiwanians in the United States and Canada are giving you three cheers and have been with you in spirit every inch of the way across. Your great achievement will go down in history. Hearty congratulations.

Captain William J. Pedrick, Vice-President of the Fifth Avenue Association—The accomplishment of Miss Ederle in successfully swimming the English Channel is another page in the glorious record the United States has made in the field of athletics. Her achievement fittingly demonstrates the remarkable prowess that has been shown by our country in training the men and women of America who have taken part in sports of all kinds. My congratulations to her and best wishes for her health and further success.

Germans to Hold Demonstration.

At a special meeting last night of the United German Societies, a federation of 2,500 German-American organizations in the metropolitan area, a cablegram was sent to Miss Ederle inviting her to be guest of honor at a demonstration in the form of a parade and banquet upon her arrival in New York City. The message was signed by Magistrate Charles A. Oberwager, President of the organization. It read:

"We extend to you, our greatest champion, the best wishes of Americans of German descent and of the Germans in the United States and extend to you an invitation to be guest of honor at a public celebration and demonstration in the form of an automobile parade and banquet upon your arrival."

Magistrate Oberwager said it had also been decided to invite Miss Ederle to be guest of honor on "German Day," to be celebrated at Mecca Temple Oct. 31. The meeting last night was held in Turn Hall, Eighty-sixth Street and Lexington Avenue.

Alphonse Koelble, Chairman of the Manhattan Council of the Steuben Society of America, sent the following cable message to Miss Ederle:

"The Manhattan Council of the Steuben Society of America is proud that the first woman Channel conqueror is a German-American and the daughter of a Steubenite. Congratulations."

WOMEN SWIMMERS HAIL GIRL'S VICTORY

HER TRAINER IS HAPPY

L. D. Handley Declares Her Triumph Proves Ability of Women as Athletes.

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 6.—Miss Gertrude Ederle's clubmates of the Women's Swimming Association of New York and officials serving at the national championships at Philadelphia had a dinner at the Penn Athletic Club this evening to celebrate her Channel victory.

L. D. Handley, amateur coach of the women's association, who developed Miss Ederle as a swimmer, declared:

"Gertrude's swim overjoyed us all, but it surprised none in the Women's Swimming Association. We felt absolutely confident that if she struck a day of good weather she would make the crossing and beat the men's record for the course, but her performance is the more marvelous in that she found extremely rough weather during parts of the time. The swim was a vindication of women's capability as athletes and a fitting answer to the many would-be experts who have proclaimed that no woman would ever succeed in making the swim. Needless to say, I am proud to have had even a part in helping her toward the wonderful achievement."

Charlotte Epstein, manager of the Women's Swimming Association team said: "Gertrude's wonderful swim has so overjoyed all of us who are gathered here in Philadelphia for the National championships, that we are hardly able to think connectedly or make a coherent statement concerning it. However, we are not surprised. Our confidence in Gertrude's ability has never wavered. Gertrude has been a member of our association since 1918, winning her novice race in February, 1923, and her successful Channel swim is the culmination of the consistent progress she has made since that time. We are happy in Gertrude's success.

Says Nothing Was Too Difficult.

Miss Elsie Viets, who accompanied Miss Ederle on her Channel trip last year, declared: "I think, more than any one else, that I can appreciate Gertrude's remarkable performance and the terrible odds that she overcame. Despite the fact that last year's attempt was unsuccessful I feel that this was due entirely to circumstances beyond her control. Her determination to swim the Channel was so great that nothing was too difficult for her to undertake in training, and I know that this year, as well as last, she conscientiously prepared for the swim. Her success is a well deserved reward, not only to her marvelous ability but to her painstaking effort."

Miss Ethel McGary, national long distance and one mile champion, said: "I felt, as every one else in the Women's Swimming Association did, that Gertrude would swim the Channel. But I also feel that all of us who have had the privilege of being coached by Mr. Handley should accomplish real things in swimming, and if we don't it's entirely our own fault. I remember two years ago swimming in the national long distance championship off Rockaway Beach, and everybody, including myself, thought it was such a difficult swim; but I realize now the comparatively small waves we had to fight were as nothing compared to those Gertrude must have encountered in the Channel. It was a wonderful thing and I am mighty glad that the first girl to accomplish the crossing wore a Women's Swimming Association emblem."

Miss Geraghty Is Delighted.

Miss Agnes Geraghty, national breast-stroke champion and holder of all world's breast-stroke records for women, declared:

"I think Gertrude is wonderful. I am proud to say she is a member of one of the (as press reporters have dubbed us) four horsemen of the women's swimming world, the others being Ethel Lackie of Chicago, Martha Norelius and myself. Long live Trudy!"

Adelaide Lambert, national pentathlon, 220 yards back-stroke and medley champion, said: "I am proud to belong to the club which developed Gertrude Ederle, and can hardly realize that at last a woman has actually succeeded in breaking the men's record for the world's most difficult swim."

Martha Norelius, Olympic 400-meter champion and national champion at 220, 500 and 440 yards, declared: "As one of the 'Four Horsemen,' I seem to feel as though I had a personal share in Gertrude's glory. It is what we all knew she would do."

Doris O'Mara, member of the national relay team, said: "Having been a club and team mate of Gertrude's for the last five years and knowing her ability and gameness, today's result was anticipated by myself and every one else in the Women's Swimming Association. Gertrude always accomplishes what she starts out to do."

Hopes for Similar Success.

Lisa Lindstrom, national junior 500-yard champion, declared—Gertrude's great swim will always be an inspiration to me. She was just my age when she started competing, and I hope my future holds even a small part of her success.

Katheryn Brown said—I think I can say that I am responsible for Gertrude's Channel swim. Mrs. Ederle told me before she joined the club that she would give $1,000 if Gertie could swim as well as I could. So I then induced her to make Gertie join the Women's Swimming Association, and that's what made her champion. Mrs. Ederle still owes me the $1,000.

Carin Nilsson, national indoor medley champion, declared—My first swimming was done in the cold waters off Sweden, and I know what Gertrude had to contend with in the Channel. My greatest pride now is that I am a member of the same club as Gertrude.

Eileen O'Mara, junior national back-stroke champion, said—I think it's great to even be able to say I know Gertrude and am her club mate.

Mathilda Scheurich, junior metropolitan breast-stroke champion—I am so thrilled at Gertrude's swim that I can hardly talk about it. I can hardly believe she's finally accomplished the feat so many women and men have tried in vain.

SULLIVAN CABLES TRIBUTE.

Only American Man to Swim Channel Congratulates Miss Ederle.

Special to The New York Times.

BOSTON, Mass., Aug. 6.—Henry F. Sullivan of Lowell, holder of the Challenge Cup for the Channel swim and the only American to swim from England to France, was warm in his praise of Miss Gertrude Ederle's remarkable feat.

"It was a wonderful performance," he said. "She certainly deserves all the glory and all the praise there is coming to any one. I hardly thought it was possible for a woman to do it."

He sent her a cablegram of congratulations which read:

> Congratulations and success.
> HENRY F. SULLIVAN,
> First and only American to swim from England to France.

Sullivan swam the Channel in 1923, after six unsuccessful attempts. The effort won him $5,000 and the cup offered by The Daily Sketch, in addition to an extended vaudeville tour on his return to the United States.

Aileen Riggin, a close friend of Miss Ederle and former Olympic and national diving champion, said:

CREDIT UNION MEN IN COURT

Other Arrests in Fund Shortage May Follow Those of Two Officers.

John W. Rothenberg, 45 years old, of 1,245 College Avenue, the Bronx, a plumbing contractor, was released in $1,000 bail yesterday by Magistrate Edward Weil in West Side Court on a charge of violating the State Banking law. Rothenberg, formerly Secretary of the Riverside Business Men's Credit Union, was accused of appropriating to his own use $20 of the funds of the union. He pleaded not guilty.

Jack Smith, Treasurer of the union, the books of which the day before were said to show shortages of between $500,000 and $800,000, appeared as complainant. Charlotte Glaser, counsel for the union, told the Court the charge was intended as a specific one, and requested low bail because Rothenberg had signified a willingness to help investigate the shortages.

Morris Novak, formerly President of the union, was held in $25,000 bail the day before when he pleaded not guilty before Magistrate Weil to a forgery charge in connection with the investigation. He will be arraigned for a hearing with Rothenberg next Monday.

It was said that before accountants finished their investigation of the books, seventeen former officers of the union would have been arrested.

WIFE HALES RIVAL TO COURT

Mrs. H. M. Weill Demands Return of "Gifts" Her Husband Made.

Mrs. Henry M. Weill of 350 West End Avenue, whose husband, a real estate operator, is recovering at his country home in Pike County, Pa., from a fractured leg received on June 16 last when he jumped from a window of the apartment of Edith (Peggy) Stone at 200 West Ninetieth Street as his wife entered the apartment with a raiding party, brought Miss Stone to West Side Court yesterday to explain her possession of "gifts" alleged to have been made by Mr. Weill.

Foremost among these was a bronze statuette of a woman which Mrs. Weill told Magistrate Edward Weil, was given her by a friend as a wedding present. Isaiah Leebove, attorney for Miss Stone, explained that his client didn't know the statue was a wedding present and offered to return it. Other articles mentioned were a sideboard and picture frame which Miss Stone refused to return. Mrs. Weill said she purchased these two articles from a friend. Magistrate Weil gave Miss Stone a week in which to return the statuette and told Mrs. Weill that she would have to bring a civil action to recover the other articles.

SHOT BY WOMAN MOTORIST.

Man, Seriously Wounded, Taken Twenty Miles to Hospital.

Special to The New York Times.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Aug. 6.—Shot by a woman near his home in Longwood Lake, Morris Bird, 36 years old, was brought to the Memorial Hospital tonight with a wound in the abdomen which it was feared might be mortal. His assailant, State policemen said, disappeared in an automobile, but was being traced by the license number of the car.

Longwood Lake is a village twenty mile from Morristown and in the hills. It has few lines of communication with other towns. State troopers from Morristown and Netcong started for the village as soon as word of the shooting was received, but are unable to report to their stations. Bird was unconscious and nothing could be obtained from him.

SPAIN WILL LIMIT FLIGHTS.

Government to Designate Fliers on Long Distance Trips.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MADRID, Aug. 6.—The success of Franco Gallarza's flights have so aroused the adventuresome spirit of the Spaniards that the Government is finding it necessary to exercise stricter control over plans for long-distance air journeys.

According to an announcement today, the official director of the air service will hereafter designate those who will be permitted to undertake flights of long duration.

Another note invites aviators to make application for flight service in Spain and the Spanish possessions. Applications must be made before Aug. 15, specifying land or seaplane service.

six pairs of shoe trees the two had left behind. On one tree he found, in pencil, the name "Dr. L. Blumen." On another, in ink, he found the name "Blumen." While he was still looking at the shoe trees it suddenly flashed across MacCubbin's mind that he had seen the name Blumen on a hotel register in Montreal. He hastened back to the Canadian city.

Having the name under which the two men had traveled made matters much easier, and it was not long before MacCubbin learned that two men named Blumen had sailed for Liverpool on the Cunarder Alaunia. The detective took passage on the same ship and arrived in Liverpool, still five months and more behind his quarry. Aided by Scotland Yard, he traced the pair to London, and found the place where they had been, only to learn there that they had gone to the Continent months before.

It appeared they had traveled extensively. They had been to Paris, Berlin, through Poland, into Italy and into Switzerland. And as luck would have it, they had returned to London just after MacCubbin had arrived there. The detective was able, however, to trace their route quickly through the strict rule on the Continent that aliens must register wherever they stop. He found, too, that in their journeying these two young bankers had turned an honest penny and more by dealing in exchange. Finally the trail led back to London.

Found in Apartment.

The men were found in an apartment house at 41 Park Lane. MacCubbin confronted them with the shoe trees. At first they denied their identity, but a woman in London who knew them identified them. They gave in, MacCubbin says, and admitted they were the Busch brothers. The American detective had them held and cabled to Baltimore to the head office of the Fidelity and Deposit Company.

In time Detective Proll of the San Francisco police obtained extradition papers and went to London. He came back with MacCubbin and the fugitives yesterday. The party may start for San Francisco today. MacCubbin says they spent about one-half of the money they realized from the sale of the bonds and that the rest is in a bank in London, with a claim against it lodged by the surety company.

The two young men were not handcuffed on the Berengaria, but were kept under surveillance by Proll and MacCubbin. They behaved very well, took the whole affair nonchalantly and seemed content to go back to San Francisco and take their medicine. They would not talk for publication.

There was a third prisoner on the Berengaria, Andrew Clasnocha, a Russian, wanted in Detroit for perjury. The allegation is that in borrowing about $10,000 to carry on the construction of some fifty suburban houses he made statements that were not in accordance with the facts and did not agree with his income tax return. Detective Charles Lambert brought Clasnocha back from London and started for Detroit with him last night.

Washington Apartments at $12.50 a Room, "Wealthy Man's" Plan for Federal Employes

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—A proposal has been made through the Department of Commerce by a wealthy man, whose name was withheld, to build apartments within ten minutes of the business centre of Washington for rental or sale at cost to Government employes. It is estimated that the buildings can be constructed to rent at the rate of $12.50 a month per room. Chief clerks of various departments are making plans to bring the proposal to the attention of the more than 60,000 Federal employes.

Publication of the details in a statement to the employes, prepared at the Department of Commerce, in which the proposal was pictured as offering an "opportunity for relieving the high rent charges to public employes" caused a stir in real estate circles here. Washington already has a great many apartment houses and more are under construction by interests not identified with the proposal.

The person behind the project is described in the Commerce Department announcement as a man of "high standing in the community" who is prepared to "carry out the transaction in the sense of public service without speculative profit."

"The idea," the statement continued, "is to construct attractive apartments at charges to occupants simply covering cost of construction, operation, necessary interest, taxes and amortization charges. Two alternative bases are offered, either to rent or purchase. It is believed that two, three or four room apartments can be erected on a rental basis of about $12.50 per room, bathroom included free of charge; or on a purchase basis of $250 cash payment per room, with monthly charges sufficient to cover taxes, operation, interest and instalment payments on the principal. It is proposed to erect the apartments in a desirable section of the city within ten minutes of the business centre.

"The architects and builders of the project are known to be leaders in their respective fields, having recently built some of the most attractive housing projects adjacent to New York City."

Whether the project is carried out is up to the Federal employes, according to those active in advocating it. Questionnaires are being distributed to the employes to determine how many wish to take advantage of the offer.

WAGNER CANDIDACY FOR SENATE GROWS

Tammany Leaders Endorsing It and Democrats Up-State Voicing Approval.

LOVE TO SEEK RE-ELECTION

State Senator Abandons Plan to Be Lieutenant Governor—Hubbard for Congress.

The candidacy of Supreme Court Justice Robert F. Wagner for the Democratic nomination for United States Senator made progress in Tammany yesterday and several leaders in the organization were reported to have told friends of the jurist that they believed he should receive the nomination.

Justice Wagner has told friends that if he receives the nomination he will resign from the bench and make an active campaign against Senator James W. Wadsworth Jr., who is expected to be renominated on the Republican ticket. Friends of the Justice have informed George W. Olvany, leader of Tammany, that in their opinion Justice Wagner probably could prevent a trend of "wet" Democrats to Senator Wadsworth in New York City better than any one else.

Has Friends Up-State.

John Godfrey Saxe, Chairman of the Tammany Law Committee, is understood also to have powerful backing in Tammany. To offset that, word has been received here that the suggestion of Justice Wagner's candidacy is receiving strong support up-State.

Delos M. Cosgrove of Watertown and William H. Kelley of Syracuse are two influential up-State Democrats who have let it be known that they regard Justice Wagner as the strongest candidate who could be nominated. Other up-State friends, made by Justice Wagner in the course of his long service in the Legislature, were reported to be rallying to his support, so that an up-State demand for his nomination is expected if the matter should not be settled when the Democratic State Convention meets in Syracuse on Sept. 27.

State Senator William L. Love of the Eighth Senatorial District, Brooklyn, has decided to be a candidate for renomination. Senator Love, who supported Mayor Walker during last year's primaries when Brooklyn's Democratic organization, headed by John H. McCooey, backed John F. Hylan for renomination, was understood to be a candidate for Lieutenant Governor. He abandoned his candidacy for that office after a talk with Governor Smith and has received the endorsement of the Democratic organization of his Assembly district, the Eighteenth, for renomination for his present office.

Hubbard Against La Guardia.

H. Warren Hubbard, formerly Sheriff and Tammany leader of the Eighteenth Manhattan Assembly District, will run for Congress against Representative F. H. La Guardia, it was said at Tammany Hall. Mr. La Guardia, originally a Republican, was elected to the last Congress on the Socialist ticket. An effort will be made to get the Republicans of the Congressional district to endorse Mr. Hubbard.

Speculation in Tammany centred yesterday in the question whether Charles A. McManus would be required to resign as Alderman from the Fifth District if he succeeded his brother, the late Thomas J. McManus, as Tammany leader in the district. Mr. McManus is Vice Chairman of the Board of Aldermen and hence is in the line of succession to the Mayoralty after Aldermanic President Joseph V. McKee. James Mahoney, an election district captain, and John Burke, a lawyer, were reported to be aspirants for the leadership, but probably only if Mr. McManus should not be a candidate.

The Tammany organization of the Twentieth Assembly District designated Louis A. Cuvillier for renomination for Assemblyman last night in a meeting in its clubhouse, 121 East 124th Street. Clarence Neal, leader of the district, presided. Mr. Cuvillier is dean of the Assembly, having served sixteen years in that body. He introduced the bill repealing the Mullan-Gage State prohibition enforcement law. The meeting commended his stand against prohibition.

The Executive Committee of the Queens County Democratic Committee postponed until Monday designations for candidates for county offices. The multiplicity of candidates for Sheriff and City Court Judge, the latter a new office, was said to have been the reason for the postponement.

BAIL FOR GIRL IN SHOOTING.

Release of Betty Queen, Held in Death of Friend, Expected Today.

Special to The New York Times.

MOUNT HOLLY, N. J., Aug. 6.—It is expected that Betty Queen, held in the death of Margaret Craig at Brown's Mills on Sunday, will be released in $5,000 bail tomorrow. The Craig girl was killed when a cartridge exploded in a gun with which the two girls were struggling.

Dorin O'Connor, held as a witness, will probably be released in $500 bail. She plans to go to her home in Centralia, Ill., with Miss Queen. They will take Miss Craig's body there for burial, as no relatives have been found to claim it.

TO CONTROL FLIGHT IN FOG.

Apparatus Proves Successful in Test at Rotterdam.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

THE HAGUE, Aug. 6.—A new control apparatus permitting an airman to fly in a fog was tested at Rotterdam this week.

A dual-control Fokker machine was used and one of the pilots so completely shut in that he could not see outside the airplane. With the help of the invention he made a successful flight.

FIVE WARRANTS OUT IN HALL-MILLS CASE

Dr. Long and Mrs. Clarke the following:

"Dr. Long said that he had been a physician since 1906. He had made no autopsy before burial, he said, because the late Mr. Beekman, who was prosecutor at the time, did not order him to make one. He had understood that burial was not to be until Tuesday after the murder, he said, but the undertaker, Mr. Hubbard, seemed in a desperate hurry to have the bodies buried and out of the way.

"On the Saturday they were found on Phillips Farm he said he and Sheriff Conklin looked them over together. He found the eye glasses in place, and thinks that it was Totten, then a detective working on a fee system for the Somerset County Prosecutor, who took them away.

"Long was asked if he had not told Totten, 'Don't talk too much.' He said that he said something like this to Totten, but that it seemed to him he said, "This is an important case, so be careful what you say about it.' He said he saw some one who arrived early on the scene pick up a thirty-two calibre shell and that he thought it was Totten who did it.

Report of Autopsy Not Missing.

"He says he has the written survey of the autopsy and that it has not disappeared as reported and that he will give it to me upon request. Also that he does not remember that Dr. Cronk had much to do with the autopsy.

"There were no precautions to preserve the situation at the time of the murder until detectives could arrive and investigate, he said. He told us that there were no guards stationed to keep the curious from trampling the grass and picking up and walking off with material evidence. Neither were there any ropes strung up to keep people from flocking about and destroying all clues, he said."

Senator Simpson then described the questioning of Barbara Tough. He said:

"Miss Tough told us that it was common knowledge among the parishioners for a year and a half before the murder that Dr. Hall and Mrs. Mills were on the most intimate terms and that this was so well known that it was a frequent topic for jokes and laughter among the servants. She said that she was not sure that Mrs. Hall knew of the situation, however, because Mrs. Hall was so reserved in her manner that no one cared to discuss such a topic with her.

"On the Saturday morning that the bodies were discovered, she said, Mrs. Hall gave her a pair of white silk socks and told her: 'Wash these for him.' Mrs. Hall did not say who she meant by 'him,' but Miss Tough took it for granted she referred to her husband. Miss Tough said she washed the socks and returned them to her mistress at 4 o'clock and that it was this same pair of socks that Mr. Hall was buried in.

Has No Idea Who Is Guilty.

"Miss Tough said she heard Mrs. Hall answer the telephone before word had come of the finding of the bodies, and that Mrs. Hall said: 'The doctor is out of town; don't tell me anything over the telephone.'

"At 2 A. M. Saturday she said she heard Mrs. Hall moving about in the upper hall of the house.

"Miss Tough was asked point blank if she had any idea who committed the murder, and she replied she had been asked the question a thousand times and that she had absolutely no idea.

"She was asked if there was a large cleaver in the kitchen at the time of the murder and she replied there was not. She was asked if there was not a large, sharp kitchen knife. She said yes, but she wasn't sure whether it was missing later, but doesn't think that it was. She said she heard no automobile near the house at the hour of the murder.

"Next we questioned Mrs. Clark, who said she had never run away as reported and that she had never discussed or known any letters passing between Mr. Hall and Mrs. Mills. She said she knew of nothing out of the way around the Hall household."

In saying that he could not disclose what the three other witnesses had told him, because of an agreement that the special prosecutor should make all statements for publication, Major Kimberling denied that any "friction" existed among the investigators. He said, and Senator Simpson joined in heartily later, that all were "working harmoniously and that good progress is being made."

Got Warrants in Somerville.

At this point, questions developed that the warrants in the case were obtained from W. R. Sutphen, Justice of the Peace in Somerville. Justice Sutphen issued the warrant upon which Somerset Prosecutor Francis L. Bergen arrested Mrs. Hall, a week ago last Wednesday at midnight, on the murder charge. The warrants for Gorsline and Mrs. Russell were signed late on Thursday night. The others were made out late yesterday afternoon.

"It may seem queer," remarked the Senator, "to some people why I should be chasing to Somerville and to other places to interview witnesses, when this ought to be done by the detectives assigned to the case. The reason is, this case is four years old. I want to get it started. I have laid the groundwork and after the next day or two, the statements can be obtained and taken by the detectives working on the investigation.

"As to my probable course of action, on the basis of the evidence I have gathered so far, all I can say at present is that we have been going along finding at first hand what certain witnesses knew about the case. It will be six or seven days before I will be able to determine just what my course of action will be."

The special prosecutor said that he was looking forward to a talk with District Judge James I. Bowers, who succeeded Mr. Beekman as Prosecutor of the Pleas of Somerset. He said he hoped Judge Bowers might aid him in his pursuit of the Hall-Mills evidence which he has charged is missing.

Has No Papers, Bowers Says.

"During my one year as Prosecutor of Somerset County," said Judge Bowers at his home last night, "no papers in the Hall-Mills case were turned over to me. I know absolutely nothing about them."

Mr. Simpson said that he had men compiling a list of the evidence—what he had and what he thought he should have—but that two or three days must elapse before he can know just how the evidence stands. He said he did not plan trips to Somerville or to New Brunswick for several days at least—perhaps longer; but that he would examine a witness today at the Court House in Jersey City.

He reported that Jersey City detectives were still checking up the "amazing" story of the "woman in orange." This woman appeared at his office late on Wednesday and said she knew two men who were eyewitnesses of the murders. Mr. Simpson said his men had not yet reported on the story. He denied that the woman was Mrs. Catherine Fraley, whose home is nearest to the spot on the Phillips farm where the bodies were found.

Mrs. Louise Geist Riehl, who at the beginning of the present investigation was accused in annulment proceedings filed by Arthur S. Riehl of Roselle Park of holding back information, announced yesterday that she planned to leave the jurisdiction of the New Jersey authorities. Permission to leave the State, she said, had been granted to her by Senator Simpson after he had questioned her at Jersey City on Thursday.

"I am going away," she said, "and I don't know when I'm coming back. There have been so many lies told about me that I don't want to stay around here any longer."

Sought Work in New York.

Four days ago Mrs. Riehl went to New York to visit employment agencies and make inquiries about work. While she intimated that her quest had been successful she would not tell just when or where she was going.

She denied one statement in particular, among the many that have been attributed to her. It concerned Mrs. Gildea, who was cook in the Hall home at the time when Mrs. Riehl was a maid. Following the finding of the bodies, Mrs. Gildea, according to the story credited to Mrs. Riehl, went about the house saying:

"They have been murdered. They have been murdered."

The statement of Mrs. Riehl that the prosecutor had permitted her to leave the jurisdiction of the New Jersey authorities was received with surprise in New Brunswick by some of the investigators who were active four years ago. It was believed that the State Police and Senator Simpson considered her a very important witness.

Lawyer Calls on Mrs. Hall.

Mrs. Hall was visited yesterday by her attorney, Timothy N. Pfeiffer of 120 Broadway. She spent part of the afternoon listening to radio reports of the progress of Gertrude Ederle in her Channel swim. Her brother "Willie" strolled about the porch and lawns, but slipped into the house whenever strangers approached.

Bogart T. Conkling of Somerville, who was Sheriff of Somerset County at the time of the double murder, said yesterday he thought it important that the authorities find a man whom he described as "dark, young and mysterious" who joined officials under the crapapple tree on the Phillips farm a short time after the two bodies were found.

"I was notified of the murders and I went to the scene with Dr. William H. Long, the Somerset County physician," Mr. Conkling said. "While we were looking at the bodies this dark, mysterious young man approached, looked at the bodies, and said: 'This has been going on for years.' I was interested, and I said to him: 'What is your name?' He became very angry and replied: 'Why should I become involved in this thing?' Then he walked away."

Mr. Conkling said that among those who were first to reach the murder scene was W. Edwin Florance of New Brunswick, formerly a State Senator, who has been a confidential legal adviser to Mrs. Hall throughout the case.

Conkling quoted Mr. Florance as saying: "Sheriff, this is a very sad case. This man is Dr. Hall, pastor of the Church of St. John the Evangelist."

At that moment, Mr. Conkling said, "Willie" Stevens came up De Russey's Lane to the spot where the bodies lay and stood beside the body of Mrs. Mills.

"This is Mrs. Mills," Mr. Conkling quoted "Willie" as saying, "and I'm satisfied this is the woman."

MAID SAYS MRS. HALL HEARD PHONE TRYST

NEVER DISCUSSED CRIME

Mrs. Riehl Asserts That Widow Talked to Some One, However, of Husband's Love Affair.

A copy of the stenographic transcript of the examination of Mrs. Louise Geist Riehl, who was a maid in the New Brunswick home of the Rev. Edward W. Hall at the time of the murders of the rector and Mrs. Eleanor R. Mills, was made available yesterday. Mrs. Riehl was examined on Thursday by Special Prosecutor Alexander Simpson at his office in Jersey City.

Arthur S. Riehl, husband of the former maid, unwittingly initiated the present investigation by allegations in a petition for annulment of their marriage. He alleged that Mrs. Riehl told him she had concealed vital information in the previous investigations and before the Grand Jury which failed to vote an indictment against Mrs. Hall. According to Riehl's affidavit, his wife said she had been paid for her silence.

Points Revealed by Inquiry.

The examination developed these points:

1. That Mrs. Frances Stevens Hall, the widow of the rector, talked over the telephone to an unidentified person the night before the bodies were found and discussed her husband's "friendship" for Mrs. Mills.
2. That the former maid thought that "Willie" Stevens, the widow's eccentric brother, had a rifle in his room.
3. That the last she had seen of Mrs. Hall, at the moment when Mrs. Mills telephoned to Dr. Hall, seeking an appointment which led to their death, Mrs. Hall was holding the receiver of a downstairs telephone to her ear. The rector answered from an extension upstairs. Mrs. Hall has denied that she listened to the conversation.
4. That Josephine Bowman, laundress in the Hall home, was never questioned in previous inquiries.
5. That Mrs. Hall received the news of her husband's death without outward display of emotion and that during the four months which the witness remained in the Hall employ, after the crime, the murders were never discussed within her hearing.

The transcript obtained yesterday also showed that although the former maid had been questioned early and often in the case she had never been asked to certify to the correctness of her statements by signing a transcipt of them. Senator Simpson, Captain Lamb and John J. Beggans, Commissioner of Public Safety, questioned Mrs. Riehl. She was asked about the telephone message to the rector from Mrs. Mills. She said that she answered the telephone some time between 7 and 8 P. M. the night of the slaying.

Q.—Where were you? A.—I was upstairs on the second floor.

Q.—Did you take it on the extension upstairs? A.—Yes.

Q.—From the position that that telephone was in could you see downstairs? A.—No, you had to walk—no, I could not.

Q.—What did you see Mrs. Hall do with the telephone downstairs; what did you see her do when you took this call? A.—When I answered the telephone they asked me for Mr. Hall. I went to the top of the stairs, thinking he was downstairs, as he was going to come that way if he was there, but Mrs. Hall came in from the front porch and picked up the receiver, and I said to her, "This is for Mr. Hall." I said, "Is he on the porch? She said, "Why, no; I thought he was in the house, upstairs." Just then Mr. Hall called from the bathroom, and she said, "Oh, he is up there; it is all right."

Q.—Did you go to get him then? A.—No, I saw that she had the receiver.

Q.—How long did she have the receiver up to her ear? A.—She took it off and was just like this (illustrating) when I called to her.

Q.—When you were watching her she had it up to her ear? A.—Yes.

Her Memory Not Clear.

At this point the transcript shows that the Prosecutor endeavored to develop from the witness that Mrs. Hall had maintained her posture at the telephone and had heard the dialogue between her husband and his choir leader. The witness's memory proved poor and the Prosecutor turned to Ferd A. David, Middlesex County detective, who questioned the maid early in the case, for enlightenment. David said that her first statement had been that the last she saw of Mrs. Hall was when the widow was standing in the lower hall with the receiver to her ear.

Q.—You were interviewed by him (David) right after this occurrence? A.—Yes.

Q.—He says you told him at first that after this telephone message that night you saw her walk out of the house over toward the home of Henry Carpender, I think it is. Then you took it back afterward and said it was not true. Do you remember making such a statement to him? A.—No.

The ex-maid denied ever having seen any papers in Dr. Hall's study or elsewhere about the house, and then, getting down to Saturday, Sept. 16, the morning the bodies were found, she told of meeting "Willie" Stevens early that day. She said that she encountered him in the dining room at 7 A. M.

Heard Something Had Happened.

Q.—What happened when you got up—you saw "Willie," what was the next thing that happened? A.—I said to him, "What are you doing up so early?" He said, "Oh, something has happened," or something to that effect, "something happened last night," or "Mr. Hall hasn't been home all night." I said, "Oh, well, maybe he has been with sick people."

Q.—Did he say something had happened? A.—He said, "Oh, nothing," and he would not tell me. He said to me, "Don't tell Frances I told you."

Q.—Go ahead. A.—I walked back out of the dining room out of the hall and as we always knew the dominie was in by his hat on the rack, I really didn't think nothing of it at that time. He said to me "Don't tell Frances." I said, "I won't let her know anything." They always thought he was a big loud-mouth. So I set the table for three and served breakfast to Mrs. Hall and "Willie." Mr. Hall used to drink postum and we would bring the water for it in a little silver pitcher, and I was waiting for her to tell me to bring that in just as if he was home. Finally I said, "Is Mr. Hall going to have breakfast in bed, or is he coming down?" She said "Louise, Mr. Hall has not been home all night; I do not know where he is." I said, "Maybe he has had an accident, have you called the police?" She said, "I did; there hasn't been any accident."

Left After Four Months.

The maid said that she remained with the Hall household for four months after the crime, but that she never heard the crime discussed. No attorneys for the family ever questioned her, but Felix Di Martini, former New York detective, who was employed by the family, talked to her seven or eight times. In her examination the maid disclosed a hitherto unnamed member of the household—Josephine Bowman, laundress. She was never questioned. Significant answers were returned by the maid when she was asked about events on the night before the bodies were found. The transcript follows:

Q.—What was the first that you knew anything had happened? A.—Friday night.

Q.—What did you know Friday night? A.—Well, Friday night after we had gone to bed, whether the telephone rang or whether she [Mrs. Hall] got up I am not sure, but I think the telephone rang and she answered; and my room was over there [indicating]. I was coming from Barbara's room [Barbara Tough, maid questioned yesterday], which was over there, and I heard her [Mrs. Hall] saying, "no, there was not any one else," or, "he was especially friendly with her," or something to that effect, something about her being in the choir. I cannot remember the exact words. Then when I heard that I ran into Barbara's room and I told her what I had heard. She said, "Mrs. Mills must be with him," or something to that effect. I cannot remember the telephone conversation.

Q.—But you do remember what she said, was ——? A.—No there was nobody else she was friendly with, she was in the choir.

Q.—That was your impression. A.—It seems to me as if she said, "He was very nice or friendly to her." I know I heard the word "friendly," if I remember right.

Q.—You first give it without any qualification that she was saying, "No there was nobody else, he was friendly with her, she was in the choir"; why do you say that so clearly and then start afterward and explain that she said, "Oh, he was nice to her." A.—I knew that you would pin me down. I didn't think.

LEAVES TO EXTRADITE THORNE AND ELLIOTT

Westchester Official Goes North With New Papers—Prisoners Are Remanded Again.

Special to The New York Times.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Aug. 6.—First Assistant District Attorney Walter A. Ferris is on his way to Montreal from Washington, D. C., with extradition papers for Richard Thorne and Philip C. Elliott, under indictment in Westchester County on charges by Miss Violet Anderson, an actress of New York City, it was said here today.

Thorne and Elliott have been held in Montreal since early in July, awaiting the arrival of extradition papers, and their cases have been continued several times by Extradition Commissioner Choquet.

District Attorney Arthur Rowland, who visited Canada shortly after Thorne and Elliott were apprehended there, did not at first apply for extradition papers because of conflicting opinion as to whether the two young men were extraditable. Opinions of Washington officials caused him to delegate his assistant, Mr. Ferris, to obtain the necessary papers from Albany, then from Washington, and proceed to Canada to bring the young men back for trial here in September.

Special to The New York Times.

MONTREAL, Quebec, Aug. 6.—Unless the United States Government sends to Canada by next Friday the extradition papers required for Richard Thorne and Philip Elliott, held here for assault upon Violet Anderson, a danseuse, it is possible that the pair may be released.

Judge Choquet, Extradition Commissioner, announced today that he would remand the prisoners for eight more days, and intimated that action toward release would then be considered.

PARACHUTIST LANDS IN TREE

British Girl Has Had Enough After Second Accident.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Miss Olive Stone, the seventeen-year-old parachutist who has jumped twice from an airplane over London, has decided not to make a third attempt—at least until the memory of the first two has faded.

Her first descent terminated on a roof and she was dragged across the roof with the parachute and was badly bruised as a result.

Her second descent, which was made last night, ended in the top of a tree in a suburban cricket field. She had to cling to the tree for an hour before a rescue party arrived, and it was only the brave act of an unknown man, who crawled along a dead branch and tied a rope around her that enabled her to hold on until her rescuers reached the tree.

CONTINUES FIGHT ON SIMPSON.

Somerville Newspaper Sees His Work as Superfluous.

Special to The New York Times.

SOMERVILLE, N. J., Aug. 6.—The Somerset Democrat carries an editorial today headed, "What Is the Game?" and saying in part:

"It might have been perfectly proper for the State to appoint an assistant to Prosecutor Bergen to try the Hall-Mills case if a Grand Jury had investigated the evidence and returned indictments to the court for trial, but as the matter stands it seems like a hardship upon the taxpayers of the county, who must pay the bills. Four years ago the State took the same course in this case and appointed a special attorney and investigator, but after several weeks' work they found no more evidence than was already in the hands of Prosecutor Beekman.

"Here is the strange part of the proceedings. Senator Simpson came to Somerville Monday afternoon and met Prosecutor Bergen for the first time and after a half hour's conference he made a statement to newspaper men that one woman and three men would be indicted for murder and that the State had a very strong case, which, if the statement is true, substantiates in every way the action of Prosecutor Bergen when he arrested Mrs. Hall.

"Certainly Mr. Simpson did not bring any new evidence in the case to Somerset County, and his statement was made upon information which he received from Prosecutor Bergen.

"It is extremely doubtful if Senator Simpson's services to Somerset County will be of much value until a Grand Jury has passed upon the evidence, which probably will not take place until September.

"Senator Simpson is a most able criminal lawyer, and in the event that the case came to trial he could be of great assistance to the prosecutor. But that time has not arrived, and in the meantime the taxpayers of the county are saddled with an extra expense and for work which has apparently been accomplished before Senator Simpson entered into the case."

SEEKS HALL LETTER WRITER

Simpson Anxious to Talk With the Author of Anonymous Tip.

Senator Simpson said last night that he had received an anonymous letter from this city, giving a "tip" on the Hall-Mills case. Owing to certain statements in the letter, which the Senator thought lifted it above the level of a mere "crank" communication, he said he was anxious to get into touch with the writer. He asked that publicity be given to this statement:

"If the man from Somerville, who mailed the letter to me on Aug. 3 from the Grand Central Terminal Postoffice at 5:30 P. M. will call me on the telephone at my office, Bergen 9157, I will meet him anywhere outside the State of New Jersey and will assure him he will not be arrested or molested."

The Senator refused to divulge what the letter contained.

MISS B. HENDERSON MARRIES DIPLOMAT

CEREMONY AT BAR HARBOR

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Miss Beatrice Van Rensselaer Henderson, granddaughter of the late Senator John B. Henderson of Iowa and prospective heiress of the Henderson millions, and Joseph Edward Wholean of Springfield, Mass., recently appointed commercial attaché of the American Embassy at Rome, were married today at Gleneyrie, the Summer residence of Mrs. John B. Henderson, her grandmother, at Bar Harbor. The bridal couple will sail for Europe Wednesday on the Berengaria, going immediately to Rome, where Mr. Wholean will take up his new duties.

The announcement of Miss Henderson's engagement was made July 5 and caused widespread interest in social circles here. The bride has been a popular member of the younger social set of the capital and is a daughter of the late John Brooks Henderson Jr., Washington lawyer, clubman and multimillionaire, and a leading authority on marine biology, who died in 1923, and her mother was Miss Angelica Schuyler Crosby of New York, who also died a few years ago.

With the death of her parents, Miss Henderson, who has been living with Mrs. John B. Henderson, her grandmother, in the big Henderson mansion on Sixteenth Street, became the prospective heiress of the Henderson millions.

The late Senator John B. Henderson, her grandfather, was one of seven Republican Senators whose votes defeated the impeachment of President Andrew Johnson. Mrs. Henderson, his widow, is one of the richest social leaders in Washington society, and largely responsible for the development of the Sixteenth Street section of Meridian Hill into a nucleus of foreign embassies that had added so much to the beauty of modern Washington. She owns the French embassy. Her own brownstone home, Boundary Castle, is one of Washington's show places, its tennis courts and swimming pool have been a rendezvous for foreign diplomats, and she recently offered a city block on Meridian Hill as a site for a national art gallery.

Mr. Wholean is a son of Mr. and Mrs. William Charles Wholean of Springfield, Mass., and a Harvard graduate of the class of 1917. During the World War he served as an officer in the A. E. F. He is a member of the Racquet Club of Washington and Harvard Club of New York. Until recently he was Washington representative of the Rolls-Royce automobile manufacturing concern, but resigned to enter the commercial service of the United States and has just been designated to his new post in Rome.

BAR HARBOR, Me., Aug. 6 (AP).—Joseph Edward Wholean and Miss Beatrice von Renssalaer Henderson, both of Washington, were married today at Gleneyrie, the Henderson home. Only members of Miss Henderson's family attended.

PRINCESS MAFALDA GIVES BIRTH TO SON

ROME, Aug. 6.—The Italian sovereigns today had their third grandson with the birth at Racconigi Castle of a healthy boy to Princess Mafalda, who is married to Prince Philip of Hesse.

Princess Yolanda, who married Count Calvi di Bergolo, already has had two children, one of whom, however, died.

The Queen was at the bedside during the childbirth, the King arriving soon afterward.

Both Princess Mafalda and the baby are stated to be in fine health and doing well.

News of the latest addition to the royal family delighted not only the sovereigns but the whole nation.

The Prince is a nephew of the former German Emperor. His marriage to Princess Mafalda followed a romance which began several years before when they met at a garden party in the grounds of a Roman villa.

Prince Philip repeatedly returned to Italy to urge his suit, and the Princess, having found the man of her choice, flouted the ancient tradition that royal marriages must be dictated for political purposes.

"I don't want to be a Queen," she is reported to have told her parents.

FINE STATUE OF WOMAN UNEARTHED AT ATHENS

Funereal Figure Is Well Preserved and of Exceptionally Good Workmanship.

ATHENS, Aug. 6.—A further important archaeological discovery was made during the demolition of the royal stables at Athens last night, when a classical statue of an Athenian lady, of exceptionally fine workmanship, was unearthed.

Professor Philadelpheus, who is superintending the excavations, is of the opinion that the statue is a funereal one, portraying a woman who was probably a member of one of the leading Athenian families. She is in an attitude of mourning, wearing a veil covering the whole body and the back of the head.

Below the veil appears a robe with the folds so exquisitely carved as to give an appearance of transparency.

The statue is in an excellent state of preservation, though the left hand and two fingers of the right hand are missing and the tip of the nose is damaged.

The statue is said to be a characteristic example of the funereal monuments of the Macedonian and Roman periods. Its height is over 6½ feet. As it is not yet cleaned, it is difficult to define the date and school.

The excavations of the royal stables will probably bring further surprises, since their area is exactly within the walls of ancient Athens, built by Themistocles.

Other finds include a philosopher's head, a woman's head with the hair bound, similar to Apollo Belvedere, and a sarcophagus and various bas-reliefs.

VALUES WIFE AT $26,520.

Husband, in Suit, Estimates Her Earnings During Her Lifetime.

A novel basis for ascertaining the alleged damage sustained by a husband whose wife is asserted to have been won from him by another man, was set up in a complaint filed in the Supreme Court yesterday by John J. Killian, employed in a newspaper pressroom, against George Ephriam, a Chicago engineer and architect. Killian asks $26,520 damages on the ground that his wife has been employed in the office of the Buffet Lunch Company at $85 a month. He says that according to her expectancy of life as determined by the insurance actuary tables she would have 32.20 years longer to hold her job and would earn the sum sued for in that time.

Killian applied for an attachment against the property of Ephriam which he asserts is deposited in a New York bank and amounts to $15,500. He alleges that he married his wife in 1921 and lived happily with her until last April, when, he asserted, Ephriam enticed her from her home and furnished an apartment for her at 684 Riverside Drive.

He said:

"Whatever von Bernstorff's personal and official merits may have been and are, the fact remains that his conduct of Germany's affairs while Ambassador in Washington during the war could not make him persona grata in this country."

$2,582,331 IN JEWELS LEFT BY PRINCESS

EMERALDS BRING $643,275

Former Mrs. W. B. Leeds Named Son, Husband and the Princess Xenia Among Heirs.

Princess Anastasia of Greece, late wife of Prince Christopher and former wife of William B. Leeds, the "Tin Plate King," left an estate of $2,582,331, consisting chiefly of jewelry, it became known yesterday through the filing of an accounting of her estate in the Surrogate's Court. Of this amount, $935,116 has been paid out in debts and administration expenses. The Princess died at Athens, on Aug. 29, 1923.

The jewelry, most of which has been converted into cash, included an emerald and diamond collar and an emerald diamond tiara, which were sold for $643,275; a necklace of forty-three pearls, which brought $720,000; another necklace of sixty-seven pearls, $800,000, and three sets of jewelry consisting of a diamond tiara with thirty-five large pearls, a diamond chain with thirty-three large pearls and a diamond bow set with a large centre diamond, $235,191.

Expenses included $151,170 collected by the Collector of Internal Revenue on a pearl necklace; $19,312 in Federal taxes on seventeen pearls which were sold here; $112,000 for legal services rendered by Curie, Lane & Wallace in connection with the importation of the pearls, and $17,607 in insurance on the imported pearls.

The heirs and next of kin included William B. Leeds, a son, of Oyster Bay, L. I.; Princess Xenia of Greece, his wife; Margaret Stewart Green, a daughter, of Montclair, N. J.; Prince Christopher of Greece and Nancy Helen Marie Leeds.

The will of William B. Leeds, who died in 1908, disposed of an estate estimated at between $30,000,000 and $40,000,000 and gave to his widow, $150,000 in cash, the Leeds home in Fifth Avenue, the Summer home, Rough Point, at Newport, his personal effects, and other property, and the income from a trust fund of $25,000,000. This fund, constituting the bulk of the estate, after her death, went to her son for life, and the principal goes to his issue upon his death. If no issue survives him the sum goes to the New York Lying-In Hospital.

The necklace of forty-three pink pearls owned by the Princess Anastasia, given to her by her first husband in 1907, was brought to this country in December, 1924, to be sold as part of the assets of the estate. The pearls were purchased for $340,000, but have been valued at $1,000,000. They were brought here originally in 1907 by Citroen, the Paris jeweler from whom Mrs. Leeds bought them on terms which included an allowance for duty. Citroen declared them to the customs authorities as separate gems, because they were then unstrung, the duty being 10 per cent. They were strung here and delivered to Mrs. Leeds in Newport. The Government demanded the duty of 60 per cent. payable for strung pearls, and collected $110,000 over Citroen's protest. He fought the case in the courts and after eight years won a decision in favor of the 10 per cent. duty.

AGED MAN DROWNS OFF LONGPORT, N. J.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, Aug. 6.—John Showers, 65 years old, of 6,116 New Market Street, Philadelphia, said to be a retired police sergeant of that city, was drowned and his two companions, William Fish, 65, of 2,156 East Cumberland Street, and William Young, 60, of 1,516 Dover Avenue, both of Philadelphia, barely escaped today when their fishing skiff foundered in a choppy sea two miles off the Aberdeen Hotel, Longport.

Of the two survivors one swam two miles with the aid of a life-preserver and sought aid at the hotel for his struggling companion, while the other clung to the wrecked craft until rescued by coast guards.

The men set out early in the morning on a fishing trip in Margate Bay. About noon the surf became rough. Their anchor hold was broken by a heavy swell and their craft capsized. Young and Fish managed to swim back to the overturned boat and obtain life-preservers. Showers was buffeted about by the waves as he sought vainly to do likewise and was swept out and lost to the view of his companions.

While Young clung to the overturned boat Fish undertook to swim to shore. He reached his goal exhausted. The Longport coast guard station was notified and sent out a cutter. The rescue crew reached Young's side just as the wrecked boat went under. The body of the drowned man has not been recovered.

SINGAC, N. J. Aug. 6 (AP).—Earl Jackson, 13 years old, of 304 Orange Street, Newark, and Charlotte Watkins, 17, of 9 Erie Place, North Newark, attending a negro Sunday school picnic, were drowned in the Passaic River when their canoe overturned. The bodies were recovered.

Private Garland Alexander, 24 years old, a member of Company E, Fort Schuyler, was drowned in Long Island Sound, a few hundred yards from the fort, shortly before 5 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He has been in the service for two years, enlisting from Valonia, Ind. The body was recovered.

The body of an unidentified woman about 45 years old was recovered in New York Bay off Robbins Reef yesterday afternoon by the Police Marine Division. The woman was described as 5 feet 6 inches, weighing 170 pounds, wearing black stockings and black oxford shoes.

The body of a man, believed to be that of Augustus Staub, 70 years old, of 16 Beach Street, Kearny, N. J., was found floating off South Beach, S. I., last night and removed to the City Morgue at Springfield.

The police found papers in the clothing which identified the body. They said the man had been in the water a long time. They have asked the police of Kearny to aid them in a positive identification.

VITAPHONE STIRS AS TALKING MOVIE

NOTED MUSICIANS HEARD

THE VITAPHONE, a new invention synchronizing sound with motion pictures; DON JUAN, with John Barrymore, Mary Astor, Willard Louis, Estelle Taylor, Warner Oland, Montagu Love, Helene Costello, Jane Winton, Myrna Loy, John Roche, June Marlowe, Yvonne Day, Phillipe de Lacy, John George, Helene d'Algy, Josef Swickard, Lionel Braham, Phyllis Haver, Nigel de Brulier and Hedda Hopper, inspired by the legends of "Don Juan," written for the screen by Bess Meredyth, directed by Alan Crosland; Vitaphone music score. At Warners' Theatre.

By MORDAUNT HALL.

A marvelous device known as the vitaphone, which synchronizes sound with motion pictures, stirred a distinguished audience in Warners' Theatre to unusual enthusiasm at its initial presentation last Thursday evening. The natural reproduction of voices, the tonal qualities of musical instruments and the timing of the sound to the movements of the lips of singers and the actions of musicians was almost uncanny. This "living sound" invention, without a musician being present, also furnished the orchestral accompaniment to an ambitious photoplay entitled "Don Juan," in which John Barrymore plays the title rôle.

The future of this new contrivance is boundless, for inhabitants of small and remote places will have the opportunity of listening to and seeing grand opera as it is given in New York, and through the picturing of the vocalists and small groups of musicians, or instrumental choirs of orchestras, the vitaphone will give its patrons an excellent idea of a singer's acting and an intelligent conception of the efforts of musicians and their instruments. Operatic favorites will be able to be seen and heard, and the genius of singers and musicians who have passed will still live.

The introductory Vitaphone feature, which incidentally prefaced the program, was that of Will H. Hays delivering a speech congratulating the Warner Brothers, the Western Electric Company, the Bell Telephone laboratories and Walter J. Rich on this remarkable achievement. There was no muffled utterance nor lisping in the course of the talk; it was the voice of Hays, and had any of his friends closed their eyes to his picture on the screen they would have immediately recognized the voice. Every syllable was audible and clear.

This was followed by a vitaphone of the Philharmonic Orchestra under the direction of Henry Hadley, in which one was not only impressed by the clarity of the tonal colors and softer interludes, but also by the thrilling volume of the full orchestra. During the exhibition of this subject the screen scenes swayed from those of the whole body of musicians to small groups as each instrumental choir took up its work.

Elman Heard in "Humoresque."

Mischa Elman, the noted violinist, was seen and heard playing Dvorak's "Humoresque," with Josef Bonimo at the piano, and every note that came to one's ears synchronized with the gliding bow and the movements of the musician's fingers. It seemed at times that the sound was so distinct that during a pause had a pin been dropped in the studio it would have been heard.

The "Caro nome" aria from "Rigoletto," rendered by Marion Talley, gave one an excellent idea of the qualities of the singer's voice and also of her acting. As she retreated from the front of the stage her voice became modulated, and then there were times when one heard her as if from a front seat in the Metropolitan Opera.

"An Evening on the Don," delivered by Russian dancers and singers, contained a wealth of charm. Then the seductive twanging of a guitar manipulated by Roy Smeck captured the audience. Every note appeared to come straight from the instrument and one almost forgot that the Vitaphone was responsible for the realistic effect.

There was a decided opulence about the entertainment, for next on the list was Efrem Zimbalist, violinist, accompanied by Harold Bauer. Mr. Zimbalist played variations of Beethoven's "Kreutzer Sonata," and whether it was a note from the piano or the plucking of the violin strings, it was audible throughout the theatre and just as inspiring as if Mr. Zimbalist and Mr. Bauer had themselves been before the audience.

The powerful voice of Giovanni Martinelli then came from the screen, singing in an enthralling fashion "Vesta la giubba" from "Pagliacci," accompanied by the Philharmonic Orchestra. Nothing like it had ever been heard in a motion picture theatre, and the invited gathering burst into applause such as is seldom heard in any place of amusement. The singer's tones appeared to echo in the body of the theatre as they tore from a shadow on the screen—a shadow that appeared earnest and intense in the delivery of Leoncavallo's well-known composition.

The final special Vitaphone feature was of Anna Case, supported by a dance divertissement of the Cansinos, accompanied by the Metropolitan Opera chorus and Herman Heller's orchestra. This was also pleasing and extraordinarily effective in delivering the singer's glib and quickly turning tones.

John Barrymore in "Don Juan."

And so one came to the picture, "Don Juan," and it can readily be appreciated that only a cleverly produced film could hold its own against the entertainment that had preceded it. Messrs. Warner were sufficiently astute to screen the prologue, or the first chapter of the photoplay, before announcing an intermission. By the time the first stretch of "Don Juan" faded out the spectators were in the mood of a person who does not wish to leave an interesting novel. Don Juan then was a child and his father, impersonated by Mr. Barrymore in an excellent make-up, had become a sort of misogynist.

In a subsequent chapter Don Juan, grown up, rises to the conception of the character of "Donny Johnny." He has his flights of fancy for beauty, and no sooner does he gaze upon one pair of eyes after having left a fair creature in another room than he finds some new charm, some fresh temptation. It is a difficult position that Pedrillo (Willard Lewis) has, for when the insincere Don Juan is in a fix Pedrillo, his faithful attendant, has to risk the spear or the sword of a jealous man. Don Juan scatters kisses through this production and he appears to know that he is irresistible, even to Lucretia Borgia. He plays with her admiration as he would with a pretty maid's, and a mere subordinate in the Borgia Palace unwittingly tempts the susceptible Don just when he has an appointment to meet the lovely Lucretia, who, be it known, is not slow to use her power for revenge.

Mr. Barrymore leaps through the scenes of this production in a captivating manner, and sometimes the principal character and the story remind one of a Fairbanks film, and in the amorous moments one is impelled to think of Valentino.

The players, arrayed in fifteenth century costumes, conduct themselves with marked ability, appearing to sense that restrained action demanded of them in a period picture. And this aids materially in making the film interesting. It was directed by Alan Crosland, who also produced "Enemies of Women," and one perceives in the current offering scenes that are reminiscent of the former film in which Lionel Barrymore played the principal part.

John Barrymore is as lithe as ever, and his attire in many of the episodes of this photoplay set off his slender form. Naturally as the Spanish Don, he is heroic. No sword can ever defeat his, and no walls are sound enough to hold him in prison. That this Don Juan is handsome is as true as he is fickle; until, of course, he experiences a heart thrust from Adriana della Varnese's soulful eyes. When the Don disarms his antagonist and that individual is at his mercy, the gallant Spaniard flings his swords aside and springs from the top of a flight of stairs on to his panting opponent, which performance was greeted with a hearty outburst of applause from the audience.

Lavishly Filmed Scenes.

Here we have a number of lavishly filmed scenes, in which the feminine element is not clad for wintry blasts, and as a contrast to the pictured orgies there are glimpses of Don Juan in a prison cell by the Tiber. Through a wild demented individual who is incarcerated in the adjoining cell Don Juan discovers that a granite block is loose, and thereupon he and the madman, who incidentally has a reason for hating Don Juan, labor together to draw away the great stone, neither knowing the identity of the other. Then come scenes of a struggle in the river and dexterous and resourceful performances by the Great Lover, who rescues and fights his way to the bliss of devoting attention to one woman—Adriana.

Lucretia Borgia is impersonated by Estelle Taylor, who in private life is Mrs. Jack Dempsey. She betrays imagination in handling her rôle, which is by no means an easy one, for Lucretia is proud, but the Don is surrounded by the glamour of a thousand loves, and therefore she has at first to be merely mildly interested in the Spaniard, then vindictive, then sure of her own unrivaled attractiveness, and finally she gives the idea of nonchalant revenge, as if the whole matter had really never meant very much to her.

Mary Astor is charming as Adriana, and that capital actor, Willard Louis, who played the part of the Prince Regent to John Barrymore's "Beau Brummel," gives a stanch conception of perplexed loyalty. Caesar Borgia, to whom the blood of another is but a trifling incident, is played by that reliable performer, Warner Oland, who never steps out of character.

Hence, in this film, there are the playing with feminine hearts, dazzling heroics, a brown-eyed maid, love—and an optimistic fade-out.

SOLVED BY ELECTRICITY.

Sound Recording Machine and Camera Driven by Separate Motors.

Electricity is said to have solved the difficulties in finding a realistic adjunct of sound to the shadows of the screen. This discovery or invention is the result of years of research in the Western Electric Company and the Bell Telephone Laboratories, supplemented by the efforts of Walter J. Rich, now President of the Vitaphone Corporation, and the Warner Brothers.

In producing the results it was realized that the simplest way to keep the camera and the sound-recording machine in perfect synchronization would have been to drive both from the opposite ends of the same motor shaft, but that as the camera must be free to swing, two motors were used, and an electrical gearing device held them at exactly the same speed. The motors were interlocked electrically by tapping at three symmetrical points on each armature and by interconnecting the two motors through slip rings. Thus the motor driving the sound-recording equipment and the motor driving the camera are independently supplied with electrical power, but through the slip ring circuit there is enough interchange of power between their armatures to produce synchronization while starting. When they reach the desired speed they are converted into synchronous motors, one of the triumphs of electrical engineering, and continue to run as independent synchronous motors, the speef of both being determined by the frequency of the power supply.

The recording machine gathers the sound by a special microphone which translates into voltage fluctuations the vibrations caused by sound striking the diaphragm. These minute fluctuations are amplified by a vacuum tube amplifier until they are of sufficient power to operate the device which cuts the permanent record, a disk of soft wax, by means of a needle, just as phonograph records are made. The disk, a very large one, like each reel of film runs for approximately fifteen minutes.

When reproducing, the film and the sound record are set in their respective machines, with a given marker, indicating the starting point, in place. They are coupled to opposite ends of the same motor, the speed of which is held constant by means of a vacuum tube regulator. It is essential that the mechanical gearing be so designed that mechanical vibrations and irregularities of load in the projector should not cause fluctuations in the speed of the phonograph record. To avoid this a flywheel and flexible connections are placed between the last gear-driven shaft and the turn-table of the sound apparatus, which iron out the ripples in speed.

The sound is brought to the audience by an electrical reproducer that converts the movements of the needle in the grooves of the disk into electrical vibrations, which pass to an adaptation of the Western Electric public address system of the type used at conventions and other events.

INJURED, SINGS IN OPERA.

Special to The New York Times.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 6.—Painfully bruised on face and body and with his left hand in splints, Ernest Torti, young Italian baritone with the Zoo Opera Company, sang the rôle of Ford in the performance of "Falstaff" tonight. Until noon it had been feared that the performance would have to be canceled and "Aida" substituted.

Torti, who was an Italian cavalryman during the World War, was in the midst of a brisk canter on an outing yesterday when his horse stepped into a rut and fell on the rider. Companions rushed the singer to the Jewish Hospital, where he was unconscious for more than two hours. His worst injury was a fracture of the left hand.

INSISTS MONOPOLY ON MUSIC EXISTS

FEARS WORLD-WIDE CONTROL

Says It Did Not Hold Anti-Trust Laws Were Violated, but Sought More Stringent Legislation.

Paul B. Klugh, Executive Chairman of the National Association of Broadcasters, in a statement yesterday regarding the exoneration of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers of a charge of being a monopoly, asserted that regardless of the ruling by the Department of Justice, radio broadcasters would find themselves "throttled by a world music monopoly" in the near future unless Congress legislated on that phase of the copyright law. He said it had never been contended that the Society of Composers was a monopoly in the eyes of the law, because they dealt in no tangible commodity. But he maintains that the society does exercise a monopolistic control of 90 per cent. of the rights to music which the public insists on hearing over the radio. His statement said in part:

"There is nothing startling or new in the report carried in the New York newspapers this morning stating that the Department of Justice found that the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers is not a monopoly, and I sincerely hope that no one will be misled by this latest attempt of the society to 'whitewash' their activities. It was clearly pointed out by our attorney, Charles H. Tuttle, at the time of the hearings on the Dill-Vestal bills in April that in the eyes of the present State and Federal monopoly laws the American society deals in no tangible commodity or necessity of life and therefore cannot be prosecuted under any of the existing statutes.

"What is even worse is the fact that unless Congress legislates advisedly in regard to this phase of copyright, broadcasters will soon find themselves throttled by a world music monopoly. I have recently had occasion to talk with broadcasters from Australia, Canada, France and England, and find that the 'modus operandi' of the societies in these countries corresponding to the American society here in the States are practically without exception duplicates of one another. This explains why the American society appeared in Washington in support of the so-called Authors' League bill, which has as its prime purpose entry in the Berne Convention. With the automatic copyright and the free exchange of the rights in which they deal between all countries in the Berne Convention, the world monopoly would be complete and the highest ambitions of the music publishers satisfied."

WOODS BACK FROM EUROPE.

Engaged the Guitrys for Their Repertoire Here at $5,000 a Week.

Several theatrical producers, actors, actresses and dancers arrived yesterday from Europe on the Cunarder Berengaria. Al Woods said that he had engaged the Guitrys for their repertoire of French plays here at a salary of $5,000 a week, and also engaged a new Jewish actor to star in "Potash and Perlmutter" abroad whom he believed would make a big success.

Eva Le Gallienne, the actress-manager, was also a passenger, and said she was going to put on her season of repertoire at the Fourteenth Street Theatre at popular prices ranging from 50 cents to $1.50 for evenings and 35 cents to $1 for matinees. Ibsen plays would be one of the features of her repertoire, she said.

Bee and Doris Jackson, Charleston dancers, returned from a six weeks' engagement in Paris at the Champs Elysees and other theatres, where they made a success, they said, and had return bookings.

"The Salt of the Earth" Produced.

"The Salt of the Earth," a play of New England life by Katherine Searle, is being presented this week-end at Miss Searle's outdoor theatre at Shawme Hill, Sandwich, Mass. The presentation is being made for a fund in aid of the Cape Cod Hospital at Hyannis.

THEATRICAL NOTES.

"The Grand Street Follies" will close at the Neighborhood Playhouse after tomorrow night's performance.

The Ziegfeld office announces that Mr. and Mrs. Jack Dempsey will appear on the stage of the "Ziegfeld Revue" at the Globe Theatre tonight. They will take part in the "Rip Van Winkle" scene, it is said.

Arthur Deacon has been engaged for the Chicago company of "The Vagabond King," which opens on Labor Day.

"The Dancing Duchess," a Viennese operetta which has been produced in Berlin, Vienna and Hamburg, will be presented in New York in September by Paul M. Trebitsch. Joseph J. Garren, who wrote the book, lyrics and music, has made the American adaptation. Mr. Trebitsch's production of "Sunshine," Henry C. White's comedy, in which O. P. Heggie is the featured player, will open at the Lyric Theatre on Aug. 16.

Ned Wayburn's musical comedy, "Fez," will have its premiere in New York on Oct. 18, instead of in Chicago, as first announced.

The Washington Square Players conclude their Summer season of repertory tonight, when the last performance of Shaw's "Getting Married" will be given.

After twelve years with the Neighborhood Playhouse, Lily M. Hyland, composer of the music for "The Grand Street Follies," will leave that organization following the final performance of the revue tomorrow night.

Lawrence Marston will direct "The Jeweled Tree."

PLANT'S 'HEARTBEAT' THRILLS SCIENTISTS

exactly as if the plant before their eyes were a sick human being fighting against death.

Under the influence of one drug the record fell ever more rapidly; then, suddenly, under the influence of a stimulant, there was a curve upward, the plant seemed to be winning, and every spectator leaned forward in breathless excitement watching plants fight for life just as watchers around a bedside would take heart at the rally of a human patient.

At last the stimulant won and the plant "recovered," to the delight of the watchers.

Vivisection of Animals Obviated.

Sir Jagadis told the audience these experiments proved that the existing ideas of plant life were incorrect. He also declared that they rendered unnecessary further vivisection of animals.

So extremely delicate are the instruments used by the Hindu savant in his experiments that he allowed no porter to touch them on his long trip from India, and on the train journey from London to Oxford he carried them on his knee.

One part of the instrument is so delicate that even aluminum was found to be too heavy for it, and Sir Jagadis was at a loss to know what to use until he was suddenly inspired to try a porcupine quill. This gave the needed strength and flexibility, making possible the recording of "life messages" from plants amplified ten million times.

Among those who saw the Hindu experiment recently and was deeply impressed was Professor Einstein, the discoverer of the relativity theory.

Assyrians Lauded As Scientists.

In Mesopotamia skulls have not changed much in the last 5,000 years, according to L. H. Dudley Buxton in his address before the Anthropological Section this afternoon.

He exhibited some 5,000-year-old skulls of the inhabitants of Mesopotamia. Some of them were extremely long skulls and some extremely broad.

Today, among the living inhabitants of the same area, investigation showed no material change in the type of head.

The scientific attainments of the Assyrians of the seventh century B. C. were described by R. Campbell Thompson. They compiled long lists of plants, compounded numerous medicines, knew how to make colors and some principles of geology.

There is every reason to suppose, he said, that we owe our division of time into hours, minutes and seconds to their mathematicians.

Many of the remedies prescribed by Assyrian doctors for various diseases are still in use by modern physicians, he said.

The relation between the discoveries in tombs at Athens and Mycenae and some recently made at Knossos were discussed by Sir Arthur Evans.

Before the Educational Section W. Hamilton Fyfe, Headmaster of Christ's Hospital, emphatically condemned written examinations for pupils. Although the examination might awaken interest in a subject, it often had the effect of destroying interest in learning.

J. P. Strachey, another educator, declared this was not borne out by the careers of scholars after leaving school.

An account of the use of electricity in agriculture was given before the Engineering Section by R. Borlase Matthews. More than 200 electric plows have been successfully employed on the Continent, he said. The engineer should turn his attention to increasing the low rate of efficiency of the present-day plow.

The most suitable equipment, he declared, for the farmer with 150 acres of land would be a tractor which he could use for plowing, harrowing, rolling, seed drilling, harvesting and transport. Electricity for farm purposes is cheaper, he said, than gasoline, owing to its greater immunity from breakdown.

Stability is not the fundamental basis of a prosperous industry, but the governing conditions of its progress and expansion, said Sir Lynden Macassey in an address on the economic aspects of the labor outlook before the Economic Section. The law must be altered, he declared, to provide for the enforcement of collective agreements and to make sympathetic strikes illegal.

He did not think it was possible or right to make all strikes illegal or to attempt to introduce compulsory arbitration.

H. H. Neilson of the National Union of Railwaymen urged that labor be studied and solved scientifically rather than by violence.

Sir Josiah Stamp, who presided over the section, said that the impossibility of forecasting conditions over a period of years was one of the great obstacles to stability.

Biological training would give society a relief from strikes and demagogues, according to Professor J. Graham Kerr in his speech before the Zoological Section.

He urged that the school curriculm be simplified to include only a few subjects, one of the principal ones to be biology. He said that all pupils should be taught the fact of evolution and the reality of the struggle for existence.

A paper by A. M. Woodward on excavations during the last two years at Sparta was read before the Archaeological Section.

The report of the Seismological Committee was presented to the association by Professor H. H. Turner. It indicated how the study of earthquakes is throwing light on the structure of the earth. Seismology indicates, he said, that the core of the earth is fluid.

One of the most interesting addresses of the day was that before the Electrical Association of Sir Oliver Lodge. At one time, he said, the test of civilization was thought to be the amount of soap used, but in future it will be the amount of electricity used.

From a discussion of science Sir Oliver went on to world politics. He said that the human race would derive more benefit from international cooperation than from any cosmopolitan world state.

Sir Thomas Hilland, addressing the education section, discussed the merits of two systems of scientific education. One was a system whereby a student studies half a dozen subjects during the same term, and the other was where a student completed one subject before taking up another.

He thought that the latter, or tandem system, had great advantages.

Dr. C. W. Kimmins discussed the use of motion pictures in education, and J. C. Stobart, teaching by wireless.

Prince Sends for Jimmy the "Cabby."

The Prince of Wales, President of the British Association, who formally opened this year's meeting the day before yesterday, left Oxford this afternoon after attending several lectures and receptions.

But he also found time for less formal matters. At Magdalen College, where he was an undergraduate in pre-war days, he sent for Jimmy Meads, the famous Oxford "cabby."

Jimmy is one of Oxford's most genuine antiques. Hastily brushing himself up, he hurried into the Magdalen Quadrangle, where the Prince was awaiting him.

Jimmy was dressed in his cabman's toggery, green with age, and a gray top hat and he carried an old gnarled stick which he offered to the Prince as a gift. But the heir to the British throne refused it.

"I wouldn't rob you of your precious stick, Jimmy," he said.

Long ago Jimmy used to drive a hansom cab in which the late King Edward VII rode when in Oxford. When the Prince of Wales shook hands with him today those near by say they heard a rustle of banknotes.

Scientists Still Absent-Minded.

Apropos the habits of the scientists now gathered at Oxford, many of whom are as absent-minded as tradition demands, one wag remarked today:

"Oxford has always been the home of lost causes, but just now it is the home of lost umbrellas."

Already a considerable number of umbrellas and other belongings of the assembled scientists have been garnered in by the attendants at the lecture halls, their owners having abandoned them while thinking about Neanderthal skulls and other tremendously important matters.

But though this year's crop of professors is as absent-minded as their caricatures on the stage, the British Association meeting now in progress has proved that they have spruced up sartorially. In fact, many are quite dapper and stylish.

The frayed coats, unpressed trousers, antique hats and lop-sided neckties of tradition have disappeared, at least to a considerable extent.

Moreover, an announcement was made today that there will be a dance during the present meeting, organized by the scientists themselves, on which festive occasion many of the most learned professors intend to abandon the altars of Pallas Athena to pay homage to Terpsichore.

JACKSON'S BATTING WINS FOR GIANTS

RING ALSO SHARES HONORS

By IK SHUMAN.

Travis Jackson led the restless Giants at the Polo Grounds yesterday in another attack on the pitchers of the Reds, and shared honors with Uncle Jimmy Ring, the tall, bald right-hander, in the second auspicious defeat of the Reds in two days. The score was 6 to 3, and Jackson with a single and a homer accounted for four runs which were the undoing of Eppa Jeptha Rixey and his teammates. The victory was the Giants' tenth straight over the Reds.

But alongside the achievement of Jackson should be recorded that of Uncle Jimmy who came into the game just after the start of the first inning. Hugh McQuillan, considered by many a better pitcher than Uncle Jimmy, had been batted out of the box. The Reds had made three runs on four hits, and only one man was down. Uncle Jimmy had to go in and stop them.

And Uncle Jimmy, as the score indicates, did just that. He stopped them good and plenty. The Reds got only five hits off him in the remaining eight and two-thirds innings, three of them as scratchy as can be marked against a pitcher.

Twice the Reds got a man as far as third, but each time Uncle Jimmy bore down hard and the Reds went back into the field as scoreless as they were when the inning started.

Giants Catch Up.

It required just such pitching to give the Giants' batsmen a chance to catch up, and catch up they did, much to the ruination of Rixey who, as a left-hander with a three-run lead had every reason to believe he would win. There was the superstition, for one thing, that the Giants don't hit left-handers, and Rixey is and has been a considerable left-hander these many years.

But the Giants didn't find him hard. Indeed, it looked as if they found him easy, and so, also, must have thought Jack Hendricks; for the manager of the Reds removed Eppa for a pinch hitter in the seventh and allowed Jake May to finish the game. And the Giants, impartial as has been their wont these past few days, scored two runs off Jake to make the victory decisive.

Still it looked very bad for the Giants and the fans who hoped to see them climb quickly into the first division as the game started. Hugh Critz and Ed Roush led with singles to centre, and Roush took second as Al Tyson fumbled the latters' hit. Curt Walker came along at once with a double which scored both Critz and Roush, and it was certain that it was just a matter of time until McQuillan was done. The time came a moment later when Pipp singled sharply past short, scoring Walker, and Uncle Jimmy came in from the bull pen to stop the Reds.

The Giants, with Frank Frisch back in the game and George Kelly again on first, were quite helpless in their half of the first, but Kelly started things in the second by singling sharply to right. He startled his closest friends and warmest admirers on the next play by stealing second, and the way the tall, cumbersome fellow moved down the baseline was something like the rush of a gazellephant toward a salt lick at a water hole. And then Jackson drove him in with a single to centre.

Rixey Bumped in Fourth.

Eppa held the Giants scoreless in the third, but in the fourth Kelly started the forward movement again with another single to right. Tyson beat out a bunt to Rixey, and both men were safe.

That was all until the seventh, the first appearance of May, who as a relief hurler, is to the Reds what Chick Davies is to the Giants. He works a lot without much luck. Young got on first by forcing out Frisch, who had been walked. Freddy Lindstrom hit a ball against the right field wall. It bounded away from Walker, scoring Young and allowing Lindstrom to go to third. Then Lindy scored with the sixth run on a grounder to May by Emil Meusel.

CUBS BEAT PHILS IN TENTH.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 6 (AP).—The Cubs made the most of seven hits to win a ten-inning game from the Phillies today, 2 to 1. Three of the seven hits were bunched in the seventh to produce one run, and Wilson's double in the tenth scored the winning marker.

Three hurlers worked for the Cubs and the trio held the Phillies to three hits, all being made off Blake. As a result of the victory Chicago made it three straight from the Phillies and four victories in a row.

YANKEES WIDEN GAP AS RUTH HITS 35TH

By JAMES R. HARRISON.

Special to The New York Times.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 6.—The Yankees edged past the Indians for another victory today, 8 to 7, making it two out of three for the series and eight out of fourteen from the Tribe for the season. The game was no part of a runaway romp, the tying run being on second when Waite Hoyt closed out the entertainment by fanning McNulty.

With only a few precincts missing, the Yanks are coasting in on a landslide. Although it was cunningly pointed out by Clark Griffith several weeks ago that the Yanks had cracked, the Hugmen will stagger into Detroit tomorrow morning with the slight lead of eleven games.

This isn't much of a lead, but still it represents the biggest margin that the Yanks have had this season. They are ambitious young fellows and hope to do better as they go along.

Babe Ruth hit his second homer in two days, in the fifth, the current wallop being a sightly poke over the towering fence in right centre field. The smack had whiskers on it. It shot like a bullet into the air, skipped over the barrier and would have crashed into a house if the ball hadn't hit a telephone cable and fallen into the street.

25 Games Behind Record.

This Big Bertha was George's thirty-fifth of the season in his 106th game, which still leaves him twenty-five games behind his 1921 record pace.

In the ninth, with New York two runs ahead, Spurgeon bunted safely and scored on Joe Sewell's double after two had passed out. Uhle batted for Summa and Huggins withdrew E. Garland Braxton in favor of Hoyt. Speaker gave Uhle the air and sent McNulty to bat, but Mac, with the count three and two, let a strike slide by.

Urban Shocker was knocked in the fifth. The Yanks rolled up a big early lead on Emil Levsen, hitherto a tough nut for the Yanks to crack.

The Yanks filled the bases with one out in the first on singles by Combs and Koenig and Ruth's walk. Paschal singled off Levsen's glove, scoring Combs. Koenig scored on an infield out, and both Ruth and Paschal wended home when Burns muffed a toss to first. Burns hit his fiftieth double in the same inning and fetched in Jamieson and Spurgeon, who had singled. George went to third on J. Sewell's hit, but Shocker was lucky. Summa lined to Koenig and Burns was doubled up.

Gehrig got a two-bagger in the third and Levsen then walked Ruth and hit Paschal. Lazzeri's fly scored Gehrig, which was all the Yanks could get out of the bases-full-and-none-out situation.

After Ruth's homer in the firth it was 6 to 2, but Shocker broke down like the one-hoss shay in the same inning. Levsen singled. So did Spurgeon. Speaker doubled. So did Burns. With the tying run on second and one out, Undertaker Braxton was called into conference. The Indians didn't score.

The Yanks put over the clinching votes in the seventh. Koenig and Gehrig singled, Ruth was passed to clog the bases with none out. Carlyle, hitting for Paschal, didn't hit. He fanned. Lazzeri popped to Summa, but Dugan saved the day with a single to left, scoring two.

Indians Get Odd Tally.

The Cleveland run in the eighth was a quaint affair. After L. Sewell's walk and Lutzke's single, Lee flied to Combs. Knode, running for Lutzke, was clear around second, but Gehrig was not covering first. Combs rolled a ridiculous throw nowhere near first. Sewell dashed around third and when nobody covered the plate he kept on going. Dugan dashed in, but Gehrig's fling carried past him.

Burns, first baseman of the Indians, hit his fiftieth, fifty-first and fifty-second doubles. Eight more and he will pass Speaker's record for both leagues.

Rifleman Averages 98.5 at Rapid Fire And 100 at Quick Fire, Setting a Record

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—A record which, in the opinion of army gunnery experts, has never been equaled has been made by Major S. M. Montesinas of the Eighteenth Infantry, stationed at Fort Slocum, N. Y., according to a report to the War Department today.

At timed firing of ten shots, thirty seconds being allowed for each string of five on army target "L" at twenty-five yards, he made a score of 98 out of a possible 100. At rapid fire of ten shots at fifteen yards on target "L," eleven seconds being allowed for each string of five shots, he made the maximum score of 100.

At rapid fire of ten shots at twenty-five yards on target "L," fifteen seconds being allowed for each string of five shots, he made a score of 97 out of a possible 100. His rapid fire average was thus 98.5.

At quick firing of fifteen shots at twenty-five yards on target "E," three seconds being allowed for each shot, he scored 15 hits, or a percentage of 100.

His percentage for the whole course was 98.83. Target "L" is a rectangle six feet high and four feet wide, with a central black circular bullseye five inches in diameter. The value of each hit in the bullseye is 10. Seven rings surround the bullseye.

Target "E" is a cardboard silhouette, painted olive drab, about the height of a man in a kneeling position. All hits count one. The target is hinged and is exposed to view three seconds for each shot.

SUNDAY SPORT WAR ON IN PHILADELPHIA

Mayor Kendrick Says He Will Oppose Baseball With All of His Power.

TEST PLANS PROCEED

Attorney for Athletics Declares Police Can't Interfere if There Is No Breach of Peace.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 6 (AP).—Sunday baseball in this city will be opposed by all the powers of the present Administration, Mayor W. Freeland Kendrick announced today.

The managers of the Athletics, Philadelphia American League Club, recently stated their intention of playing one Sunday game to test the legality of the Sunday closing law of 1794, under which the sport has long been banned in Philadelphia and most other Pennsylvania cities. This brought today's announcement by the Mayor and he was supported by an opinion from City Solicitor Joseph P. Gaffney.

Counsel for the Athletics responded by saying the game would be played whether the Chief Executive consented or not, and that under the law city authorities could not make arrests for violations of the law until the following day. He said the police would possess no power of interference if the game were played without breach of the peace.

Will Do All to Stop It.

"I am opposed to the playing of professional baseball on Sunday," said the Mayor, "and not only will I refuse permission for the game, but I will use the power of my Administration, including the Law Department and the Department of Public Safety to prevent it."

Mayor Kendrick denied there was any similarity between the opening of the Sesquicentennial Exposition on Sunday and the contemplated opening of the professional baseball parks.

"The former," he said, "is educational, patriotic and recreational in character, and, in my judgment, does not conflict in any way with the laws of Pennsylvania covering Sunday observance."

Defies the Mayor.

"The playing of Sunday baseball does not depend on Mayor Kendrick's permission," said Charles G. Gartling, attorney for the Philadelphia Americans. "If a game is so conducted that no breach of the peace occurs the police are without authority to interfere. I hope to convince the Mayor of the soundness of our position in this respect.

"The Sunday laws specify that warrants for the arrest of alleged violators shall not be served on Sunday. If the Mayor insists on sending police to the ball game to interfere we shall be compelled to seek our remedy in the courts. I shall seek to persuade the Mayor not to have the police commit a breach of the peace by interfering with the baseball game."

PIRATES TRIUMPH, BUT LOSE WRIGHT

PITTSBURGH LEADS EARLY

Jumps Ahead Two Runs in First on Traynor's Double—Good Fielding Saves Yde.

BOSTON, Aug. 6 (AP).—Although Pittsburgh defeated the Braves, 5 to 4, here today, gaining a three out of four edge on Boston in the current series, the champions lost the services, for a few days at least, of Glenn Wright. The Pirate shortstop injured his right leg when he slid into second after a long double in the seventh inning. He was removed to a hospital for examination, but it was believed that the injury was not of a serious nature.

Pittsburgh jumped into the lead in the opening inning when a double by Traynor with two out gave the Pirates two runs. The Braves reached Yde for nine hits, but clever fielding kept ten men stranded on the sacks.

Pickups and Putouts

Next to Kelly's steal of second at the Polo Grounds yesterday the most surprising play of the day was Frank Snyder beating out a bunt. And no one seemed more surprised than Frank.

In fact, the Giants beat out three bunts yesterday, two of them to Charley Dresson at third, who was slow in getting down on them. Critz got a base on one in the ninth to Lindstrom, who let it roll, thinking it would go foul.

Frisch got a single in the third which missed being a homer by twelve inches, just the distance under the top of the left field grand stand wall where it hit. It bounced right into Christensen's hands.

Critz made a beautiful running backhand stop with his gloved hand in the fourth of a grounder by Young, depriving Ross of a hit. Critz made a similar stop on Thursday.

Frisch was limping at second yesterday, but played almost as well as usual. His return to the line-up was made necessary by the pitching of a lefthander, because McGraw feels that his lefthanders can't hit well against offside pitching.

There will be a doubleheader today starting at 1:45 o'clock. Greenfield and Fitzsimmons will pitch for the Giants, while the Reds will use Luque and Mays.

DESPONDENT ROBINS LOSE ANOTHER, 7-3

HERMAN MISSES BIG CHANCE

His Homer With 2 On Puts Flock Ahead in Third, but He Fails With Bases Full in Ninth.

By RICHARDS VIDMER.

The slumbering Babe Herman awoke from his slump for a moment at Ebbets Field yesterday and swung his mighty bat. With two Robins perched on the bases, he drove a homer over the right-field fence, breaking a scoreless tie.

But that happened in the third inning. When he came up in the ninth the Cardinals had crept ahead and were leading by 7 to 3. The bases were loaded and ready to be emptied by another circuit smash, which would tie the score.

The Flatbush faithful cheered hopefully as Herman tossed aside his extra bat and planted his feet for the effort. But the best he could do was ground out to the third baseman, and the game was over with the score unchanged.

As a result of this, the third successive setback by the Cardinals, the Flatbush Flock sank deeper into a state of despondency. There was a time when the Robins saw prospects of a pennant. It was only a mirage. Then came a time when they fought for a place in the first division. That passed in the night. Now they're struggling to keep in the league.

Outlook Rosy at Start.

When Buzz McWeeny started in against the Cardinals it seemed that at last the Flock would win a game from the Western warriors. It seemed more certain when Herman hit his homer and sent the Robins into a 3-0 lead. But with the fourth inning the Cardinals started their drive, and before the fifth had ended they had driven McWeeny from the box and themselves into the lead by 5 to 3.

Rube Ehrhardt stopped the onslaught for the time being, but in the seventh it broke out anew and two more runs were hung up on the St. Louis side. Rube was relieved for a pinch hitter, and Jess Barnes took up the burden. Barnes pitched perfectly the rest of the way, but he had arrived too late.

The damage already had been done and the Robins could do nothing to alter matters, for, except for that one blow of the Babe's, not another scoring hit was made off the left-handed delivery of Arthur Reinhart.

zStandaert, as a pinch hitter, and Fewster started the seventh with singles, but a double play stopped that attack, and after DeBerry's single and passes to Fewster and Felix had filled the bases with two out in the ninth Herman ended the game.

McWeeny Handled Roughly.

Before the Babe hit his homer, McWeeny had been hit by a pitched ball and Felix had singled. These two got the benefit of the ride. But the Cards got one tally on a single by Douhit and Reinhart's triple in the fourth, and they fell on McWeeny for five hits, accepted a base on balls as a gift and scored four runs in the fifth, giving them the lead. Their last two runs resulted from a single, a double, a sacrifice and another single in the seventh.

CONFERENCES KEEP DEMPSEY OCCUPIED

MINIMIZES WILLS INCIDENT

Declares He Expected Something of the Sort and Didn't Want to Go to Garden.

Jack Dempsey spent yesterday quietly, after the excitement of Thursday night occasioned by his unexpected meeting with his negro challenger, Harry Wills, in Madison Square Garden. Most of the time he was in the Ritz Carlton, where his presence was required at a succession of conferences.

Promoter Tex Rickard saw the titleholder on several important matters, but neither promoter nor champion made any announcement.

Dempsey then was closeted with his attorney, Arthur F. Driscoll, discussing plans for meeting the threatened court action by the Chicago Coliseum Club in Indianapolis. Rickard also went over the details of B. C. Clements's alleged contract. Dempsey pointed out to the promoter, as he has to boxing writers on several occasions since his arrival here, that the purported contract does not constitute a serious menace despite the court action Clements has instituted. Dempsey insisted the deal was voided as far as he and the Clements syndicate were concerned, when the syndicate failed on the first payment of $125,000 on March 13.

Takes Outburst Lightly.

"Those are things you must expect when you get in the public eye," said the champion. "I more or less expected something of the sort and hesitated about accepting Mr. Rickard's invitation to attend the bouts for that reason. What I suspected would happen did happen and I was not altogether surprised. Tex got worked up over it, but he gets hot-headed some times and just couldn't stand to see the thing put over. It was a plant without doubt, but I don't mind such things.

"I'm going to hang around until Monday without doing any work. Tomorrow we'll go for a ride out in the country and spend the day quietly. On Monday morning I intend to do a little road work around Central Park and in the afternoon I think I'll have a light drill at Stillman's Gymnasium.

To See Board Tuesday.

"Tuesday I'll appear before the State Athletic Commission with my application for a license and on Tuesday night I'll be ready to start for Saratoga if the license application is O. K.'d. Then for the training grind which will fit me for the fight with Tunney."

Promoter Tex Rickard announced receipt of a request from a group of Detroit sportsmen for 1,000 seats to the Dempsey-Tunney fight, and with the request came the information that the party had chartered a special train which would make the trip in three sections.

Tiger Flowers, middleweight champion, and Tommy Loughran, Philadelphia light heavy, are to join Dempsey's training staff.

TIGER MISPLAYS COSTLY.

Five Detroit Errors Help Senators to Win by 12 to 8.

DETROIT, Aug. 6 (AP).—Five Detroit errors contributed to Washington's 12-to-8 victory over the Tigers today. Two of these misplays came in the sixth, when the Senators scored five runs and knocked Wells out of the box.

The Tigers filled the bases in the eighth, with one out, but Marberry went to Morrell's relief and retired the side.

CHILEAN WEAKENS NEAR END

Gains Early Lead, but Is Badly Punished in Last 4 Rounds—White Stops Felix.

By JAMES P. DAWSON.

A frenzied crowd of 20,000 fight fans at the Coney Island Stadium last night saw Ace Hudkins, Nebraska's famed wildcat, fight twelve furious rounds with Stanislaus Loayza, Chilean lightweight, to a draw. The Wildcat, conqueror of Ruby Goldstein a month ago, had his teeth bared and his claws sharpened and exposed; he snapped and clawed at his enemy through a dozen sizzling rounds, but never found a vital spot.

He wasn't tamed, but he met his match in a lad who knows nothing of retreat and who has courage and the resistance to punishment equal to that of Hudkins, and he left the ring sharing the honors with the boy from South America, who was expected by many to crumple before the Wildcat's onslaught as did the Ruby of the east side.

The greatest gathering to jam its way into the Coney Island Stadium this year witnessed the battle, making the journey to the seashore despite a discouraging mist which fell just as the fistic carnival started, and there was none in the gathering to question the justification of the draw decision. It was an evenly fought, thrilling battle in which neither asked nor gave quarter; one of the best bouts seen here in years.

Judges George Kelly and Charlie Draycott and Referee Patsy Haley gave the decision, but the details of the vote were not announced.

Loayza Weakens Near End.

On a reckoning of the rounds Loayza had a shade the better of it, with five rounds to Hudkins's four, while three sessions were even. But, the State Athletic Commission's suggested method of deciding fights by rounds notwithstanding, Hudkins earned the draw through his work in the last four rounds when he all but knocked out his rival. He had Loayza staggering and reeling through those closing rounds.

It is likely Hudkins would have knocked out Loayza if the bout had gone fifteen rounds, but the stout heart, undying courage and unflagging spirit of the Chilean kept him on his feet despite the furious onslaught of the Nebraskan. He was knocked off balance, sent staggering back helplessly to the ropes and was almost bent double under the impact of Hudkins's vicious smashes to the body, but always the Chilean recovered to fight back and stem the tide which would envelop him.

Hudkins called on everything he had in that rally, starting with the ninth round and sustained until the final bell. He pounded his rival all over the ring in a steadied fire of both hands, but, though he had his rival in distress, Hudkins could not land on a vital spot with a punch such as that which crushed Ruby Goldstein, and Loayza gallantly survived the storm.

Result Is a Surprise.

The result was something of a surprise to the talent. Hudkins entered the ring a 7 to 5 favorite to win and by many was expected to knock out Loayza, on the theory that Loayza's weakness as a hitter would be the Chilean's greatest handicap. But with the start of the battle it was patent that Loayza would give the Wildcat plenty of trouble, and as the bout progressed this fact was more and more emphasized.

Holding Hudkins even in the first two rounds, Loayza unleashed a long-range method of fighting with the third round which had Hudkins completely at sea and robbed the Wildcat of his effectiveness. The Chilean hooked, jabbed and crossed both hands to the head in rapid-fire order, on occasion landing as many as four left hooks to the face in rapid succession without a return.

At long range Hudkins was lost, for his wild swings were evaded by the Chilean, and at close quarters the efforts of Hudkins were neutralized because, though he ripped and tore at Loayza's body and head, the Chilean managed to tantalize his rival with annoying, snappy lefts and rights to the head in these head-to-head exchanges.

Loayza Increases Lead.

Through the third, fourth, fifth, sixth and seventh round Loayza outboxed his rival, without, however, diminishing Hudkins's furious fighting spirit. The Ace plunged in, tore after his rival and banged away viciously with both hands to the body at close quarters in these rounds, but the superior work of Loayza at long range more than evened the score for Hudkins's smashing fire.

Hudkins crashed a terrific right to the jaw in the third round, but Loayza pluckily came back and smacked his rival about the head and face with left hooks and right crosses. In the fourth Hudkins's wicked digs to the body and poke to the ribs hurt Loayza, but the Chilean never retreated. On the contrary, he kept dancing around Hudkins, pecking and poking with lefts and rights to the head and outpunching Hudkins in rapid-fire exchanges which had the crowd yelling wildly. It was the same through the fifth, sixth and seventh rounds.

With the eighth, however, the effect of Hudkins's wicked body smashes began to show and Loayza slowed up. Hudkins staggered his rival and sent Loayza to the ropes early in the round with a left and right to the body and a right to the jaw after Loayza had ripped a right uppercut to the face, but the Chilean returned to the milling and by boxing well earned an even break on the round.

Thereafter the battle was all in favor of Hudkins. He pressed the attack with the ninth round, stunned and staggered Loayza with a vicious fire which had Loayza in distress in each of the closing four rounds. He fought his hardest to score a knockout, but Loayza withstood the battering, saving himself by clinching more than once, and was on his feet at the final bell.

Hudkins weighed 136¼ pounds, being over the 135-pound notch stipulated in the bout contracts, and therefore lost a forfeit of $1,000. Loayza weighed 134 pounds.

Another surprise came in the scheduled twelve-round semi-final, placed in the ring after the main event when rain threatened to interrupt the card.

RICHARDS SUBDUES ALONSO

Scores His Second Leg on Bowl in Men's Singles When He Wins, 6-2, 10-8, 6-2.

By ALLISON DANZIG.

SEABRIGHT, N. J., Aug. 6.—Miss Helen Wills, American convalescent tennis champion, made a brave attempt to do today what she was unable to accomplish last year in the vigor of robust health, and failed. For the second successive year Miss Elizabeth Ryan of California, second ranking player of the country, defeated Miss Wills in the final round of the jubilee tournament of the Seabright Lawn Tennis and Cricket Club, 6—4, 6—1.

The victory, as last year's, which was won at 6—3, 6—3, was clearly earned. Miss Ryan not only had greater physical resources but employed the same varying attack that baffled Miss Wills in their former meeting, wearing her opponent down with low, skidding chops, which induced error making and prepared the way for finishing volley shots. Shortening her length at opportune moments, she trapped Miss Wills with delicately shaved drop shots just over the net.

The champion, fighting a losing battle from the start, won the heartfelt sympathy of the thousands in the gallery with her unflagging efforts. Her strength, still below normal as the result of her operation, was unequal to the demands of the spirit.

Wins in 38 Minutes.

Miss Ryan, concentrating on her task without ever losing sight of her objective or relaxing pressure, forced her openings inexorably with changes of length and direction, attacked Miss Wills's back hand until all the sting was drawn from it, and before the end was reached, 38 minutes after Samuel Hardy called play, had reduced her opponent to an almost helpless state.

Constantly in pursuit of the ball, hurried in her stroking, and unable to sustain control in stroking Miss Ryan's guileful chops, Miss Wills lost both pace and trajectory and her drives found the net an insurmountable barrier. In the closing stages, the gallery was touched to pity by the sight of the champion sending back soft high returns instead of those magnificent battering forehanders which have carried her to the top for three years.

Not only was the final of the women's singles a repetition of last year's result, but the concluding round of the men's singles also. Vincent Richards won his second leg on the men's bowl by defeating Manuel Alonso, 6—2, 10—8, 6—2.

Two semi-final matches in the mixed doubles completed the program for the day. Miss Wills, paired with Edward Chandler, returned to the courts to gain a victory over Mrs. Molla Mallory and William Tilden, 6—3, 5—7, 6—3. Miss Ryan and Cranston Holman of Stanford University defeated Miss Eleanor Goss and Wallace Johnson of Philadelphia, 6—4, 6—2, in the other match. The final will be played tomorrow, along with the finals in the men's and women's doubles.

Gallery Largest in Years.

The gallery that gathered here for the final matches in singles was one of the largest in years. All three sections of the stands were filled to capacity, hundreds stood on chairs in back of the fence around the courts, while as many more overflowed on the turf. Undoubtedly it was the match between Miss Wills and Miss Ryan that was largely responsible for the size of the attendance.

The courts were a bit heavy with moisture, but the footing was much better than last year, when the turf was slippery from rain. Thus no responsibility could be laid to the conditions for whatever the outcome might be.

It did not take more than a few minutes for the gallery to appreciate the difficulty of the task facing Miss Wills. At the very start Miss Ryan began to play her cards just as she had been expected to. Chopping on almost every shot, playing to Miss Wills's backhand continually and using that crafty drop shot that completely stumped the champion last year, Miss Ryan took the first two games at 4—2 entirely on Miss Wills's errors and gained a lead of 40—15 in the third.

Here Miss Ryan hit into one of her few streaks of faulty stroking and Miss Wills was able to break through. The champion aroused the hopes of her admirers when she swept through the second game at 4—1 to tie the count, scoring two of her points on placements, one of them on a lob that caught Miss Ryan rushing to the net.

Two more placements at the start of the fifth game, one of them a remarkable return of Miss Ryan's chop to her backhand, made from a stooping position, gave the champion a lead of 30—0 and an excellent chance to break through. But this was one of the several opportunities which Miss Wills wasted. Her backhand failed to stand up for her against Miss Ryan's sliced drives, and the latter took four points in a row, the last one on a drop shot.

At this stage Miss Wills was hitting out with good length, but her drives lacked their customary forcefulness. The impression was gained that she was conserving her energies as much as possible to finish strong. There was none of the aggressiveness to her play that characterized the work of Miss Ryan, who was hitting out from both wings with vigorous sweeps of her arm and following the ball like a hawk, with nimble, springy steps.

The score went to 4—all on service, and then Miss Wills had another big chance, gaining a lead of 30—0 on Miss Ryan's service in the ninth. Again she failed to rise to the occasion, dropping four points in succession, and Miss Ryan broke through in the tenth for the set, bringing off two kill shots of Miss Wills's lobs.

The loss of the set gave Miss Wills to understand that she must put more into her strokes than she had, and she started out in the first game of the second chapter by adding pace to her drives. But the harder she hit the ball the less she was able to maintain control, and Miss Ryan rushed through the game at love.

In the second Miss Wills, serving with much more power, gained a lead of 40—0 with the aid of two aces. Here she threatened to throw away another opportunity, as she lost the next four points, but recovered and aroused the gallery with four placements shots, keeping Miss Ryan on the run and retrieving a drop shot.

This was the last game that Miss Wills won. She made a desperate fight for the fourth, but finally lost it at 8—6, double faulting on the last point. The last two games also went to deuce. The champion took cruel punishment in trying to maintain position, but Miss Ryan's relentless chops to the corners and changes of pace were too much for her.

In the sixth game Miss Wills led at 40—15, only to have Miss Ryan score five placements in succession on cross-court drives, a kill at the net and trap shots. In the final game, with the score at 40—15 in Miss Ryan's favor, Miss Wills made a last brave-hearted effort and pulled up to deuce. But Miss Ryan attacked with her back-hand and the inevitable errors resulted, bringing the match to a close.

Women Golfers to Pit Their Skill Against That of Men Stars Today

The Misses Collett, Orcutt, Fordyce and Wall Will Meet Marston, Anderson, Mackenzie and Dick Jones at Fairfield—Male Stars to Concede Seven Bisques—Other Golf News.

By WILLIAM D. RICHARDSON.

Is the female of the golf species as deadly as the male? Up at the Country Club of Fairfield's magnificent golf course skirting the Sound the question as to which is the deadlier of the two will be answered this afternoon.

There will be a test of strength between four of the leading men and women golfers. Max R. Marston, former national amateur champion; John G. Anderson, the French amateur champion; Roland Mackenzie, chosen on the American Walker Cup side this year, and Richard A. Jones Jr., semi-finalist in last year's amateur championship, will oppose Miss Glenna Collett, the national champion; Miss Maureen Orcutt, the metropolitan champion; Miss Bernice Wall, the Wisconsin State champion, and Miss Louise Fordyce, the North and South champion.

It will not be a conclusive test, however, for the men will attempt to win in spite of a concession of seven bisques to their fair opponents, but it will furnish at least a basis for comparison.

This will be the third time that the test has been held. The Country Club of Fairfield, furnished the idea, no doubt, by England, where mixed matches and men versus women matches are quite the vogue—a feature of the golf year—organized the tournament in 1924. That year the teams were made up of Marston, who held the amateur title; Jess Sweetser, 1922 champion; Francis Ouimet, former national open and amateur champion, and Anderson on the one side and Miss Edith Cummings, the women's champion; Miss Collett, Miss Marion Hollins, 1921 national champion, and Mrs. Quentin Feitner, six-time metropolitan champion.

In the absence of any previous records on which to base judgment, it was decided to give the ladies five bisques. Except in one instance it wasn't enough, for the men won, 3 points to 1. Marston, off his game, lost to Miss Cummings, 3 and 2, and she had two bisques left at the finish. The others, except for Anderson, won rather handily.

Last year it was decided to concede another bisque to the ladies, making six in all, and still the men won. Only one match went to the home green, and that was one between Sweetser and Miss Collett. The others were easy for the men, Ouimet defeating Mrs. Dorothy Campbell Hurd, the national champion, by 6 and 5; R. A. Jones beating Mrs. C. H. Vanderbeck, former champion, by 5 and 4, and D. Clarke Corkran winning from Miss Wall by 4 and 3.

To give the women their just dues, however, it should be stated that the men, two of them at least, played remarkable golf. Sweetser, for example, had a 70, which equaled Nate Wheeler's amateur course record, against Miss Collett's 78, while Ouimet had a 68, breaking the amateur record and equaling the professional record held by Jack Minor of Bethlehem, N. H., in defeating Mrs. Hurd.

The addition of another bisque may make a difference this year, and the fact that Ouimet and Sweetser are unable to play may also help. At any rate, the women are hopeful of finally turning the tables.

In addition to the team matches, which are to be played this afternoon, there will be the usual mixed foursomes, the first round of which is to be played this morning, with the finals at eighteen holes tomorrow afternoon. The pairings for the men against women matches will be as follows: Marston vs. Miss Collett, Mackenzie vs. Miss Wall, Jones vs. Miss Fordyce and Anderson vs. Miss Orcutt.

Long before the New York State championship was held Tommy Kerrigan waxed enthusiastic over the golf future of Al Brodbeck, who turned out to be the winner, succeeding Jack Mackie Jr. to the throne. Brodbeck joined the Siwanoy Club only this year and came under the eye of Kerrigan, who is the professional there.

"There's a youngster who will make his mark some day soon," said Kerrigan in speaking of Brodbeck on the way out to the open championship this year. "He's only 18 and he's got a lot to learn, but he's willing and has ambition." Kerrigan's prediction came true almost as soon as it was made, for on Sunday morning, bright and early, there was Brodbeck at the club with the enormous Ganson Depew Trophy, emblematic of the State championship, clasped in his arms. Brodbeck is an all-round athletic star at Mount Vernon High School, his forte being football.

N. Y. A. C. CREW WINS FROM NEW ROCHELLE

YOUNG WRIGHT IS BEATEN

Bows to Agnew in Association Final After Great Race—Is Exhausted at the Finish.

By ROBERT F. KELLEY.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 6.—With the real start of the senior championships today the Sesquicentennial regatta of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen came into its own here afternoon.

From first to last the competition was real and vivid, from the opening for fours to the sensational, smashing victory of the New York A. C. intermediate eight that closed the day of rowing.

There were finishes throughout that had the crowd which lined the banks at the end of the course roaring with excitement. Joe Wright's boy went to defeat at last in singles, falling before Robert Agnew of the Undine in the association final, but the biggest thrill of the day was saved for the last, when the two New York boat loads slammed across the finish so close together that the gun in the judges' stand sounded like a repeating rifle.

Conditions Are Excellent.

Conditions were again excellent today for the oarsmen. A cooling breeze took most of the sting away from the sun and was again at the backs of the contestants. By the time the New York A. C. and New Rochelle crews paddled to the start the water was like a mill-pond, with the breeze coming fairly strong from upstream.

Right down the pair fought almost on even terms and coming to the mile mark New Rochelle jumped to a beat of thirty-six or thirty-seven and began coming up a bit. New York answered well, but to those on the banks, fooled by the angle, it looked as though New Rochelle had caught its rival and gone out.

The Athletic Club answered during those last few strokes and, holding its form beautifully, kept the nose of the shell out in front by the margin of not more than six or seven feet. There was two-fifths of a second difference in time, 6:27 2-5 and 6:27 4-5.

The association single sculls was a repetition of the race in the heat yesterday, with the exception that Agnew did not wait so long for his spurt today. Albert Nufer, the lone Cuban entrant, and Bernard Viermeyer, the Baltimore sculler, scratched from the event, left the water to the two others.

Wright Takes Lead Early.

Again today, Joe, youthful replica of his huge father, went out into the lead and held it for most of the first mile. But this chap Agnew had more left, a good deal more left. Young Joe, with a program of two or three races a day, as well as his sweepswinging in the Penn A. C. eight, had been doing too much racing.

Coming up to Peter's Island and the last quarter mile, Agnew, sculling beautifully, had opened up open water, and if Wright was to make a bid he would have to make it right there. But he had no real bid to make. Instead, those watching from the finish were treated to the sight of Agnew going over in front and taking Wright's water away for a few strokes, washing him on the starboard side for a few fleeting moments as though to show him then and there that he was licked.

Agnew went back to his own water and Wright, with what he had left, proceeded to show the watchers on the bank that there was nothing the matter with his heart.

He had plenty of open water to make up and far too short a distance to do it in, but that did not prevent trying, and he had brought back a few precious feet at the finish, but Agnew had a full length and a half and was sitting up with a broad smile on his face. Young Joe was pretty well exhausted.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Royalty met with better fortune in the sailing races today, the last of Cowes Week. The King's cutter Britannia won the race for big yachts for the first time during the week and Crown Prince Olaf of Norway took second prize in the international six-meter class with his yacht Oslo. King George was on the Britannia today and will remain aboard over the week-end. Sir Thomas Lipton's Shamrock was unfortunate in losing the race, as she had a good lead until she broke her spinnaker boom.

FARRELL IS LEADING IN CANADIAN OPEN

His Total of 140 Is a Stroke Better Than Sarazen's for First Two Rounds.

MONTREAL, Aug. 6 (AP).—Johnny Farrell of Mamaroneck, N. Y., led the field at the end of the second round of the Canadian open golf championship with a round of 71 today, which gave him an aggregate of 140.

Farrell was followed closely by Gene Sarazen, Jamaica, N. Y., who headed the list yesterday with Farrell at the end of the first eighteen holes. Today Sarazen had to be satisfied with a 72, which gave him an aggregate of 141.

Bracketed in third place were Leo Diegel, White Plains, N. Y., defending champion, who made a 70 for a total of 143, and Joe Turnesa, who scored 68, as compared with his 75 yesterday.

Others who may be conceded a chance at the championship are Bill Creavy, Larchmont, N. Y., who was second lowest scorer today with a 69; MacDonald Smith, Great Neck, N. Y., whose aggregate is 144 as a result of par 73 this afternoon, and C. R. Murray, Royal Montreal, 145.

Those with scores of 160 and under will play in the third and fourth rounds, which will wind up the tournament tomorrow. Sixty-three qualified, including five amateurs, the latter group led by C. Ross Somerville of London, Ontario, Canadian amateur champion, with an aggregate of 152.

Special to The New York Times.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Aug. 6.—Maxie Rosenbloom of New York, after a poor first round in which he sustained a cut eye, came back and knocked out Jamaica Kid in the sixth round of the feature bout at the Ocean View A. A. here tonight. Rosenbloom weighed 165 and Jamaica Kid 174. The bouts were staged under the auspices of the Elks for the Crippled Kiddie Fund and a capacity crowd attended. Governor Harry A. Moore and Newton A. K. Bugbee, state boxing commissioner in telegrams, both regretted their inability to be present.

ADAMS TRIUMPHS IN R CLASS SERIES

SOUND BOATS IN RUCK

Bob Kat and Doress in Tie for Third—Three Eastern Craft Tie for Second.

By SEABURY LAWRENCE.

Special to The New York Times.

MARBLEHEAD, Mass., Aug. 6.—Gossoon, the R class sloop owned and sailed by Charles Francis Adams, crack skipper of the Eastern Yacht Club fleet, today won the Eastern Yacht Club Ladies' Plate when she finished first in the fourth division, running up a total of 16 points.

Three of the other Eastern boats—Ellen, owned by C. P. Curtis; Mary, the property of C. H. W. Foster, and Bonnie Kate, owned by Dr. Morton Prince—were tied for second place after today's race with 15 each, while the runners-up for the New York fleet were R. B. Meyer's Bob Kat and Robert Law's Doress, which had each accumulated 13 points in the series. This is the second successive year that Adams has won the trophy.

Bob Kat, sailed well by C. Sherman Hoyt in today's race, was the winner in the first division, the only one of the Long Island Sound fleet to finish in front. The race was held in light and puffy easterly winds and with a long ground swell occasionally rolling the wind out of the sails. The wind veered from southeast at the start to east and north of east as the race progressed, with calm streaks intermingled.

Adams Uncanny as Sailor.

Today's victory was the fourth straight for Gossoon and Captain Adams, and establishes the Adams yacht, when sailed by Adams, as decidedly the class of the sixteen R Class sloops that have competed here. There is something almost uncanny about the Adams system of handling a racing yacht, and his great skill nullified the best efforts of the opposing skippers.

If it had not been for Tuesday's disqualification, when Gossoon finished in front but was thrown out because of passing on the wrong side of a mark, the former skipper of the cup defender Resolute would have won five straight races with Gossoon, which is a new boat this year, embodying many of the skipper's own ideas as to the best lines for an R boat. E. Sherman Hoyt, one of the crack Long Island Sound skippers here, probably showed the sentiment of the day when he said after the final race:

The Long Island Sound team was badly outscored in the point totals, garnering only 76, against the Eastern division's 113. However, there were only seven New York boats competing, as against nine of the Eastern sloops. This was somewhat equalized by the disqualification of five Eastern boats on Tuesday.

In today's race when light and streaky winds rippled a gray sea, the outstanding combats were between Bob Kat and Scapa II, in the first division and Gossoon and Ellen in the fourth unit. It was a windward and leeward race from the starting line off Marblehead Rock, three and three-quarter miles south southeast, to Newcombs Ledge gas buoy and return to the committee boat, a total of seven and one-half miles.

Although Bob Kat made a poor start, being forced off the starting line by Scapa II, Astrild and Ardelle, she went well after she finally got away and nipped Scapa at the weather mark by twelve seconds.

Bob Kat was in the second berth as they neared the turn, but Skipper Hoyt carried his adversary far beyond the mark and as a result went into the lead. It was a bit of clever sailing by the Bob Kat's skipper and it resulted in the only win for the New York boats during the day. Gossoon beat the Mary on the windward leg and increased her lead on the run to the finish.

Yankee Gets Into Stride.

Yankee, which captured the Manhasset Bay Cup last year at Indian Harbor for the Eastern fleet, finally got going today and was an easy winner in the second division, while Rebel, owned by J. J. Moebs, sailed away from three Long Island Sound boats—Quiver, Doress and Grayling—in the third division.

A big fleet is gathering in the harbor for the first regatta of the Eastern club's annual race against the Eastern R class in this regatta and on Monday the first of three races for the Manhasset Bay Cup will be sailed.

SANDE HOME FIRST ON TWO OUTSIDERS

Hustles 8-to-1 Shots in Ahead of Favorites in Both of Saratoga Features.

TRIUMPHS ON RUTHENIA

Beats Corvette in Test Stakes for Fillies—Takes Hudson Stakes With Mettlesome Flagsaff.

By HENRY R. ILSLEY.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 6.—Earl Sande made two circuit drives in as many times up at the course of the Saratoga Association this afternoon. Not only that, but the popular blond-haired jockey captured both of the afternoon features and both with 8-to-1 shots. In the second running of the Test Stakes for three-year-old fillies at seven furlongs the crack rider landed J. E. Widener's Ruthenia under the wire a head in front of the odds-on favorite, the Glen Riddle Farms Man o' War filly Corvette.

In the Hudson Handicap, at a mile and a furlong, Sande won by a length and a half with La Brea Stable's veteran Broomstick gelding Flagstaff, again beating the favorite, William Ziegler Jr.'s Gamble, coupled with the same owner's Needle Gun.

Sande's two victories helped to contribute to the almost complete rout of the players of form and aided materially to swell the bank rolls of the receivers of white markers. Only one favorite came home in front, but it didn't really count, as the Rancocas Stable's Cheops in the last race was held at the almost prohibitive price of two to five.

Spirited Finishes Rule.

It being a Friday and the day before the running of the Saratoga Special and the Saranac Handicap a big crowd was on hand and the spectators enjoyed some of the most spirited racing of the meeting.

Corvette was undoubtedly the best of the five fillies in the Test Stakes and probably would have proved it if McAtee had given her a better ride. Pony jammed his mount into a nice pocket going down the back stretch and was forced back into last place. The filly never did get running until straightened out in the stretch, and then she came on like a doe before the hounds to make a finish in which the first three were heads apart and had the spectators screaming.

Sande had Ruthenia out in front practically through the seven furlongs, but he had to ride his best to bring her home. She is one of Mr. Widener's favorites and proved herself dead game. The leader had to fight off Mrs. Hitt's What'll I Do and William Ziegler Jr.'s Helvetia. The latter took command temporarily at the head of the stretch, but failed to respond in the final struggle and she finished just out of the money.

Both Corvette and What'll I Do finished with bold rushes. Sande made no mistake this time and rode the filly out, but she had not much left at the wire. The fractional time was 0:23 4-5, 0:47 3-5, 1:12, 1:25 3-5. Ruthenia carried top weight of 121 pounds.

Ovation for Earl.

Sande received a boisterous greeting from the spectators when he came back to the scales after the running of the Hudson Handicap, not only because he won handsomely on Flagstaff, but because, in a way, the combination was the under-dog in the field of eight. Flagstaff wanted to run before the horses lined up at the barrier and he bolted out of Sande's control. He ran half a mile before Sande could bring him to a stop.

Flagstaff was right there when it came to the real race. He had the inside position at the post and held his ground to the first turn, with Frederick Johnson's Bumpkin keeping him company on the outside. Sande nursed his mount along on the run down the backstretch, where he gave him a breather. On the far turn the gelding drew clear of the three-year-old, but Breuning again came up with Bumpkin.

Bumpkin was through in the stretch drive, but Flagstaff still had stiff opposition to face. Fisher sent Metzie's Buddy through on the rail in the last turn and he was right on Flagstaff's heels for a furlong, with Fator coming like a bullet on the outside on William Ziegler Jr.'s Gamble. Sande went to the whip a few times and then hand rode to the finish. Metzie's Buddy was pocketed and the filly nosed him out for the place, Flagstaff having a length and a half at the finish.

The Spring Steeplechase was practically a walkover for the Greentree Stable's Brantome, second choice in a field of four. Specs Crawford was up and after one turn of the field took the Frenchman into a lead that he widened with every jump up to the finish, where he was cantering a sixteenth of a mile ahead of John McE. Bowman's Stalwart, the even-money favorite.

URGES CLOSE UNION OF RACING BODIES

Special to The New York Times.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 6.—One of the most notable gatherings of the devotees of thoroughbred racing in this country was that at the Brook Club here this evening, where the Saratoga Association, through President Richard T. Wilson Jr., was host to the subscribers to the Saratoga Special, which will be run tomorrow afternoon for the twenty-fourth time. The members of the Jockey Club and prominent horsemen and officials of this country and Canada were also guests at the dinner.

The dinner was suggested by Mr. Wilson and is expected to become an annual affair, from which much, through frank discussion, may inure to the benefit of the turf, as it has in the past from the famous Gimcrack Dinner, which has been given at York, England, for more than a century and a half.

Mr. Wilson welcomed the guests, saying that it is a good thing for the turf to have those interested in its welfare meet occasionally and indulge in a frank discussion of things that have to do with its well-being and preservation.

Chairman Camden Presides.

After the dinner Mr. Wilson called upon former United States Senator J. N. Camden of Kentucky to act as Chairman. Senator Camden spoke at length on the condition of the turf in the United States and the conditions that have led up to the present unprecedented success of racing. In conclusion, Senator Camden said:

"Looking to the future, and speaking on behalf of the Kentucky Jockey Club, I wish to say that we are in thorough accord and sympathy with the purpose of this movement. We think that there should be close cooperation among all the important racing associations, so as to avoid conflict of dates of the big stake events. We also believe that our racing rules should be made to conform with each other so far as is expedient and practicable. We also believe that a closer effort should be made by each association to respect the rulings of the others and carry them out as far as is possible. This, of course, means organization.

"Every society and profession is organized these days for mutual protection, proper growth and development. As a suggestion, I believe it possible that we might strengthen our position and promote good understanding and more intelligent working conditions if we created an advisory board, to convene once a year or as often as necessary, and review our situation and take stock, so to speak."

Many Notables Guests.

The guests of the association included the following named: H. Teller Archibald, Mrs. Raymond T. Baker, Archibald Barklie, Benjamin Block, A. C. Bostwick, John McE. Bowman, E. R. Bradley, Mr. and Mrs. James C. Brady, George H. Bull, James Butler, the Hon. J. N. Camden, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel A. Clark, Gifford A. Cochran and John Cowdin.

26 YEARLINGS BRING $30,850 AT SARATOGA

Top Price of $3,500 Is Paid by Brookmeade Stable for Runantell Colt.

SARATOGA SPRINGS, N. Y., Aug. 6.—With the Saratoga Association's dinner at the Brook Club as a counter-attraction, there was a comparatively small attendance at the Fasig-Tipton Company's paddock this evening for the second night of the annual yearling sales. The several consignments offered nothing particularly attractive and the bidding was not spirited nor the prices more than ordinary.

A total of twenty-six head came under the hammer, bringing $30,850, an average of $1,186. Top price of the evening was $3,500 for a bay colt by Runantell out of Imp. Patagonia 3d, offered by A. C. Randolph, which was knocked down to the Brookmeade Stable.

The only other sale worthy of note was a brown filly by Leonardo 2d, out of Mointen, in the same consignment, which was sold to Mrs. James F. Curtis for $2,000.

a W. Ziegler Jr. entry.

Flagstaff ran away three furlongs before the start. He broke on his toes, raced Bumpkin into submission and held Gamble safe in the stretch drive. Gamble was in a pocket to the head of the stretch. She closed fast when clear. Metzie's Buddy ran a real good race. Bumpkin displayed plenty of speed for a mile. Sanford came from a long way back. Needle Gun made a determined bid in the stretch, but weakened badly.

MISS LAMBERT SETS NEW SWIM RECORD

Shatters Own Figures in Winning A. A. U. 330-Yard Medley Title at Philadelphia.

RELAY RECORD ALSO FALLS

New York Four Beats 880-Yard Time by 32 2-5 Seconds—W. S. A. Clinches Team Honors.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 6.—Miss Adelaide Lambert of the Women's Swimming Association of New York and the relay team of the same organization shattered world's records in winning title events on the third day of competition for the National A. A. U. outdoor aquatic championships over a 100-yard course in the Sesquicentennial lagoon this afternoon.

Miss Lambert captured the 330-yard medley, made up of consecutive 110-yard breast, back and free style strokes, in 5:01, as against her own former universal standard of 5:04 3-5, set over a more favorable 55-yard course at North Bergen, N. J., on July 31.

Then Misses Doris O'Mara, Lambert, Ethel McGary and Martha Norelius scored a decisive victory in the 880-yard relay championship in 11:45 3-5, slashing 32 2-5 seconds from the listed record, established by another Women's Swimming Association four in winning the national classic at Detroit on Aug. 8, 1925.

Four Oppose Miss Lambert.

Miss Lambert was opposed in the medley by her clubmates, the Misses Carin Nilsson and Agnes Geraghty, Miss Susan Laird of the Carnegie Library A. A. of Homestead and Miss Ruth Elberfeld of Birmingham, Ala. Miss Geraghty led for the first 110 yards, when the breast stroke was used, but the Misses Lambert, Nilsson and Laird passed her in this order on the next lap at the back stroke, style and positions then remaining the same to the end. Miss Lambert finished nearly 15 yards ahead of Miss Nilsson, who defeated Miss Laird more than 20 yards for second place. Miss Geraghty was a good fourth.

In the 880-yard relay race only three teams reported. The starters, in addition to the winning quartet, were the second Women's Swimming Association team, composed of the Misses Elaine Delaney, Kathryn Brown, Carin Nilsson and Lisa Lindstrom and the contingent of the Carnegie Library A. A., consisting of the Misses Florence Goga, Alberta Stafford, May Cutnell and Susan Laird.

Little Miss Goga, a 14-year-old marvel, surprised by giving her team the lead on the first lap in the sterling time of 2:57 4-5. But Miss Lambert, second for the Women's Swimming Association, caught and passed Miss Stafford, who followed for Carnegie. Then the Misses McGary and Norelius drew away from Miss Cutnell and Miss Laird, so that the Women's Swimming Association naiads touched 50 yards ahead of their rivals, the latter defeating the second New York team by 20 yards.

W. S. A. Clinches Title.

As the result of today's championships the Women's Swimming Association obtained definite possession of the handsome Sesquicentennial trophy offered for the club attaining the highest score at the title meet. Although three events still are to be decided, the organization has run up 48 points as against 24 points garnered by all other clubs combined and no longer can be overtaken.

In the race for individual laurels Miss Lambert assumed the lead with 13½ points, Miss McGary following with 10½ points.

330-Yard Medley Swim—Won by Adelaide Lambert, Women's Swimming Association; Carin Nilsson, Women's Swimming Association, second; Susan Laird, Carnegie Library Club, Homestead, third; Agnes Geraghty, Women's Swimming Association, fourth. Time—5:01 (new world's record).

Tilden to Play at Newport.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 6.—William T. Tilden 2d, for the first time in seven years, is to play in the annual invitation tennis tournament at the Newport Casino the week of Aug. 23. He will play in both singles and doubles.

Racing Under Mutuel System Legal, Utah Court Decides

SALT LAKE CITY, Aug. 6 (AP).—Horse racing under the pari-mutuel betting system is not a game of chance, and is, therefore, permitted under the State law and Constitution of Utah, the State Supreme Court held today. The decision reverses the lower court and directs that it find in favor of the defendants in an action brought by the City Commissioners against the State Fair Association.

WEISSMULLER SETS WORLD SWIM MARK

Johnny Weissmuller, star swimmer of the Illinois Athletic Club, broke his own world's record for the 220-yard free-style swim in one of a series of exhibition races last night at the Miramar Pool, Broadway and 207th Street. Competing against time, Weissmuller did the distance in 2:14 2-5, clipping one and one-fifth seconds off his old time of 2:15 3-5.

The pool, which is seventy-five feet long, requires almost nine laps for the furlong, and it was evident at the last few turns that Weissmuller was on his way to a new mark. The race was supervised by A. A. U. officials and the time will be submitted for ratification as a new record.

Starting from scratch in the 500-yard event, Clarence Ross of the N. Y. A. C., national long-distance champion, swam into the lead after the final turn and led his clubmate, Edward Lee, whom he had allowed fifteen seconds, to the finish by half a yard. Frank Dolan, also of the Winged Foot Club, with a start of twenty-one seconds, was third. Ross's time was 6:20. Immediately after the race Bobby Skelton, the record holder, gave an exhibition in the 100-yard breast-stroke.

Ethel Lackie of the Illinois A. C. completed her swim of 100 yards, free style, in 1:04. The other event on the program was a 220-yard handicap in which Joe Farley failed to overcome a handicap of twenty-five seconds allowed to Ray Leo, while Ray Ruddy, with an allowance of ten seconds, was third. All three represent the New York A. C. The time was 2:51.

RECEIPTS SET AT $700,000

ANNAPOLIS, Md., Aug. 6.—Tickets to the football game in Chicago on Nov. 27 between the teams of the Naval and Military academies will bring as high as $20 each, according to Commander Jonas H. Ingram, athletic director of the Naval Academy, who has returned from a conference with Chicago officials.

The 40,000 tickets to be held by the Chicago officials will bring $5, $10 and $20 each, the majority going at the medium figure. It is also expected that the boxes will bring about $70,000 and the 60,000 tickets of the Army and Navy will be sold at $3.50 each.

The total receipts from admission is expected to reach about $700,000, which is $200,000 more than that received at a game between California and Stanford, which had been the highest amount received at an intercollegiate football game.

Commander Ingram reported that great interest is being taken in the Middle West in the game and in the visit of the student bodies of West Point and Annapolis and that there will be a demand which will tax the seating capacity of the stadium, which is 100,000.

DUX FEMINA.

The one sure inference to be drawn from the long record of attempts to swim the English Channel is that success can come only as the result of skill, pluck, strength, and luck. Perhaps the greatest of these is luck, meaning favorable weather conditions and a happy sweep of the treacherous tides. But though good fortune undoubtedly aided Miss EDERLE yesterday, nothing will be allowed to detract from her historic achievement in being the first woman to swim the Channel. Her failure at first seems only to have inspired her to a renewed determination. All the reports are that she trained more conscientiously than before, and got herself fit in every way for the supreme test of her courage and endurance. A natural swimmer of great power and self-confidence, it was her indomitable spirit which most shone out in her triumph yesterday. It was a feat which will carry her name round the world, but which, all Americans are glad to believe, will take nothing away from the simplicity and modesty of their countrywoman.

THE KNIGHTS AND MEXICO.

One can easily understand the indignation expressed by the Knights of Columbus over the sufferings of their fellow-Catholics in Mexico. Their sympathies are deeply stirred and naturally lead them to a severe characterization of the methods and motives of the Mexican Government. In all this they are quite within their rights. But when they call upon the Government of the United States to change its policy toward Mexico, the case demands careful examination. What the Knights of Columbus demand is, in effect, that our official recognition of the Mexican Government be withdrawn and that the embargo on the export of arms to Mexican territory be raised. Neither step should be taken without serious consideration.

In the declaration adopted at Philadelphia by the Knights of Columbus, the point is made that, especially in the matter of its attitude toward the Church, the Mexican Government is rapidly "Russianizing" Mexico. The reasoning is that as our Government has refused to recognize the Soviet régime in Moscow, it ought to recall the recognition which it has given to OBREGON and CALLES in Mexico. But in the reasons given by successive Secretaries of State for refusing to recognize the Bolshevist Government there has been no mention of religion. Whatever our feelings may be as Americans enjoying full religious liberty, we cannot interfere with another sovereign nation in a domestic question such as its treatment of the Church. Our Government would not recognize the Soviets because they repudiated treaty obligations and would not undertake either to pay their debts to our Treasury or to make good American property which they had confiscated. Let Mexico offend in such ways and on such a scale, and then there would be ground for breaking off diplomatic relations. Mistreatment of Mexican Catholics does not furnish that ground.

Nor do the Knights of Columbus appear to have studied carefully the position taken by the Mexican Episcopate when they called for freedom to export munitions of war to Mexico. The Mexican Church authorities have repeatedly and explicitly stated that they do not desire a revolution by force of arms. Their plan is purely one of peaceful resistance. But if the Knights of Columbus had their way in abolishing the embargo on the export of arms to Mexico there would speedily be bloodshed on Mexican soil. Moreover, if there were to be a successful revolution it would undoubtedly be led by some military man who, if he succeeded to power, could not be counted upon to be more tender in his dealings with the Church than President CALLES has been.

Thus, while all Americans must respect the profound emotion shown by the Knights of Columbus in connection with the Mexican troubles, their political reasoning is hard to follow. Already the State Department has let it plainly be known that our Government cannot accept it. If any remedy for relief is to be found, it surely does not lie in the political measures urged by the Knights of Columbus.

A CHICAGO "LEADER."

When the "boss" became a "leader," he must have felt an obligation, coupled with a chuckling satisfaction, to show that the new name would not impair the thoroughness of his work. Recent evidence, in rich volume, proves that he has increased his already high efficiency. Grand Republican "leaders" have been revealed in Pennsylvania and Illinois. It is a pleasure to add to our collection Mr. MORRIS ELLER, Crowe-Barrett "leader" of the Twentieth Ward of Chicago. With just pride he calls his organization "wonderful; the best in Chicago." The best in Chicago can hardly be excelled even by the best in Philadelphia. Of whom is Chicago's best composed? "Job-hunters and my personal friends." Fifty-two placemen get from $190 to $200 a month; say $125,000 a year distributed at the good pleasure of the "leader."

He is too prudent to incur the danger of being called worse than an infidel. Six members of his own family besides himself have well-paid posts. This is as it should be. The results of the wonderful system speak for themselves. "Naturally we got pretty near a unanimous vote." This is no exaggeration. Originally Colonel SMITH was credited with 7,212 votes in the Twentieth and Senator McKINLEY with 217. Even the snooping "official recount" gave SMITH 6,406 and McKINLEY 345. So the wonderful triumph of the best organization in Chicago remains undimmed. Don't think that this was brought about without unremitting attention to details and rigor of method. County Judge JARECKI, Democrat, supervises Chicago election officials. In the course of his duties he examined the Eleventh Precinct of the Twentieth Ward:

> The registered vote was 781. On primary day there were 780 votes cast. I found that seven registered had died, 130 to 140 had not been known to the people in the territory. I watched the election there closely and on election day I received complaints about that ward. One man was on his way to vote when a machine traveling at a high rate of speed drove on the sidewalk and struck him. All through the day we received complaints of gun threats, of intimidation of judges and clerks. A worker was kidnapped and dropped several miles away after 6 P. M. His overcoat and some $30 were taken from him.

These modern pleasantries of Eatanswill, if actual, illustrate the humor and the strength of the machine. Judge JARECKI thinks that the election was dishonest in a majority of the precincts in the Twentieth Ward. That is only an opinion; and he may have been unconsciously prejudiced by the fact that he had just sentenced four election judges to six months' imprisonment for making false primary returns. At any rate, the Crowe-Barrett machine of the Twentieth is clearly "wonderful," even if the substantial "unanimity" which it brings about be the result of artificial processes; and the "leader" is as much of an improvement upon the "boss" as the direct primary is upon the convention.

A LABOR EXPERIMENT.

Three years ago the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad agreed with the shop crafts unions affiliated with the American Federation of Labor to coöperate in an attempt to increase production and to improve working conditions. The management bound itself to recognize the unions, to deal with them and, as far as possible within the limits of existing railroad wage standards, to allow their membership a share in the benefits that might follow. The unions pledged the shopmen to strive for efficiency. A system of meetings between the company and men was set up. The experiment was first put into operation with 300 men in the Glenwood shops. A year later the plan was applied to the entire force of 22,000 shopmen on the road. It has subsequently been adopted by the Canadian National, the Chicago & Northwestern and the Chesapeake & Ohio Railroads, and embraces today over 50,000 men.

Mr. O. S. BEYER Jr., who, as consulting engineer for the shopmen's unions, shares the credit with President WILLARD of the Baltimore & Ohio for the plan's development, sums up the results of its operation in The New Republic. He mentions the following gains: (1) Elimination of unemployment in the B. & O. shops; (2) decline in grievances submitted for adjudication on the same road from an average of 1 in every 58 men to 1 in every 131; (3) a total of 20,000 suggestions for increased shop efficiency, better working conditions, more satisfactory recruiting of employes, &c., 16,000 of which have actually been put into effect. In addition Mr. BEYER cites intangibles of even greater importance which may be summed up as an "increased sense "of responsibility on the part of em-"ployes for the success of the railroad "and on the part of the management "for the welfare of the employes."

The great failure of modern industry has been to furnish an incentive to the wage worker sufficient to elicit his wholehearted support in production. The average factory worker sees no connection between his wages and his daily output. The philosophy of labor unionism is based on the assumption that the way to increase wages is not to increase production, but to coerce the employer into paying more. From this has flowed a train of evil consequences—soldiering on the job, ca' canny, sabotage, with waste beyond calculation. As a result the vast mechanism of modern production halts and often fails altogether.

The B. & O. plan has the great merit of facing this issue and offering a remedy that respects the rights and interests of both employer and employed. Its present weakness, as Mr. BEYER points out, is the lack of definite correlation between increased output and higher wages. The elaborate and fixed wage structure of the railroads which makes different wage scales on different roads impracticable at the present time, and the fact that production in repair work is more difficult to measure than in ordinary manufacture, have hampered the experiment. But its remarkable success in spite of these odds makes it even the more impressive.

THE STABILIZED RAILWAYS.

Chief interest in the large figures of railway earnings for the half year lies in their reflection of the general state of production, industry and commerce. There can be no better single proof that both the country and the roads are at the peak of economic performance. For the half year net operating income represents 5.6 per cent. on tentative valuation, or 4.94 on property investment. This improvement results more from economies than from any other one cause. Increases of rates were denied by the Interstate Commerce Commission even in the sections most necessitous. Railways have less control over their costs than other businesses, for the laws put upon them many expenses in the matters of grade crossings, track signaling, compulsory train crews, and so on. But necessity is the mother of efficiency also, and the railways were able to keep their costs down to an increase of only 2.7 per cent. against an increase of gross earnings of 4.6 per cent.

All railways are not profitable even yet. No less than twenty-two first-class railways operated at a loss, eight in the Eastern district, one in the South, and thirteen in the Western region. The law has not succeeded in equalizing prosperity either for all railways or for all sections. Yet if the law disallows prevailing profits for the railways, it may protect them against losses. Earnings may be stabilized by statute at something like the rate of mortgage interest. The railways calculate that they have failed by $641,000,000 to earn what the Interstate Commission said in 1922 that they were entitled to earn.

THE FRANCO-GERMAN TRADE ACCORD.

A treaty of commerce and amity between France and Germany has been signed in Paris, to go into effect Aug. 20. It is renewable at the end of six months. The full terms have not yet been published, but preliminary reports show that it not only covers general questions such as tariff and most-favored-nation clauses, but that it also supplements private agreements about the delivery of coal, coke and iron. It is described as the closest commercial bond between Germany and France ever known. It takes the place of previous temporary agreements about imports and exports and marks the end of a series of negotiations which have been in progress for nearly two years.

This arrangement is certain to help the general revival of European business. Germany's exports have not yet reached normal. Under the terms of the new treaty it is expected that she will be able to sell more in France, to the mutual profit of both countries. France, on the other hand, will have a better market for some of her colonial raw products, and, thanks to the agreement between the coal and iron producers, should find it possible to dispose of her coking coal surplus. The steel industries of both nations will undoubtedly be helped by the new arrangement.

This trade agreement has special importance, as one more stabilizing factor in the financial affairs of France. It had been feared, when the crisis of the franc was most acute, that speculators in Germany and France, as well as in former neutral countries, might be able to drive the franc down so low as to create a panic. Working against them were the business men and bankers of Europe. They realized that if the franc followed the mark there would again be grave business and political difficulties in Europe. The fact that Germany and France are now bound closely together in commercial matters gives an added motive to the business men and bankers of Central Europe to see everything possible done to help France set her finances in order. It is doubtful if the new agreement will directly increase the revenues of France, but by stimulating business it should help to prevent the effects of the decline in the franc during the last two months from unsettling conditions too long or dangerously.

Some time must still elapse before a final commercial treaty between France and Germany is negotiated. The present agreement is described as having for one of its objects to prepare the way for a definitive treaty. A month after the French have enacted their new tariff law, which will probably not occur until after the present financial reforms have been definitely put into effect, the delegates will meet again to draft the final terms. The important fact is that the present understanding is more comprehensive than any which has gone before, and clearly shows that there is every prospect of continually closer trade relations between the two countries.

WHAT DARWIN SET A-DOING.

When the American Association for the Advancement of Science, the younger sister of the British Association now holding its sessions in Oxford, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of "Darwinism" in Baltimore in January, 1909, the American geologist T. C. CHAMBERLIN said that the greatness of a man is shown in what he is, in what he does and in what he sets a-doing. No man in modern times, it is safe to say, has achieved a higher greatness in what he set a-doing than CHARLES DARWIN. He set others a-doing in every realm of the intellectual world. Not one science has failed to respond to the power of his method, though it had its centre in the biological. The "anthropic pride" of practically the whole civilized world stood out against it at first, but now it is universally accepted by thinking and doing men. The whole biologic view of creation has been changed, beginning with the profound Darwinian influence, as the cosmogonic conception of the universe was earlier changed by facts that seemed also to offend the vanity of man.

Though President OSBORN, in his address before the British Association on the progress made since DARWIN'S day, states, as he is quoted, that the chief speculations based upon the knowledge of the first half of the nineteenth century have declined or died, the fundamental fact of evolution is not disturbed by what has since been discovered. It has, on the other hand, been accentuated and given recognition as a living, unspent force, moving secularly rather than in years—and world without end, as "species in the making" at the present time have been independently discovered. The modes among vertebrates are known. At any rate, there is so much known that little remains to be discovered as to the ways in which species and sub-species originate. But with all that, as President OSBORN says, we do not yet know the causes of the origin of these species and sub-species. The scientist is confronted by a problem which may be as insoluble as the origin of life itself on this planet, but which if solved would but carry us into the presence of the ultimate and infinite—the burning bush that is not consumed, before which the scientist must take off his shoes.

DARWIN succeeded, said one of the great English physicists of our new century, because he had clear visions of the web of life and of the struggle for existence and its winnowing; because he put "so much grit" into the verification of those visions and because he brought forward a more plausible theory of the process than had before been suggested. But he succeeded beyond all that because he "inaugurated a line of discovery endless in variety and extension." He regretted that in following science he had not "done more direct good" to his fellow-creatures, but he has done an indirect good that is as immeasurable as the achievements of the thousands of scientists whom he has led out to the verges of the known in every field of human thought and action. President OSBORN comes back to Oxford (where less than a half century ago one Professor WESTWOOD proposed to the University Commission the permanent endowment of a Reader to combat the errors of Darwinism) from his particular sector of that verge with his paleontological testimony that the species and sub-species, of which an immensely greater number are known today than in DARWIN'S time, are "certainly con-"tinuous, determinate, and on the "whole adaptive." This has a very definite meaning for naturalists. For the layman it means that in inorganic as well as organic nature, fortuity is absent. The fittest, as ARISTOTLE contended, "originates in law." And DARWIN introduced by his studies the "new class of evidence" by which the law of evolution may be understood.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

Right at Last, Though Long About It.

Nobody who believes in copyright—treating producers of literature, music and other forms of what is called art like other producers—in other words, nobody who upholds common honesty, can fail to be glad that the Department of Justice has decided that the members of the American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers did not violate the anti-trust laws when they took steps to make the people who used the result of their work pay for it.

Why it should have taken two years to reach this obvious conclusion is a question almost important enough to be made the subject of another investigation, but as the matter now is settled the incidental mystery can be ignored.

It was the broadcasting folk that raised the issue in its latest form. They took the wholly indefensible position that what they did was not "publication," and that therefore they should not be obliged to pay for the use of copyrighted material. They contended that they helped, not harmed, the composers and authors whose productions they put on the air. They also pleaded pathetically for the listeners-in, a great army, for whose benefit the broadcasting was done.

All this was irrelevant to the rights of the producers, and simply absurd were the pretensions of the broadcasters that their activities were philanthropical. They are business men, like others, and their object is the making of profits, directly as advertisers or indirectly through promoting the sale of receiving sets and accessories.

The claim of the public to the enjoyment of copyrighted music is no better than a claim to the enjoyment of copyrighted books, and the books they do not expect to get for nothing.

When the broadcasters weakened on paying any fees whatever, they complained that the fees charged were too high. Perhaps so, sometimes, but they are under no obligation to buy at what they consider a price too great. The composers and the others certainly will not charge more than they can get.

Libraries and Cemeteries.

After Professor J. F. THORPE, in his Presidential address to the chemists in England, had talked about the threatened scarcity of gasoline if people go on buying and using automobiles at the present rate of increase, he turned to two other perils confronting society. These are the dangers and inconveniences arising from the enormous growth of cemeteries and of libraries.

Hitherto, only in China has the encroachment of the dead on the living received more than passing mention, though in the vicinity of all the great modern cities the fact that too much land has to be devoted to graves has been noted often. The obvious remedy is cremation, but who would suggest that as the thing to do with books and documents more or less official and historic?

Delvers into the doings of long past ages have complained bitterly at the scarcity of material in the form of contemporaneous records, but now the trouble is just the opposite. The historian of events at all recent is overwhelmed by the mass of printed paper through which he must go if his information is to approach completeness, and the librarians are almost appalled by the ever increasing task of finding shelf room for the endless accumulation of what their predecessors would have regarded as precious. Nobody feels safe in throwing away things that in time may become valuable, yet it is impossible to go on piling up greater and greater quantities, much of which certainly never will have another reader.

A similar problem confronts all newspapers of larger issue. They value highly their files of back numbers, but a single week makes a big volume, and a year almost fills a room—or will before long.

They Must Be Scared Very Easily.

Insurance is much more of a gambling game in England than it is here, or at any rate companies there are willing to take risks in matters concerning which the actuaries cannot give much help in determining the proper rates to charge. As queer as any of the many queer things for which insurance against loss can be obtained over there is reported in the shape of a policy for "more than $50,000," to be paid in case our prohibition laws are repealed or materially amended.

Such a policy can be wanted only by a person or company that is exporting alcoholic liquors to be smuggled into this country in violation of those laws, and this one, it is admitted, was taken out by a group of enterprising persons who are engaged in that not very admirable activity. The fact that they do not want us to abandon prohibition is obvious, and it ought to give cause for some thought to the good folk who assume that such legislation is hated by all the people who are engaged in the liquor business.

It is hated by some of them, no doubt, but to others—not a few—it is a source of enormous profits, and they want those profits to continue.

One wonders what was paid by the British rum-runners for the $50,000 worth of safety. If proportioned to the prospect of prohibition's ending here within a year, it ought not to have been more than 5 cents, if as much as that; but they probably gave more, and their anxiety is about the only source of hope in sight for the anti-prohibitionists. If the bootleggers, foreign or domestic, are scared there must be some danger ahead, and they ought to know.

He Created a Fine Impression.

Probably no visiting royalty ever made a better impression here than did the guest who sailed away from the Pacific Coast for Honolulu this week. That GUSTAF ADOLF was more popular here than the Prince of WALES, or even as much so, hardly could be maintained, but that is because he is not a figure quite so young and picturesque. Just the same, everything he did and said while here was pleasing to all his hosts, and to the great public that read about his daily movements about the country.

That his interests in us were of the more serious sort certainly was nothing against him, and it truthfully can be said that he increased and made warmer the friendship between his country and ours. And no King or heir to a throne can be better employed than in doing that.

A HOSPITAL IN NEED.

Contributions Sought for Knickerbocker's Building Fund.

There are daily in the news columns expressions of appreciation—or lack of appreciation—of those who, because of their interest in mankind, have been trying to do something for their fellow human beings, and I think you will agree that we all believe in the justice of the motto, "Help those who help you."

I have been a resident of the west side for the past twenty years. About a year ago my attention was called to the wonderful work which Knickerbocker Hospital (formerly known as the J. Hood Wright Memorial) does. Since then I have been much interested in this institution. Now when I hear the clang of the ambulance bell I get a real thrill, for I know it is the Knickerbocker ambulance speeding on its errand of mercy; a year ago it meant no more to me than to the average citizen.

When I read in your paper of an accident I glance down through the article, and I usually find that an ambulance from Knickerbocker Hospital responded to the call.

Today this wonderful old hospital is appealing to the public for funds to help complete its new building. I have visited the old building, which has served the public for fifty-one years, and one visit is sufficient to convince any one that an appeal for funds for new quarters deserves his support. The management of the hospital state that they average thirteen ambulance calls a day. We do not know who will be the next to need their aid.

I hope those who read this will send a check to the treasurer of the building fund, Walter E. Frew, 13 William Street.

Rubber Statistics.

Referring to the editorial "Rubber Supplies" which appeared in THE TIMES on Aug. 2, please note that the standard production fixed by the Stevenson committee, in 1922, at about the equivalent of the 1920 crop, has since been raised several times to allow for increased yields in old areas and for new areas coming into bearing.

The following statement appears in your article: "Even with 100 per cent. output, the actual quantity of rubber marketed is from 10 to 20 per cent. less than the producing capacity." Since Feb. 1, when 100 per cent. of the new standard production was exportable at the minimum rate of duty, the actual exports amount to about 88 per cent. of the allowance.

The exportable allowance from the restricted areas of British Malaya for February, March and April was 73,702 tons; the actual exports during that period from these areas were 64,216 tons. The allowance for May, June and July is 76,700 tons; the actual exports during May and June were 47,062 tons.

On Feb. 1 there were unused export coupons amounting to 9,615 tons. On May 1 this carry-over increased to 19,101 tons. At the present rate of actual export there were on Aug. 1 about 25,000 tons excess in exportable allowance over the actual exports.

It has been the consensus of opinion in rubber circles abroad that the estates were not able to produce 100 per cent. of their so-called standard production. This is further borne out by recent cabled rumors from the East indicating a move on the part of the Colonial Governments to investigate the allowances granted individual estates in order to determine whether or not the potential production has been correctly assessed.

Toning Down Auto Exhausts.

We have heard a great deal of talk lately about the suppression of unnecessary noises. There is no doubt that unnecessary noise has a bad effect on the nerves. I would suggest that the use of exhaust whistles on motor vehicles be prohibited.

The sudden explosions of these exhaust whistles carried by heavy trucks is the most disturbing noise in New York City today.

"THIS I SHALL HOLD."

That here within the hollow of this cup of hills
I have touched deep, immutable springs of livingness;
That here the jangled pattern of the days was blown,
And at their convocation memories came
While time and space like rusty bands fell off
From all the pulsing world, and once again
I was aware of immanences bright
That melted even the granite of the hills
Like very flakes of snow.
And all the dreams and loves of men were woven
Into a palpable tissue of delight
Wherefrom there rose a temple with its base
Spanning all nations and its spires
Joining all skies. . . .
And I glimpsed then what little children know:
That life and death are one to him who goes
Gallantly on;
That all the bitter creeds are as miasma blown
Before one living breath;
That he who hastens on love-quickened ways
Helps build the temple of becoming man;
Who sends his shaft of dream across the ache of time
Yes, he shall quicken even the sullen stones
And he shall know beyond the cramping knowledges
Of many books;
And he shall contact tides of light that ran
When Plato was a boy;
And he shall eat of bread that shall be sweet
As that a Poet broke on Olivet.
Easily he shall come to know
The "Open Secret" hidden through the years,
For to his wakening eyes
All races and all nations shall be one
With, in their midst, a temple.

BRITISH VIEW OF WAR DEBT.

Londoner Rejoices That America Is Prosperous as Well as Generous.

It is a source of rejoicing that the vast majority of British journals refuse to be drawn into the attempt to censure America for her attitude toward Europe and this country on the question of the war debts. We were rightly proud at the time that our own debt was funded, and it may be useful to recall the fact, on a 3 to 3½ per cent. basis by America, when it could not have been funded in the open market under 5 per cent.

The agreement on our side was, I believe, usual, and British, as it is our habit to pay our debts. Yet we are denied this satisfaction by ill informed speakers and writers who still argue that it was a mistake, and talk of an all-round cancellation of debts as the ideal settlement.

Are these gentlemen aware of the fact that while such a settlement would have suited Great Britain and France, who both owe money and are owed money, it would have been grossly unfair to America, which alone is owed money by her debtors? Then we are told that all this unrest in Europe and this country is due to America playing the part of Shylock, and living and prospering upon the tribute she draws from her impoverished debtors. What a travesty of the facts! The tribute she receives is trifling compared to what she is lending and prepared to lend. Her credits and loans to Germany, Belgium, Italy, and in time no doubt to France, continue from month to month and year to year.

She demands rightly, as we do, that a settlement of war debts should precede the issuing of such credits and loans, and when these war debts are settled they are settled on the most generous terms. The prosperity of America is due in the main to a series of bountiful harvests, to the industry of her people and other natural causes.

We ought to thank God that she enjoys such prosperity, for no other reason than to ask where would Europe be without it. Yet these gentlemen would quarrel with their bread and butter. They would deny us the proud satisfaction of having paid our way, and, while suffering, as many of us are, offer us nothing in return except—if they had their way—to have us regarded as a whining and whimpering nation which had lost its manhood and self-respect.

Captain Learmont, Channel Mentor.

I am sure that the readers of THE TIMES will be interested in knowing more about Captain Learmont, that sterling seaman, who so graciously helped to make possible Miss Barrett's wonderful swim almost across the English Channel. Captain Learmont is a big man—big both physically and mentally. He stands over six feet tall and must weigh at least 250 pounds.

His face is large and red, truly the face of an old British "seadog." He was born in the Highlands of Scotland. Since boyhood he has been going to sea on "windjammers" and on steam vessels. A great talker, having a keen mind; a great lover of Burns, the poet (all of whose poetry he can recite verbatim); cool, unexcitable and most certainly a most efficient pilot.

I became acquainted with Captain Learmont some years back, while he was engaged as "choice" pilot to vessels of the United States Lines. A teetotaler, he would look with scorn upon a few so-called "salty" members of our crew who thought strong drink was necessary to keep one warm during a cold wet watch.

The idea of starting a cross-Channel swim from the English side is original with Learmont. I remember once—about three years back—when he was asked to assist an American woman swimmer—almost under like conditions of Miss Barrett—he unfolded his plan to me. It was original—but most certainly Learmont always did have the belief in his own convictions.

There is a sort of cross-Channel "swimming trust" at Dover whose members make it a point of charging "trust" prices to prospective Channel swimmers. When Learmont made known his intention of assisting the American swimmer—not Miss Barrett—two members of the trust called on him and protested against taking the "bread and butter from their mouths." Learmont politely—or otherwise—told them to go to Hades, for he (Learmont) would do anything for the sport that was in it.

May I say that Learmont's ability as a pilot was proved by the fact of Cape Gris-Nez being "dead ahead" when the fog lifted?

Plaint of the Plain Autoist.

In all this discussion about fixing the responsibility for taxi driving, I seem to have been neglected entirely. I drive a car—not much of a car, true, but just as important in the scheme of things to me as the most opulent limousine.

Suppose one of these wild maverick taxis bumps me, resulting in serious damage to my chariot and my person. What recourse have I?

Certainly there's a telephone number on the cab; but very often that number means nothing at all. There may be a name of a company; but, so far as I can learn, there's just one company that's responsible and safe.

So here's hoping my traffic argument—if one must happen—comes with a driver in the employ of this one safe outfit—otherwise I'm out of luck!

Summer Uniforms.

It seems inhuman and far from intelligent that, with our torrid Summers, our police force, train conductors, &c., should be obliged to dress as they do. In Boston I was greatly impressed by the trim, military appearance of its police force. I purposely questioned many mounted, traffic and patrolmen, and all said the same, that it was an immense improvement over the old Summer uniform. I have forgotten the name of the material, but the color was tan; it cost much less than their former suits; it tailored well, retaining its shape; was much cooler and lighter in weight, as well as in color, but, the greatest boon of all, it could be so easily, therefore more frequently, laundered, which they all said "made a man feel so fine."

Subway Fans Inactive.

May I call your attention to a matter in connection with I. R. T. train service which seems to me a very important one, and particularly so during hot weather? I travel daily from Brooklyn to New York, and on almost every train I take there are cars in which the electric fans are not in motion at all, and others in which the fans are moving only at half speed. In view of the extremely crowded condition of the subways and the heat, this seems to me an intolerable situation.

POSTAGE AND CHECKS SHOW TRADE GAINING

Both Postoffice and Commerce Departments Report Fine Business Conditions.

JULY POSTAL RECEIPTS UP

Industrial Activity Increasing While Wholesale Prices Continue to Decline.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Further evidence that business conditions are generally favorable throughout the country, with an outlook for continued prosperity during the Autumn months, was seen here today in a statement by the Department of Commerce that business during the last week in July, as pictured by check payments, was more active than a year ago, with the total for the month also showing an increase over the same month last year.

The favorable situation was reflected also in a statement by the Postoffice Department that postal receipts during July showed an increase of $1,076,477, or 4.19 per cent., over those of July, 1925. The total receipts for July, 1926, were $26,783,425, as compared with $25,706,943 a year ago.

Fort Worth, Texas, led all cities in July in the percentage of increased receipts with 25.44 per cent. Baltimore was second, with an increase of 14.48 per cent., and Toledo, Ohio, third, with an increase of 13.92 per cent.

New York showed an increase of 3.61 per cent.

For the country as a whole there had been increases in postal receipts, also in the three preceding months. In April the receipts were 6.08 per cent. greater than in April, 1925. In May the increase was 3.98 per cent. and in June 6.42 per cent. over June, 1925.

Tables prepared by the Postoffice Department showed that the New York office receipts were $5,047,633 in July, 1926, an increase of $175,809 over July, 1925. Receipts in Brooklyn were $630,534, an increase of $33,145. Receipts in Jersey City were $97,950, an increase of $665. Newark took in $297,096, or $6,967 more than in July, 1925.

In its review of domestic business conditions for July the Department of Commerce gave numerous details to illustrate the increased activity. Building contracts awarded during the last week of the month, the department stated, were larger than in either the preceding week or the same week of last year, while for the month larger awards were indicated than during the same period of 1925.

Car loadings during the third week of the month were larger than in either the previous week or a year ago, while the production of crude petroleum during the last week continued to show increases over the previous weeks, the daily average output registering an increase over a year ago for the first time this year.

The production of bituminous coal during the third week was larger than in either the previous week or the corresponding week of 1925, while the production of beehive coke, although larger than a year ago, was smaller than in the preceding week.

The production of lumber during the third week was smaller than during either the previous week or the same week of last year.

Wholesale prices continued to decline, the average for the last week of the month being lower than at any time since Sept., 1924.

Loans and discounts of Federal Reserve member banks were smaller at the end of July than at any time during the month, but were larger than a year ago. Interest rates on call money averaged higher during the last week than in the previous week or the same week of last year, with time money rates showing corresponding increases.

Prices of stocks on the New York Stock Exchange continued to average higher both as compared with the preceding week and the corresponding week of the past year. Business failures were more numerous than in the third week and a year ago, the total for all weeks in July being smaller, however, than in the same period of 1925.

RUBBER BAN MAINTAINED.

British Colonial Office Continues the Stevenson Restrictions.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—The Colonial Office issued a statement tonight which extinguishes the hopes entertained yesterday that the Stevenson rubber restriction scheme might be abolished at the end of the present quarter.

The statement apparently was intended to convey the information that if spot price rubber does not average a shilling and ninepence a pound during the quarter ended Oct. 31, the amount of rubber which may be exported during the three months beginning Nov. 1 at minimum rate of duty will be reduced from 100 to 8 per cent. of the standard.

The statement adds that provisions for regulating export rubber from Ceylon and Malaya, as announced last April, will apply to future periods unless they are modified. This, of course, is obvious and the intimation apparently means that the Colonial Office has decided not to make any further change in the restriction scheme now, but may do so later.

It will be remembered that the last April restriction scheme was modified so as to prevent the exportable allowance being raised to 110 per cent. in the period which ended July 31.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—E. A. Mellinger, Chairman of the Associated Telephone and Telegraph Company, announces that the company, together with a Belgian group headed by the Banque Doutremet, has acquired a large interest in the new Antwerp Telephone and Electric Works which recently obtained a concession of the telephone monopoly in Greece.

It is proposed to expand the factory in order to meet prospective Belgian telephone construction as well as other business which may develop. The company has planned to make Antwerp the manufacturing centre for its export business of both manual and automatic equipment.

It is understood that the Associated Telephone and Telegraph Company is an American corporation, backed by important American, British and Continental telephone interests, and is in a position from the financial and technical standpoint to handle projects of any size, anywhere.

DEBT RATIFICATION BY FRANCE FADES

AMERICAN BANKERS DISSENT

They Contend They Have Proof Positive That Poincare Will Ask Ratification at Once.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—The Poincaré Cabinet is about equally divided on the issue of whether the American and British debt settlements should be ratified before Parliament adjourns, but everything indicates that ratification will be postponed until after the recess.

Reports that a measure for ratification would be laid before the Chamber on Wednesday, published by this morning's press, caused an all-day flurry of excitement in both houses.

In the evening, however, these reports were cautiously if not quite completely denied in a communiqué which states that the Government is for the present contemplating only the examination of the two debt settlements by the Finance Commissions.

This decision will lead to a curious result, for the commissions will undoubtedly wish to hear the opinions of M. Poincaré as Finance Minister and the Foreign Minister, M. Briand.

While the former cannot be expected to do otherwise than to adhere to his declaration before he took office—that the Mellon-Bérenger agreement cannot be accepted in its present form—M. Briand is known to be strongly of the opinion that the accords must be ratified because they affected foreign relations and because it is necessary to have foreign credits to complete the work of stabilization now being prepared.

In the Cabinet M. Briand is the leader of the pro-ratification faction, and he is reported to have won over to his opinion MM. Tardieu and Bokanowski, who helped to defeat his last Cabinet by their opposition to M. Caillaux's policy of ratification and stabilization by foreign aid.

In American banking circles in Paris today it was reported as certain that at the last moment Premier Poincaré would alter his position and seek ratification of the two measures jointly before adjournment.

Such a sudden change would not be altogether out of character with some of the Premier's recent actions, but in estimating its possibilities there must be taken into consideration the attitude of the Chamber, and especially of the Senate.

In the lower house the Premier has obtained such mastery over the situation that, despite the opposition of the Nationalists, Socialists, Communists and part of the Radicals, he might obtain a majority for ratification of even the Washington agreement through the abstention of his opponents.

In the upper house strong feeling was expressed today against the reported volte-face of the Premier, and it was said it would take more than ordinary persuasion to win the Senators over.

It may be that all these reports and counter reports are simply M. Poincaré's way of preparing public opinion for a sudden change in his plans, and this is borne out by the insistence of the Paris bankers that their authority is absolute for the report that ratification will be sought.

Yet in the face of the attitude of Parliament and the past attitude of M. Poincaré himself, that is extremely hard to believe.

In tonight's communiqué denying the press statements that a decision to seek ratification had been taken insistence is placed on the fact "that the attitude of the Government has not varied and remains as stated in the Government's declaration."

That declaration was, however, extremely non-committal, the Premier contenting himself with saying that "France is firmly determined to meet her debts to the full measure of her capacity."

To today's communiqué is added the following comment:

"As for financial redress, the Government expects it first of all from the measures which have been taken and in their success, which our creditors are as interested in as ourselves."

This characteristically Poincaré sentence seems to indicate that for the present the Government is prepared to do without foreign credits and will not take any immediate steps to ratify the debt accords.

Reports were published here last night and today that New York bankers are preparing to grant a large credit, but these reports are discounted in Parliamentary circles, and Winston's reiteration of America's decision that ratification must precede credits has made the course the Government must take perfectly clear, if it seeks, as MM. Caillaux and Briand said it must, to have recourse to foreign credits.

The situation is, therefore, on the basis of official declarations so far and on the basis of the attitude of Parliament, that it is entirely unlikely that ratification will be sought before the Summer adjournment.

Today even the Centre group in the Chamber passed a resolution warning the Government that ratification of the Washington treaty would encounter serious opposition. Yet there remains a possibility that between now and the beginning of next week there may be a complete change in the Government's attitude and that an attempt will be made to rush through in the last-minute excitement the ratification of the two settlements.

If an attempt is made there will be opposition, but the situation may be such that M. Poincaré can make rejection of ratification appear such a life and death matter that even the Senate will, like himself, put all its past beliefs and utterances in its pocket and give its approval.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 6.—George Boivin, former Minister of Customs of Canada, underwent an operation for appendicitis in St. Joseph's Hospital here tonight and was said to be in a critical condition.

He was stricken Monday night and removed to the hospital. Surgeons postponed the operation until tonight because of the patient's weak condition.

'CAMPS BREED WAR,' RECRUITS ARE TOLD

Three young men were detained for a time yesterday morning by the police of the New York Central Railroad who found them in Grand Central Station distributing circulars to men bound for the Citizens' Military Training Camp at Plattsburg. The circulars branded the camps as "breeding places of war."

The three were questioned by detectives from Police Headquarters, and were released because the police found the pamphlets were not of sufficiently radical character to warrant arrests. They gave their names as Harry Karis of 1,271 Grant Avenue, Philip Frankfeld of 2,074 Daly Avenue, and Louis Astroff of 761 East 156th Street, all in the Bronx. They said they had obtained the circulars from the Young Workers' League of America, District 2, and gave the address as 108 East Fourteenth Street, which is the address of the Workers' Party of America, the Communist organization which is seeking the repeal of the Defense act and the recognition of the Soviet Government.

The circular was addressed, "To all C. M. T. C. recruits," and was signed with the name of the Young Workers' League. Besides calling the camps breeding places of strife, the circular appealed to the candidates not to return to the camps next year. It also purported to expose the "real purpose" of the training camps, and called upon all the men to insist upon their "rights."

The Government pays every expense incurred by the recruits, and in return asks them to put in four and a half hours drill each day. Some of the "rights" they were asked in the circular to insist upon were three and a half hours daily drill, the right to check their civilian clothes when and where they pleased, to wear civilian clothes on Saturdays and Sundays, to have attendance at Sunday services made voluntary, and to demand a reduction of military police at the camp.

The 850 young men in the detachment led by Captain Robert H. Tolman of the 312th Infantry marched into the camp at Plattsburg at 7 o'clock last night. Colonel Robert H. Hughes of the Twenty-sixth Infantry, commandant of the camp, said Captain Tolman had reported that the young citizen soldiers had not paid the slightest attention to the circulars distributed on their departure.

RUSSIAN RAINS REDUCE PROSPECTS FOR GRAIN

MOSCOW, Aug. 6.—Highly optimistic crop forecasts issued recently are not likely to be maintained as a result of the unfavorable weather of the past three weeks. For the first time in several months there has been in some sections a rise in grain prices, which hitherto have gone steadily downward. Kiev reports a sharp jump in rye, wheat and corn on the strength of heavy rains.

From the viewpoint of the Soviet authorities the change from a bumper to a good average harvest is not entirely a misfortune, as tending to obviate the danger of Trotsky's famous "scissors," or disproportion between the prices of agricultural products and manufactured goods.

While it is now admitted that the current year's grain export showed little or no profit on paper, it is understood here that this was due rather to excessive costs of collection, storage and transportation than to the high internal purchase price, whose reduction placed undue hardship on the peasants.

Great interest is taken here in the operations of the Canadian "pool," which claims it paid the farmer an average rate of $1.20 a bushel for wheat. It is generally agreed by Soviet experts that the Russian peasant would be satisfied with a cash price of $1.10, and the State Grain Export Corporation sent representatives to Winnipeg and Toronto to study the pool's methods.

But the political effect of the "scissors" is more important here than the immediate economic factor. It is no secret that Opposition critics within the Communist Party anticipate widespread peasant grumbling in the coming Fall, and for that reason the Administration is not displeased over the 10 or 12 per cent. rise in grain prices.

WANTED TO BE CREMATED.

The will of Robert A. Bould was filed in the Surrogates' Court yesterday leaving an estate of less than $5,000 to his mother, Mrs. Margaret Jane Bould of 15 West Fifteenth Street.

Mr. Bould, who was an investment manager and editor of "The Bawl Street Journal," was drowned in Long Island Sound on Aug. 2 in a heoric attempt to rescue a girl. His body has not yet been recovered. A part of his will gives directions as to the manner in which his body is to be prepared after death.

"I direct that upon my death," his will reads, "my body be placed in charge of my mother and be immediately removed to an undertaking establishment, where it is to lie untouched, packed in ice, for not less than three days. At the expiration of that time I direct that my remains be cremated and the ashes given to my mother to dispose of as she sees fit.

"I direct that there be no funeral except the simplest possible service."

The document explains that "my wife being otherwise provided for, I hereby leave and bequeath all properties, personal and real, and moneys, to my mother, Margaret Jane Bould, her heirs and assigns forever. I make no provision for my son here as provision is made by life insurance policies in his name payable to my mother, Margaret Jane Bould, as his trustee and guardian."

The son, Lincoln Bould, 3 years old, lives with his mother, Mrs. Dorothy Lincoln Bould, at 1,175 Park Avenue. The will was dated Sept. 11, 1923.

INCLUDES MUNSEY NOTES

Trust Co. Holds $190,000 Lien on Securities for Loan—Will Contested by Daughter.

A list of all the property of Louis Sherry, late restaurateur, so far as it is known at this time, was filed in the Surrogates' Court yesterday by the Guaranty Trust Company, pursuant to the appointment by Surrogate Foley of that company as temporary administrator of the estate, pending contest of the will.

The list indicates that the value of the estate is considerably less than the million it was estimated at the time of Mr. Sherry's death, and probably not much more than $500,000. The total assets will exceed $700,000, it was indicated, but the Guaranty Trust Company holds a lien of $190,000 against securities in its possession and other encumbrances will lessen the value even more.

The chief beneficiary under Mr. Sherry's will is Dr. J. Bentley Squier of the Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Centre. Mrs. Marie Bertha Sherry, wife of the testator, who had been separated from him since 1908, received $50,000 outright, and a $6,000 annuity, and Ernest Sherry, the son, inherited $50,000 outright.

Mrs. Dorothy Ingersoll, daughter of a deceased daughter of Mr. Sherry, filed a contest of his will on July 14, asserting that the bequest of the residue exceeds one-half of the total value of the estate and is therefore invalid to the extent of the excess over one-half.

The papers filed in the Surrogates' Court yesterday show that Mr. Sherry owned holdings of corporate stock of the City of New York valued at $262,437, which included 50,000 shares of 4½s, due 1967; 30,000 of 4½s, due 1957; 48,000 of 4½s, due 1967; 50,000 of 4½s, due 1972, and 42,000 of 4½s, due 1965. These securities are subject to a lien of the Guaranty Trust Company to secure a loan to Mr. Sherry. Other stocks brought the total up to $287,236.

The only other securities given in the papers filed by the trust company were 2,200 shares of Louis Sherry, Inc., common, and 1,900 shares of the preferred stock. The affidavit explains that the value of the Sherry company's stock is unknown, but that the trust company understands that "Mr. Sherry in his lifetime was offered $75,000 for his holdings."

All of the foregoing securities are held by the trust company at its Fifth Avenue branch, with cash, including interest, totaling $96,714. Cash in the possession of the company's Paris office totals $20,934. Three notes of Frank A. Munsey, for $100,000 each, are valued, with interest, at $353,000. It is understood these notes are in part payment for Mr. Sherry's country estate at Manhasset, L. I., which Mr. Munsey bought in 1922. The notes are due Nov. 17, 1926; Nov. 17, 1927, and Nov. 17, 1928.

Sold a Note to J. P. Morgan.

Other assets include personal effects in New York, furnishings in an apartment in Paris, which were given to the late Frank A. Munsey by Mr. Sherry's will, and two automobiles in Paris. The value of this property is not known.

The trust company's affidavit explains that "in 1905, as deponent is informed and believes, Mr. Sherry sold property at Narragansett Pier, R. I., and received in part payment a note for $150,000 secured by a mortgage; he sold the note to J. P. Morgan and executed to him a guarantee of the payment of the note. The note is unpaid and at the present time there could not be realized in a foreclosure of the mortgage sufficient money to pay the note."

The schedule concludes with the following two items: "Remainder interest which will be due estate under deed of trust established Jan. 28, 1922. Excess income and remainder interest under deed of trust dated Nov. 24, 1924, and supplements thereto, dated Nov. 30, 1925." The nature of these trusts or the sums due the estate could not be learned.

In opposing the appointment of the Guaranty Trust Company as temporary administrator of the estate, Ernest Sherry, the testator's son, attacked the transaction between the trust company and his father whereby the elder Sherry was to receive $100,000 a year for the rest of his life for the consideration of turning over to the trust company three leaseholds, comprising his restaurant site at Forty-fourth Street and Fifth Avenue, estimated to be worth $2,000,000.

Charles H. Sabin, Chairman of the Board of Directors of the Guaranty Trust Company, explained the details of this transaction and gave the trust company's explanation of the transaction in another affidavit. It said that the trust company regularly paid Mr. Sherry monthly instalments of the $100,000 annuity, and that Mr. Sherry considered the transaction as beneficial and entirely satisfactory to him.

An affidavit by Allen Wardwell of the firm of Davis, Polk, Wardwell, Gardiner & Reed, attorneys for the trust company, corroborated Mr. Sabin's account of the transaction.

Grant C. Fox, as attorney for the proponents, filed an affidavit opposing the appointment of an administrator, but suggesting that if the Court decided contrariwise that the Guaranty Trust Company be appointed.

The Presbyterian Hospital, through its attorneys, urged that the Guaranty Trust Company be appointed temporary administrator and Mrs. Ingersoll, in an affidavit, said that she believed the estate to be worth at least $500,000 and that she thought a temporary administrator should be appointed.

GEN. E. F. GLENN DIES OF A STROKE

In World War Commanded the 83d Division, Which He Took to France From Ohio.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 6 (AP).—Brig. Gen. Edwin F. Glenn, U. S. A., retired, died late last night at the home of his daughter, Mrs. James A. Garfield, in Mentor, Ohio, from a stroke suffered two weeks ago. His age was 69.

He leaves a wife and four daughters—Mrs. Garfield, Mrs. Harold R. Tyler of Waterville, N. Y.; Mrs. Otis R. Cole, wife of an army officer at Clemson College, S. C., and Miss Margaret M. Glenn of Boston.

General Glenn, who was one of the best-known officers in the army before his retirement in 1920, commanded the Eighty-third Division overseas. After graduating from the United States Military Academy at West Point in 1877 he was assigned to an army post near Minneapolis. While there he studied law in the University of Minnesota. In 1891 he was admitted to the bar. Later he write a book on international law. Though qualified to practice law, General Glenn spent nearly all his mature life in the army. In his early days he served with the Twenty-fifth Infantry, a crack negro regiment. With it he went to the Philippines and later served along the Mexican border. In 1907 he was made a Lieutenant Colonel and transferred to the Twenty-third Infantry. Four years later he became a Colonel.

When the question of American intervention in Mexico was attracting wide attention in 1916 Colonel Glenn was Chief of Staff to General Wood, then head of the Eastern Department of the army, with headquarters at Governors Island. Speaking before the Sphinx Club at the Waldorf-Astoria, the Colonel declared that if the United States were forced to intervene it would take five years and an army of 500,000 trained men to establish a stable government in Mexico. He also declared that foreign nations knew that the small American Army was "the most pathetic thing that ever came along in history."

A few months later Colonel Glenn was transferred from Governors Island to the Eighteenth Infantry at Douglas, Ariz. It was conjectured that his speech might have prompted the transfer. It was suggested also that resentment might have been aroused against Colonel Glenn by the removal of commanding officers of the Sixty-ninth New York Infantry for physical disability just as that regiment was about to leave for the Mexican border.

Soon after the United States entered the war in April, 1917, Colonel Glenn went to France with the first American troops. A few months later he was raised to the rank of Brigadier General. In August, 1917, he was appointed temporarily to the rank of Major General and ordered back to the United States to take command of the Eighty-third Division, which was about to be formed at Camp Sherman, Chillicothe, Ohio.

While at Camp Sherman General Glenn refused to permit William Jennings Bryan to make a political speech there and was upheld by the Secretary of War.

General Glenn was an intimate friend of Major General Leonard Wood. He was born in Greensboro, N. C., Jan. 10, 1857. He married Louise Smyth in St. Paul, Minn., on April 30, 1886. Of the four daughters born to them the youngest is a well known Christian Scientist and at the outbreak of the World War was First Reader of the Christian Science Church in Berlin.

Mrs. Kate Charles Hough.

Mrs. Kate Charles Hough, supervisor of the dispensary of Broad Street Hospital, died last Tuesday in Bridgeport, Conn. Mrs. Hough studied nursing at the Newark City Hospital and after her graduation specialized in surgical work. During the war she saw service at the front in France for which she was decorated by the French Government. After her return she organized and directed the nursing service of the United States Veterans Bureau. She is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Leonard M. Christie, and a sister, Miss Nona Charles.

Thilman P. J. Fabry.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 6 (AP).—Thilman P. J. Fabry, 68, well-known artist, whose woodcarving and plaster ornaments can be found in churches, theatres and buildings throughout the East, died today at a convalescent home here, after a brief illness.

Mr. Fabry created the elaborate woodcarvings in the home here of George Eastman kodak manufacturer and philanthropist, as well as the decorative work in many homes and buildings in New York, Washington, Philadelphia and Chicago.

KEHOE FOUND GUILTY OF MILK CONSPIRACY

protection to violate the law," said he. "I couldn't expect to produce a bishop or a priest here as witnesses, and I could prove a conspiracy only through the testimony of those who joined in the corruption. But Kehoe, not Doner or Danziger, is on trial. Doner's turn will come and come soon.

"We must believe one of two things in this case. Either the evidence presented here by the people is a 'frame-up' or the defense offered by Kehoe is a 'frame-up.' The nature of the case makes no other conclusion possible. You will have to believe that Health Commissioner Harris deliberately entered into a conspiracy with me to hatch a plot to send an innocent man to jail if you bring in a verdict of acquittal; or you will have to believe that, following the first law of nature, which is self-preservation, Kehoe has 'framed' his defense. I leave it to your common sense. Who has the greater interest in a 'frame-up'?"

Mr. Pecora asked if the jury thought the $122,000 which Kehoe had deposited in the Lawyers' Trust Company in two years had come from legitimate sources.

"He did not bring a single book or record here to show where those deposits—$46,000 in 1924 and $76,000 in 1925—came from," went on Mr. Pecora. "He kept the record of his receipts in a ten-cent bank book which he was careful to destroy at the end of each year. Where did he get the $10,000 worth of Liberty bonds he said he sold? Liberty bonds do not grow on trees. Where did he get the securities he sold and the real estate?"

Charge to the Jury.

Judge Levine, in his charge, instructed the jury that Doner and Frederick W. Kautzman, another witness, were accomplices and that evidence tending to corroborate their testimony was necessary for a conviction. They were not to disregard Doner's testimony, nor that of Danziger, he said, and the sufficiency of the corroboration offered by the People was for them to judge.

"If you disbelieve Doner, you must not convict the defendant," said the Court. "If you do believe him and think his story is corroborated, you should convict. If you find that the defendant combined with Doner to commit the acts charged in the indictment, then the defendant is criminally responsible for any act of his associate done to effect the object of the conspiracy. And any act done by Doner, who is under indictment with the defendant, in pursuance with the original concerted plan, is, in the contemplation of the law, the act of both.

"If any of the material facts of a case are at variance with the probabilities of guilt, it would be the duty of the jury to give the defendant the benefit of the doubt raised. To sustain the charge against the defendant it is necessary for the people to establish beyond a reasonable doubt the following:

"First, that Doner and the defendant conspired to commit acts injurious to the public health and the perversion or obstruction of justice and of the due administration of the laws; second, that the acts which they conspired to commit were unlawful—that is to say, were prohibited by the laws of this State; and, third, that the defendants conspired to do the unlawful acts with a corrupt or criminal intent.

Proof of Criminal Intent.

"The people are not required by direct evidence to establish the criminal intent of the defendant, but the jury may infer its existence from the nature of the acts alleged to have been committed by the defendant and Doner and from their conduct and declarations.

"All questions of fact, including that of criminal intent, must be submitted to you for determination. It is not necessary that all of the parties to the corrupt agreement should have participated in the doing of these overt acts or any overt act alleged to have been committed. It will, however, be necessary for you to find that some overt act charged in the indictment was done by the defendant or Doner in furtherance of the object thereof."

Forty-nine requests for special instructions to the jury were presented by the defense. Judge Levine either refused to make them or said they had been covered in his charge.

ON WAY TO HIS LAW OFFICE

Was Brother of Thomas F. McAvoy and Uncle of Jurist—Noted for Philanthropies.

Francis S. McAvoy, the last Recorder of the Court of General Sessions in this city, dropped dead in the street yesterday morning near his home, 461 West 153d Street. He was 70 years old, a brother of Thomas F. McAvoy, one-time Police Commissioner, and an uncle of Justice John McAvoy of the Supreme Court.

Mr. McAvoy had been apparently in excellent health, members of his family said. He arose early yesterday, went to the Church of St. Catharine of Genoa, at Amsterdam Avenue and 153d Street, received holy communion from the Rev. B. H. Clark, returned to his home for breakfast and started for his law offices, at 51 Chambers Street. He walked toward the subway station at Broadway and 157th Street, but at Broadway and 153d Street he was seen to stagger and fall. Several persons hastened to his aid, and found him already unconscious. When an ambulance, with Dr. Coughlin, arrived from Columbus Hospital he was dead. "Heart failure," the physician said.

At that time the identity of Mr. McAvoy was not known. Thomas F. McAvoy Jr., a nephew, identified the body in a police station.

Mr. McAvoy had the distinction of being the last Recorder of the Court of General Sessions, succeeding John W. Goff and holding the office until it was abolished in 1907 by the Legislature. The distinction was no mean one, for the office of Recorder was the oldest in the history of the city, with the single exception of that of Mayor. It was created in 1683. When Recorder Goff was elevated to the Supreme Court, Mr. McAvoy was elected Recorder by the Board of Aldermen after a bitter fight that lasted many days. His opponent was James Cowden Meyers.

Twenty years ago, and more, Mr. McAvoy was active in Tammany politics. For a time he was a district leader. For twenty-nine years he was in the customs service. Meantime his brother Thomas had become Police Commissioner and one of the "big three" of Tammany Hall. In 1905, partly because of this influence, Francis McAvoy was made a City Magistrate. Later he was elevated to a Judgeship in the Court of Special Sessions.

As a jurist Mr. McAvoy found himself associated with Charles S. Whitman, once District Attorney and later Governor. Mr. Whitman said yesterday of him: "He was a man of very attractive personality and high character."

Warren W. Foster, formerly Judge of General Sessions, said: "Mr. McAvoy was a man of very delightful personality, kindly and obliging, a profound student of the law. It was only his refusal to accept a renomination that took him off the bench."

Justice Thomas C. T. Crain, long a friend of Mr. McAvoy, said: "Mr. McAvoy was a warm-hearted, conscientious man. His loss will be felt by a very large circle."

Mr. McAvoy was noted on Washington Heights for his philanthropies. He was Chairman of the Catholic Charities Society, President of the Holy Name Society of the Church of St. Catharine of Genoa and President of the Hamilton Community Council. He is survived by his widow, two sons and a daughter.

Mr. McAvoy's funeral will be held from his late residence on Monday at 9:30 A. M. Interment will be in St. Raymond's Cemetery.

He was secretary of the Erie Silk Mills of Erie, Pa., and held an executive post with the Pussy Willow Silk Company.

DECLARE TRADE TIES LINK US WITH JAPAN

LIBERAL JAPANESE TREND

WILSON INCIDENT DISCLOSED

Prof. Lee Asserts Economic Pressure Caused Japan to Reduce Her Siberian Army in 1918.

WILLIAMSTOWN, Mass., Aug. 6.—Speakers at the Institute of Politics today declared that the close commercial ties between Japan and the United States, their joint interest in the fostering of trade relations with China, and particularly Japan's dependence on the American market, made war between the two nations extremely remote.

It was pointed out that the basis of Japan's foreign policy was a pressing need for the cultivation of markets abroad. For Japan to lose a single foreign market, especially that of the United States, it was said, would be ruinous. It was asserted that the diminution of influence of the military party in Japan was a healthy sign pointing in the direction of the strengthening of civilian influence.

Since the Washington conference Japan has retired from every bit of territory she gained by aggression during the World War, it was asserted, because she has become convinced that military force would lead to war.

The speakers were F. R. Eldridge, Chief of the Far Eastern Division of the United States Department of Commerce; H. Saito, Japanese Consul General in New York; Henry K. Norton, writer on Far Eastern affairs, and Dean Frederick E. Lee of the University of Maryland.

Mr. Eldridge discussed Japan's growing dependence of foreign markets for her food supplies and raw materials, and indicated that Japan's foreign policy was a direct outcome of her dependent economic condition. The recent industrial development of China, he said, coincided with the increase in the capacity of the American market to absorb Japan's silk. The result has been that nine-tenths of the nation's raw silk, which is 42 per cent. of Japan's exports, comes to the United States.

Economic Position of Japan.

"Japan today finds herself in a singularly weak economic position despite a marvelous industrial growth," Mr. Eldridge said. "With a population growing at the estimated rate of 1 per cent. a year, these additional 750,000 new Japanese subjects are being fed on an ever increasing ratio of imported foodstuffs."

"Japan, moreover, is singularly deficient in raw materials and must depend upon India, the United States and China for almost all her raw cotton, upon Australia for wool, upon China for hides and upon British Malaysia and the Dutch East Indies for rubber and sugar. Under such circumstances Japan is not only constantly menaced by this dependence upon foreign sources of raw materials but in all other exports except raw silk, her foreign markets are constantly subject to local industrial development such as threatened to remove China from her list of best customers."

Continuing, Mr. Eldridge said:

"Japan presents the anomaly of rapid industrial growth coupled with an increasingly difficult economic position. Her very economic existence depends upon a still more diligent pursuit of the same policies of economy at home and the still wider cultivation of markets abroad that has characterized the last few years of her economic history. That these economic facts are the basis of Japan's foreign policy, any one familiar with the trend of that policy in recent years cannot deny. The loss of any single important foreign market which now bolsters up Japan's economic framework would be sufficient to throw the whole finely balanced structure into a singularly precarious position."

Saito Sees Accord With America.

Mr. Saito admitted that while the diminution of military influence in Japan had not been as rapid as might be wished, the desire of a large proportion of the civilian population, and especially the younger generation, was to liberalize Japan. As an indication of this tendency he pointed to the substitution of civilians for military generals as governors in the Kwantung leased territory and Korea, and the much discussed constitutional amendment to permit the appointment of civilians as Ministers of War and the Navy.

The Japanese Consul General also stressed the economic aspect of the situation and said that Japan's chief concern was to settle her political situation and increase her purchasing power. In the prosperity of China, he said, Japan saw her own prosperity.

"These are the outlines of Japan's position and policies on the Asian continent," he declared. "There can be no serious conflict of interests between Japan and the United States in these respects. There cannot occur any clashing of interests. There is every reason to believe that our two nations can and should cooperate in our activities in China and other Oriental countries, not only in the interests of our own being but in the interests of peace and progress of the whole of Eastern Asia."

Mr. Saito's statements on the liberalization of Japanese opinion were concurred in by Mr. Norton who contrasted Japan's aggressive policy in Asia during the war when her imperialists were in control, with her recent policy. At one time in 1918, he said, the truculence exhibited by Japan brought her into several disputes with the United States and war between the two nations actually hung in the balance for three days.

"The Washington Conference marks a distinct reversal of Japan's policy toward China and the Continent generally," he said, adding that since the Washington Conference Japan has retired from every piece of territory she gained during the World War, with the exception of South Manchuria, where she took over an expiring lease of Russia.

Wilson's Use of Economic Pressure.

Dean Frederick E. Lee of the University of Maryland recounted a hitherto unwritten incident in which he said President Wilson authorized the use of economic pressure to compel Japan to live up to the agreement regarding allied intervention in Siberia in 1918.

According to the story, Japan sent 70,000 troops into Siberia instead of the 7,000 agreed upon in 1918, and when this number was suddenly reduced to 24,000 no reason was given for the change. It appeared, said Dr. Lee, that President Wilson, disappointed by the failure of Japan to carry out the agreement, authorized the War Trade Board to employ the strongest of economic pressure against Japan to compel her to live up to her agreement.

The method chosen was by means of an unofficial threat to Japan by the War Trade Board that unless the movement of Japanese troops into Siberia was immediately stopped and reversed the cargoes of rationed steel and cotton then en route to Japan would be diverted to other ports and no more exports of these commodities would be licensed by the War Trade Board for Japan. Further, that shipments of raw silk and other Japanese products then en route to this country which were to pay for the cotton and steel would not be accepted, and no more imports of the sort would be licensed.

The threat was not conveyed through diplomatic channels, partly because it was believed and later proved that the Japanese Foreign Office was not a party to this violation of the agreement, but that the military party then in power was responsible for the situation.

"The effect of this application of pressure was immediate," declared Dr. Lee. "Within forty-eight hours after the dispatch of the cable from Washington the Japanese troop trains which had been headed westward were going east, much to the surprise of the American and other allied civil, military and naval observers at Irkutsk, Chita and Manchouli. It was the outstanding success of this use of economic pressure, in my opinion, that caused President Wilson to lay such stress on the use of economic restrictions and economic pressure in the covenant of the League of Nations."

Dr. Lee, at the time which he described, was in charge of the economic intelligence of the Russian bureau of the War Trade Board.

Garfield Urges Coal Fact Finding.

Dr. Harry A. Garfield, Chairman of the Institute of Politics, spoke briefly today at the round-table discussion on coal. He told of some of his experiences while Fuel Administrator during the war and approved the plan of fact finding for the industry.

At the general conference on public opinion in world affairs conducted by Arthur S. Draper, assistant editor of The New York Herald Tribune, Adamantios Th. Polyzioces, editor of the Greek newspaper Atlantis of New York, said that in the last decade more news and more editorial comment on world affairs had appeared in the American press than in the whole press of Europe taken as a unit.

Dr. L. S. Rowe, Director General of the Pan American Union, addressing the round table on Latin-American affairs, suggested the establishment of scholarships for Latin-American students in American universities as a step toward the attainment of a better understanding between the United States and South America.

Nicholas Politis, former Greek Minister to France, lectured tonight on the Locarno agreements and compared them with the Geneva protocol. Locarno, said M. Politis, was a great victory of peace over war. The agreements prepared a new atmosphere where suspicion gave way to trust.

SAYS ERIE LIKES TOMPKINS.

Bradley Declares His County Wants Westchester Justice for Governor.

Special to The New York Times.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 7.—Fred A. Bradley, Chairman of the Erie County Republican Committee, contends that Justice Arthur S. Tompkins of Westchester County carries the strongest appeal to the rank and file of Western New York Republicans as a candidate for Governor.

"It is not easy to explain why there should be a sentiment for a particular candidate," said Mr. Bradley, "but most of the Republicans who have come to see me in Buffalo, including members of the County Committee, have shown a marked preference for Justice Tompkins. They speak of him as 'a regular fellow,' courageous and clean-cut. They say he is the man to give battle to Governor Smith; that he can give and take.

"When you get that from a number of sources you begin to believe it yourself, and I have begun to believe that Justice Tompkins is the man we should nominate. From what I gather he is the type we need in this State at this time. No question can be raised against his ability and integrity, and that goes a long ways in a campaign."

NEW YORKERS AT 'PAY CALL.'

Line Up at Finance Office at Fort Ethan Allen.

Special to The New York Times.

FORT ETHAN ALLEN, Vt., Aug. 6.—Evening parade today completed for the New York boys who are part of the citizens' military training camp at this post their first week of actual work. During this period the young men have gone through the routine of the "mill" which turns them from civilians into olive drab, through the shaking down into the units in which they will remain for the next month, and through the routine of drills, which they have taken to with gratifying celerity.

The New Yorkers were initiated this afternoon into the mysteries of "pay call," when they were lined up at the finance office and repaid the amounts which they had laid out for their fare to this post and their subsistence en route.

News has been received here that Major Gen. Charles P. Summerall, commanding the second corps area, will arrive a week from today to inspect the New York section and the camp.

76 BAYONNE JOBS DISPUTED.

Court Grants Writ in Test Case on Fire and Police Appointmens.

TRENTON, N. J., Aug. 6.—The New Jersey Supreme Court granted today to Patrick J. O'Connell, Bayonne Director of Parks and Public Property and former Director of Public Safety, a writ of certiorari to review the appointment of William E. Price to the Bayonne Fire Department by Dr. Bert Daly, Mr. O'Connell's successor as Public Safety Director.

The appointment of Mr. Price is a test case. It involves the status of seventy-six other members of the Bayonne Fire and Police departments. Mr. O'Connell's action was based on the contention that his removal in October, 1924, and Dr. Daly's appointment as Director of Public Safety were illegal and that Dr. Daly was without authority to make the appointments.

The action is the outgrowth of the Bayonne municipal political situation. It is expected that the review will be argued at the October term of the Supreme Court.

Badly Shredded Bottom Is Being Repaired—Knud Rasmussen Rejoins the Expedition.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

That is what we see today at the head of Upernivik fjord, where our ship, the Morrissey, has been hauled out with the help of the Eskimos.

We had one nice break of luck yesterday. The Danish patrol vessel which represents the Danish Navy in these waters arrived. Her captain and officers, with the entire crew, came up to see us. They have a diver, which they have offered. They have also come forward with tools and other equipment, which are proving useful.

Knud Rasmussen joined us today. We missed him at Godhavn. He is a very necessary addition to our party, because of his knowledge of the Eskimos and their language. Had we not met with an accident and been forced to return to Upernivik, we should have missed him altogether. This is the silver lining to our present cloud.

Last night we had to dismantle our radio for repairs. It was damaged when we ran on the rocks.

This dispatch, sent from the schooner Morrissey, was picked up by an amateur radio operator, J. R. Miller of Hammond, Ind.

TURKEY CONSIDERS LEAGUE.

Germany Urges Her Entry, While the Soviet Opposes It.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ANGORA, Aug. 6.—The Turkish Government for some time has been considering the advisability of becoming a member of the League of Nations. Powerful influences have been brought to bear both for and against entry into the League. The principal opposition comes from the Soviet Government, which continues to urge on Turkey the necessity of remaining outside the Geneva circle.

There is reason to believe that those members of the Government who are known to listen sympathetically to Soviet advice are conducting an active campaign behind the scenes against the League. One argument advanced against the entry is the Mosul question which so much disturbed the serenity of Geneva and was finally settled by direct negotiations between Great Britain and Turkey.

Among the nations which are believed to be urging Turkey to join the League is Germany, regarded as the most active. Germany doubtless will soon have a seat in the Council of the League, and it is thought that she would like to see the only one of her late allies, who is not a member of the League now, join it.

After the signing of the Locarno treaties last October a Russo-Turkish treaty was negotiated in which each party pledged itself not to join any union of powers which might become the enemy of the other.

ASKS 100 NEW PLAYGROUNDS

Committee Wants $78,60. Added to Budget—Finds They Cut Deaths.

Pointing to the decrease in the number of children killed on the streets since the establishment of school playgrounds, the Committee to "Save the Children's Lives" in an open letter to the President of the Board of Education and the members of the Budget Commission suggested yesterday that the amount requested for the coming year to cover the public school playgrounds be increased to permit opening a hundred additional playgrounds.

"During July, 1924," the letter states, "thirty-nine children were killed; during July, 1925, forty children were killed; during July, 1926, with the increased traffic owing to the Interborough strike, only twenty-four children were killed. There is no question but that there is some relation between the decreased number of deaths of children under sixteen and the 100,000 children taken off the streets and placed under supervision in our public school playgrounds."

"The hundred new playgrounds," the letter continues, "would require an addition to the budget of at least $78,600. Of this $21,700 would be expended for supplies and equipment and $56,900 for instructors' and teachers' salaries.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—A tall, white-bearded Hindu of high caste, dressed in a flowing robe of white wool, stepped out of a taxicab on Guilford Street here yesterday and entered the studio of Jacob Epstein, the modernist sculptor and the subject of many controversies about art.

The Hindu was Rabindranath Tagore, mystic poet and winner of the Nobel Prize, who has been sitting for Epstein for several days. "He is wonderfully still and patient," said the sculptor in describing his sitter.

SEAS WRECK BOARDWALK.

Tweny-Foot Section of Structure at Long Beach Collapses.

LONG BEACH, L. I., Aug. 6.—High seas tonight undermined cement pillars supporting the Boardwalk, and a twenty-foot section of the walk in front of the Brighton Hotel collapsed.

Mayor William J. Dalton, informed of the accident, announced that he would ask the Board of Council, sitting on next Tuesday night, to authorize a bond issue for the construction of jetties to save the beach. The waterline has advanced more than twenty feet from the normal mark of last Summer, and seas have washed away the beach in many places.

BOYS LEAD Y. M. C. A. TO TRY NEW LINES

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

HELSINGFORS, Aug. 6.—The Y. M. C. A. congress here has ended with a general feeling that successful work has been done, partly on new lines, thanks to boy delegates' inspiring participation. Great praise is given to American insight and ability in smoothing out divergencies.

Several important plenary resolutions were passed concerning vital questions. It was decided to give the greatest attention to racial and international relations by means of steady intercourse at conferences and boys' camps. To further stimulate Christian work among the Orientals, it was decided to hold a Far Eastern conference in 1928.

The sex question was the subject of comprehensive recommendations, including cooperation among parents, doctors and teachers to give boys and young men accurate knowledge concerning sex in a Christian setting. Peace work will be extended through research, instructive literature and collaboration of great world organizations.

It was decided to hold the next world conference in 1930, the place to be fixed later, and it is expected that boys will take part in larger numbers.

FILIPINOS TO OPPOSE FIRESTONE'S PLANS

DEMAND SMALL HOLDINGS

United States Owns the Public Domain There, However, and Congress Has a Free Hand.

COMPROMISE IS SUGGESTED

Natives, It Is Said, Might Agree Later to Release Large Tracts in Leases.

MANILA, Aug. 6.—Commenting on Harvey Firestone's recommendation to President Coolidge that Congress amend the Philippine land laws so that American tire companies could produce rubber on a large scale on the islands of Mindanao and Sulu to break the British and Dutch monopoly prices, Manuel Quezon, President of the Philippine Senate, said today that the Filipinos would never consent to any change in the land laws. He said that the only way Americans can get rubber from the Philippines is for American capital to finance small plantations within the land laws. Mr. Quezon, who absolutely controls the Legislature, said:

"We are unalterably opposed to any amendment of our land laws by the American Congress. In the Jones law of 1916 Congress placed the disposition of the public domain of the Philippines in the hands of the Philippine Legislature. We think there would be no justification for Congress to resume control of our public domain.

"Since the establishment of civil government in the Philippines Congress has never assumed legislative control of our public domain except to the extent in limiting to 2,500 acres the area of public land that could be owned by a corporation. In other words, the limitation originally was imposed by Congress itself.

"As far as the Philippine Legislature is concerned, it does not intend to permit any corporation to own more than the limit now allowed by law (2,500 acres).

Fear American Corporations.

"The reasons for our attitude are both political and social. Politically, we fear that the ownership of large tracts of land by American corporations would increase the opposition to our future independence and perhaps actually prevent Congress from granting it.

"Even if that objection did not exist, we would still oppose it on social grounds, because the concentration of the public domain in a few hands would deprive the people of the opportunity to own their own land and homes.

"Our policy is in favor of the individual ownership of land. We are trying to induce our people to own and cultivate their own land, because we think that a community of land owners is a stable, peaceful and orderly community."

Mr. Quezon said that Mr. Firestone, on his recent visit here, tried to persuade the Filipinos to set aside 1,000,000 acres in Mindanao for large tracts of at least 75,000 acres for various rubber companies. Mr. Quezon added:

"We think Mr. Firestone was wrong in estimating that such large tracts are necessary to produce rubber economically on a sound basis. The experience of corporations already producing rubber shows that they can do it profitably on small plantations. Therefore there is no need of changing the present laws. If large quantities are necessary, it may be possible to organize a corporation to finance many small plantations, but that is the only way large-scale production is possible."

United States Owns Public Domain.

Senator Quezon then said that the Philippine Legislature will not grant any special concession in a lease whereby an American company could acquire 100,000 acres for a term of years to finance small surrounding plantations for the seven years necessary to make a rubber yield, and thus encourage native participation.

But there is reason to believe that it might compromise on such an arrangement rather than see Congress amend the land laws.

The Philippines public domain is the property of the United States, inasmuch as Spain ceded the Philippines to us and we paid Spain $20,000,000.

Congress has an absolute right to change the insular land laws if it sees fit. If the Filipinos will not consent to some arrangement whereby American capital would be willing to develop rubber on a large scale, the only alternative, it is suggested, would be to amend the land laws or pass the Bacon bill separating Mindanao and Sulu and other rubber territory inhabited by Moros from the rest of the Philippines.

The Filipinos undoubtedly would be less hostile to a change in the land laws than to dismemberment of the islands.

Undeveloped the Philippines public domain comprises about three-quarters of the 115,000 square miles of the archipelago. There is 73,000,000 acres of public land, compared to 9,000,000 acres of cultivated land bearing rice, corn, hemp, sugar, tobacco and cocoanuts, 14,000,000 acres of fresh or open land, and 46,000 acres in forests.

Uncertainty Hampers Development.

If the present uncertainty as to whether the Philippines are to get independence should be ended, and the political status of the archipelago be fixed long enough to attract American capital, it might be possible to develop rubber through changing the land laws or by making special grants.

Incidentally, Congress could make a special grant as well as change the land laws.

Here all rubber experts do not agree with Firestone that a change in the land laws is necessary for large-scale rubber production. A special mission of the Department of Commerce, after spending eight months on a survey last year, reported that the land laws did not lend themselves to large capital operations in rubber plantations; nevertheless, it continued, "there is prosperity of native planters in certain parts of the Netherlands where rubber planting has been fostered by the Dutch authorities. Progress through the same means might be taken, encouraging the Filipinos to plant rubber with their annual crop of forest clearing."

This report said that the climatic conditions of the Philippines are favorable for rubber planting and that the soil, topography and accessibility make the Philippines superior for rubber planting to the land now available for new plantations in Sumatra and Malaya, the world's principal rubber producing districts.

The report said the Philippines might produce 70,000 tons of rubber annually with the labor available, but some economists here think the report underestimated the labor supply and they feel that a much larger production is possible.

Bonuses for Street Car Men Who Run Without Accidents

The Brooklyn City Railroad Company has established a bonus plan for conductors and motormen to reduce accidents on its lines. Under the plan each employe will receive $5 for each thirty days in which he operates cars without accident. The plan is part of an agreement made with the employes concerning working conditions for the year.

Awards will be distributed on Dec. 15 of each year, so that employes entitled to bonuses may collect the funds in time for Christmas shopping. The company expects the reduction in payments for damages will at least equal the amount of the bonuses.

ICE DEALERS CAUGHT IN RAID BY OTTINGER

Attorney General Has Summonses Served on 17 Delinquent Brooklyn Peddlers.

Attorney General Albert Ottinger went on a tour of Brooklyn yesterday to see if members of a combination of ice peddlers which he recently broke up were observing the law. As a result he had seventeen peddlers served with summonses, ten to appear in the New Jersey Avenue Police Court Monday morning and seven to answer in the Coney Island Police Court on Thursday.

The Attorney General was accompanied by Deputy Attorney General Israel M. Lerner, who conducted the ice investigations; State Trooper Jack Gaffney and Patrolman James Reardon of the Forty-third Precinct.

Many of the peddlers encountered had scales on their wagons and were using them. Others were not, it was said. Still others said they had left their scales at home, and one asserted that his scales had broken only yesterday morning.

At the ice plant of the Rubel Coal and Ice Corporation, on the line between Brownsville and East New York, the corporation operates one of several "cash and carry" stations, where men, women and children buy ice at 10 cents for twenty-five pounds and carry it away in toy wagons and baby carriages. There were no scales at the station visited, the Attorney General's office announced, and the man on the platform received a summons. At Coney Island a summons was given to a driver for the Knickerbocker Ice Company.

At the conclusion of the tour the Attorney General announced that he was next going after ice peddlers in Manhattan and the Bronx.

POLICEMAN IN MUFTI ASKED TO AID HOLD-UP

He Gives Lift to Three Along Road and Arrests Them After Crime Is Planned.

A man tried to induce motorcycle patrolman Ralph Stone and a friend to commit a hold-up with him in Mamaroneck or New Rochelle when he met the policeman in civilian clothes early yesterday, and as a result the man, with two others, was lodged in a cell at Police Headquarters.

Late Thursday night, as patrolman Stone was driving his automobile through Stamford with a friend, John Fornaby, three pedestrians asked for a ride. He picked them up and started for New Rochelle.

After riding several miles, one of the men, who was later identified as Mike O'Neil, 27-year-old vagabond with a police record, asked Fornaby if he would stage a hold-up with him in Mamaroneck or New Rochelle. The plan was to have all five men participate and divide the spoils.

Patrolman Stone, who was driving and wore civilian clothes, listened to the proposition. He told O'Neil he was tired, but would meet them at a rendezvous the following night and stage the hold-up. Then the other two men, Albert Capazzo, 22, and John Vaccaro, 19, both of 98 West Main Street, Stamford, Conn., said they would not take part in the plot.

In New Rochelle Stone left the trio at Main and Huguenot Streets and said he would meet them at noon the next day. He immediately went home for his pistol, picked up Patrolmen Michael Carl and William Highland and arrested the trio in the vicinity where he had left them.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—The Soviet Government, which is said to be having a great deal of trouble in selling Russian oil in England owing to the fact that much of this oil is alleged to have been obtained from properties appropriated without compensation from British and other owners, has apparently decided to try a new method.

The Association of the British Creditors of Russia, which, of course, has not been encouraging the purchase of Russian oil in England, now states that the Soviet Government has decided not to proceed with attempted sales in England through its own organization, Russian Oil Products, Ltd. Instead, it will operate through a new concern, the Independent Oil Distributing Company, on the board of which appears the name of Lieut. Col. T. C. R. Moore. Colonel Moore was one of the four Conservative members of Parliament who visited Moscow last May and issued a report sufficiently favorable to the Soviets to be severely criticized by their fellow-Conservatives.

The Shell Oil Company, a big English group, stated today that it never purchased oil supplies from Russian products, for the reason that the properties the Shell concern developed in Russia were seized without compensation and oil from them sold in competition with its own product in England.

SAYS GUNMAN PAL KILLED POLICEMAN

QUICK VENGEANCE PROMISED

Indictments for Murder Expected on Monday—Police Hunt Escaped Robber.

Speedy justice is promised for the killing of Patrolman Oscar H. A. Oehlerking of the West Forty-seventh Street Station, who was shot to death by one of two gunmen whom he was attempting to arrest early yesterday morning in West Forty-ninth Street, near Eighth Avenue, after a hold-up of a drinking place near by.

Indictments charging murder in the first degree are expected on next Monday against Albert Mack, 23 years old, who was wounded and captured by another patrolman after trying to shoot his way to liberty, and a confederate, Jack Allen, a habitué of the city's waterfront, who escaped and who is believed to have shot Oehlerking. The police hope to have Allen before the indictments are called for trial in General Sessions, which, it was said yesterday in the District Attorney's office, will be "as soon as possible." Known to denizens of the waetrfront as "the Kentucky bad man," he was sought yesterday by special details of detectives and several patrolmen who know him.

Questioned at Police Headquarters yesterday, Mack confessed his part in the hold-up, but denied having killed Oehlerking. He said he had fired at Clarence Donohue, bartender at 340 West Forty-ninth Street, opposite the new Madison Square Garden, after he and Allen had held up Donohue and five customers there and got $120. He also admitted firing at Patrolman James J. Partington, his captor, but he insisted that he used a pearl-handled .32-calibre pistol and that Allen used a .38-calibre. An autopsy showed that it was a bullet of the latter calibre which killed Oehlerking.

One Weapon Found.

The pearl-handled pistol, with every cartridge discharged, was found near the point at which Mack fell in West Forty-ninth Street with two bullets in his left leg from Patrolman Partington's pistol. The pistol of larger calibre was not found.

It was pointed out in the District Attorney's office that the fact that Allen seemed to have committed the actual murder would not lessen the degree of the charge against Mack, as he and Allen were fleeing from Oehlerking on the hold-up charge. There are at least twelve witnesses, including five men who were held up in the drinking place of Jerry Cronin, a taxicab chauffeur, who took the dying patrolman and the captured robber to Roosevelt Hospital, and two actresses, Misses Marie Salisbury and Sally Bronis, of 300 West Forty-ninth Street.

Statements from all the witnesses, including Patrolman Partington, who was promoted yesterday to detective for his bravery by Commissioner McLaughlin, and Patrolman John C. Conrad, who aided Partington in Mack's capture, were taken yesterday by Assistant District Attorney Ryan of the Homicide Bureau.

Mack was questioned at Police Headquarters by Inspector Coughlin, head of the detective division. He said he was a native of St. Louis and a sailor. He came here six weeks ago and worked as a waiter and later as a call boy in a hotel in the theatrical district. He met Allen, a sailor from Louisville on his arrival here.

Five days ago, Mack said, he went to live in the Seamen's Church Institute at 25 South Street, where Allen was staying. They had little funds on Thursday night, Mack said, and Allen produced two pistols, giving him one and pocketing the other. Allen, he said, proposed that they hold up Cronin's place, which they did.

Killing of Policeman.

As the pair left the place Donohue, the bartender, started to pursue them, and both men opened fire on him. Oehlerking saw the flashes and went after the gunmen, who dodged around a taxicab driving by. The gunmen fired at Oehlerking, who returned the fire. Allen bolted for Eighth Avenue and disappeared after sending two more bullets at the patrolman. Mack fled toward Ninth Avenue and was caught by Partington and Conrad.

When it was known that Oehlerking was dead a policeman was sent to his home at 379 East 156th Street, the Bronx, to summon his young widow to the hospital. She and Oehlerking were married soon after he became a patrolman in 1922. She expects to become the mother of her first child in a few months. Arriving at the hospital and learning that her husband was dead, she swooned.

Wanted Husband to Quit.

Mrs. Oehlerking suffered a nervous breakdown last night when the body of her husband was taken to their home. William Oehlerking, a brother of the slain man, who resigned from the force three years ago, after a service of several years in the East 104th Street Station, had accompanied her home from the hospital.

"I often urged Oscar to quit the force," Mrs. Oehlerking said to her brother-in-law, "but he liked police life, despite the hardships. He would laugh when I would urge him to give up his shield and resign. He would say: 'Don't you worry about me. I'm able to take care of myself. There's nothing to fear on that point.' This was in spite of the fact that about a year ago three women residents of Tenth Avenue, on which he usually did patrol duty, told him one night that the gangsters there were plotting to kill him.

"Oscar had had many clashes with these fellows. He arrested many of them for robberies, and he wouldn't let them gather on his post. But he laughed at what the women told him and he laughed again when I expressed fear that the gangsters would carry out their threats.

"Three weeks ago Oscar arrested three gangsters for robbing a man. He had to chase them to the roof of a Tenth Avenue tenement and fight them into submission. They threatened him, but he wasn't afraid. Oscar was brave, although he didn't know it. He showed he was brave when he stood up against those two gunmen yesterday morning and returned their fire. I'm prouder of him than ever."

Oehlerking previously had been commended for the capture of a gunman. He was 27 years old and a veteran of the World War. He will be buried as a police hero, with a band and officers acting as pallbearers, and his name will be placed on one of the bronze tablets at headquarters containing the names of all policemen slain in the performance of duty since the organization of the old metropolitan force.

Lavin, Subway Strike Leader, Selling Insurance; Says He Must Sell a Lot to Pay I. R. T. Claims

Edward P. Lavin, leader of the recent unsuccessful Interborough strike, announced yesterday in a statement issued at the office of the New York Life Insurance Company, 150 Broadway, that he had been employed by the company since Thursday and had already sold his first life insurance policy.

Mr. Lavin said that he had been to the offices of the Interborough Rapid Transit Company at 165 Broadway, across the street, and had been told by George Keegan, assistant to Frank Hedley, President of the company, that he would not be paid $47 pay due him for services as a motorman before the strike began. Mr. Keegan, he said, added that the company would continue the suit brought against him and other strike leaders for $239,000 damages on account of the strike and that the back pay would be held toward these damages.

"I'll have to sell a lot of insurance to pay my share of the $239,000 damages," Mr. Lavin said.

Mr. Lavin said he had received from Rabbi Herbert S. Goldstein of the Institutional Synagogue an American flag which had been blessed by Cardinal Hayes and which was brought to him directly by the Rev. Edward Lawrence Hunt, Director of America's Good-Will Union. The flag, he said, was presented to him for the clean conduct of the strike.

"I tried to put up a clean fight for the motormen and I treasure that flag more than I ever did my subway job," Mr. Lavin said. "I have no regrets. I believe that on account of the strike the men will eventually get better pay."

Mr. Lavin said that he would "work" the whole metropolitan district in his work as an insurance agent on a commission basis and that he hoped to make more than he did as a subway motorman.

AGED WOMAN LOST ALL NIGHT IN SWAMP

Grandmother Who Went Berry Picking Emerges Bitten by Mosquitos, but Smiling.

PARTIES AND DOGS HUNTED

Only Thing She Feared Was Scolding by Daughter, She Says—Ate Berries and Awaited Dawn.

Covered with mosquito bites, but smiling and uninjured, Mrs. Louise Bohning, 66 years old, of 554 Thirty-eighth Street, Union City, N. J., came out of the Cedar Swamps near East Rutherford, N. J., yesterday morning after she had become lost and spent the entire night in the swamps. Mrs. Bohning, a white-haired grandmother who weighs scarcely 100 pounds, went into the morass, which has claimed the lives of several men, about 8 o'clock Thursday morning to pick huckleberries and to subject leg pains to the damp atmosphere, which she believed had a curative effect.

When she did not return by nightfall her daughter, Mrs. Walter Asche, with whom she makes her home, became alarmed and notified Captain George McClelland of the East Rutherford Police. A general alarm was sent out and all-night searching parties with trained police dogs searched the mire. Early yesterday morning one party, including Mrs. Asche, discovered Mrs. Bohning emerging from the swamp on the Paterson Plank Road. Mrs. Asche embraced her mother and wept with joy.

Mrs. Bohning's face and arms were swollen with mosquito bites, but she was in fine spirits and inclined to joke about her experience. She wasn't frightened, she told Captain McClelland, and declared that God had protected her. All day she had picked berries, she said, and never thought about returning until late in the afternoon. She had often picked berries in the swamp, but when she started to return she found she was on unfamiliar ground. Then it began to grow dark.

"I knew it was no use to wander around in the dark," she said, "so I just sat down and ate some berries and waited for morning. I think I could have slept if it hadn't been for the mosquitos. My leg pains were much better; the swamp always helps them."

The only thing that worried her, Mrs. Bohning said, was the fear that her daughter would scold her for getting lost.

After she resumed her wandering yesterday morning she sighted two men in a rowboat on the canal near the Erie Railroad tracks and they directed her out of the swamp.

BANKER, NEAR DEATH, SHOOTS DEMENTED SON

Kills Himself in Berlin, Leaving Letter Explaining Act—Son Crippled by Shots.

BERLIN, Aug. 6.—Johannes Gross, an aged banker, feeling that death was close at his door, decided to take with him his 28-year-old son, who is mentally affected, rather than trust him to the care of others who might not understand the whims of the young man's warped brain.

The elder Gross's recent suffering from ill health had been increased because the son often disappeared from home and was found only after days of frantic search.

After the son had been brought back today Gross wrote a letter declaring his murder and suicide plan and then called his son to him. He fired one shot, which was ineffective, and the son sprang on his father, who fired two more shots at close range.

Seeing the young man fall to the floor, the father believed him dead and drove a bullet into his own brain, dying instantly.

However, the son was not killed, and the doctors report that he will recover, but, in addition to being mentally defective, he will remain a helpless physical cripple for the rest of his life.

COURT IS MYSTIFIED BY MONEYED BEGGAR

Man Arrested Asking Alms With $12,385 in Pocket Is Paroled, but Past Will Be Sifted.

ADMITS MONEY IN BANK

At First Says He Doesn't Trust Banks, but Changes Story—Even Has an Account in London.

Jacob Frank, 66 years old, of 30 Scammel Street, became somewhat of a mystery yesterday when he appeared before Magistrate Charles A. Oberwager in the Tombs Court for a hearing on the charge of Patrolman Frederick Croker of the Oak Street Station that last Tuesday night he detected the prisoner soliciting alms from visitors to Chinatown, although Frank had $12,385 in banknotes on his person at the time.

Croker was arrested on a grand larceny charge last Wednesday when, it was alleged, he took $1,000 of the money from an envelope which he had taken from the station to deliver to the Property Clerk at Police Headquarters. He had just arraigned Frank on the begging charge, and the next day he himself was a prisoner for the alleged theft.

Croker, suspended from the force and under $1,000 bail awaiting examination on the larceny charge, was in citizen's clothes yesterday when he testified against Frank. The latter, at the patrolman's arraignment the day before, had declared that the begging charge was false, and that Croker took him into custody after he had been struck by an automobile. Patrolman McLaughlin of the Oak Street Station corroborated Croker's testimony yesterday that there had been no accident and that he and Croker saw the old man begging.

At Frank's first arraignment Croker told the Magistrate that Frank had said he carried the large sum of money on him because he didn't trust banks. When Frank began his testimony yesterday he revealed that he had left three books showing deposits in local banks in the Tombs, where he spent Wednesday night because he couldn't furnish $1,000 bail.

"I've got several thousand dollars in those banks," Frank told the Magistrate yesterday, "and I've also got about £200 in two London banks. I've been saving that money all my life."

He shrugged his shoulders, however, when the Magistrate sought to learn why he had not entrusted banks with the larger sum when he wasn't afraid to leave the smaller sums in the banks.

"I find you guilty of the patrolman's charge," continued the Magistrate, "but I'll parole you on your own recognizance for sentence on Aug. 10. I'll have a probation officer investigate your past. You present a much more prosperous appearance today than at the previous arraignments. I want to find out more about you."

87 PLEAD GUILTY IN CASTINGS CASES

FINES AGGREGATE $232,000

Suits Were Fought by the Defendants for Over Two and a Half Years.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 6 (AP).—A Federal court fight of almost two and a half years' duration against forty-eight members of the American Malleable Castings Association and forty-seven large malleable iron castings companies ended today when eighty-seven defendants appeared before Federal Judge Westenhaver, entered pleas of nolo contendere and were each fined $2,500.

The fines totaled $217,500. Several weeks ago five of the original ninety-five defendants entered pleas and were fined an aggregate of $14,500. This brought the total of the fines to $232,000.

The indictment upon which the defendants were brought to trial was returned by a Federal Grand Jury at Cleveland in March, 1924, and followed a long Federal investigation. The defendants fought the Government's efforts to bring them to trial. Practically every legal action for resistance was brought into use, but the Government finally won in each case.

The most important and most protracted phase of the resistance grew out of the refusal of defendants living outside of the Cleveland Federal court district to appear here for trial. More than twoscore trials and court proceedings, involving habeas corpus actions and appeals to Circuit Courts and the United States Supreme Court, were required to secure extradition for the defendants.

Finally, however, by virtue of a Supreme Court ruling, the defendants were ordered to appear here for trial. Date was set for Sept. 13.

Virtually Pleaded Guilty.

The decision to enter the nolo contendere pleas, which are virtually pleas of guilty, as the expression means that the indictment is not contested, came at a meeting eight days ago in Washington between Attorney General Sargent, his assistant, Russell Hardy, and representatives of the American Malleable Castings Association.

OBERST GANGSTERS IDENTIFIED AT TRIAL

WOUNDED MAN TESTIFIES

Jury Is Completed in Afternoon—Proceedings Hurried for an Early Verdict.

At their trial yesterday before Judge James M. Barrett in the Bronx County Court four of five members of the youthful Oberst gang were identified as participants in the unsuccessful raid on the private bank of John Liccione at 590 East 187th Street on July 22. All five were indicted for attempted robbery and also for assault in the wounding of Rafaelo Ranieri, clerk, in the shooting which preceded their flight.

The identification was somewhat hasty, due, the witnesses implied, to the brief glimpse they caught of the men before they dropped behind the bank counter at the robbers' command to throw their hands up. A composite of the testimony, however, was that four participants in the hold-up were Philip Oberts, alias Duffy, the supposed leader of the gang; Bernard Frankel, alias "Frenchie"; Leo Hecker, alias Stein, and John Ward, alias Kerrigan.

Identification of the fifth man, Peter Mahoney, was not conclusive. Police said he was the gang's chauffeur. The witnesses seemed to be more certain of the identities of Frankel and Oberst. None of them, not even the wounded man, could say which of the accused fired the bullet which struck him.

Schoolgirl a Witness.

The identifications were made by Manlio Liccione, son of the bank proprietor; Ranieri, still nursing the wound in his shoulder; Francesco Alennani, a clerk who required an interpreter; Pasquale Egilio, another clerk, and Catherine Marino. Miss Marino, a school girl living three doors from the bank, said she saw all five young men enter, and was sure of the date because it was the birthday of her "boy friend."

On each identification John E. McGeehan, Bronx District Attorney, had each witness descend from the stand and specify the particular defendant with a tap upon the shoulder. The tapping was gingerly done, and appeared more of an ordeal to the witnesses than to the accused.

Edward J. O'Brien, for the defense, drew conflicting estimates from the witnesses as to the duration of the raid. The length of time was guessed at anywhere from "maybe two seconds, maybe more" to "mabye not more than three minutes." Actual observation of the bandits' faces lasted only from ten to fifteen seconds at the most, according to the harassed observers, who admitted their own disappearance downward followed almost instantly.

During the trial all of the accused, with the exception of Mahoney, kept themselves busy with pencils and pads, making or exchanging notes. They frequently pulled Mr. O'Brien by the sleeve during cross-examination to suggest further questions. Twice as they were being led out, once at a recess and again on adjournment, they flashed expressions or gestures of the hands to friends they recognized in the court room.

Face Two More Trials.

Judge Barrett hurried the proceedings as much as possible in hope of bringing about an early verdict. Court continued until 6 o'clock and adjourned until 9 this morning. The five prisoners face trial in both Manhattan and Queens on additional indictments. If found guilty by the Bronx jury, it is expected Judge Barrett will stay sentence until after other trials.

LIKEN VARE VICTORY TO NEWBERRY CASE

Reed Report Will Score the Pennsylvania and Illinois Primary Costs.

WILL URGE EXPENSE LIMIT

Committee Has Found Signs of Fraud to Warrant Action by the Senate.

FRIENDS DEFEND COL. SMITH

Nominee's Followers Contend That No Corrupt Motives Prompted the Utilities Gifts.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—It was learned from sources close to the Reed investigating committee tonight that the committee report, based on the $3,750,000 spent in Pennsylvania and Illinois Republican primaries, will include these findings and conclusions:

That William S. Vare and Frank L. Smith won their respective nominations through methods similar to those the Senate found objectionable in the Newberry case.

That some limitation should be imposed by the Senate on the amount of money to be expended by Senatorial candidates in primaries and elections.

That indication of frauds in elections has been sufficiently demonstrated to warrant action by the Senate.

That organizations such as the Anti-Saloon League have used money and a show of power to influence elections and have attempted to influence legislation by paying members of Congress to speak.

That the $50,000 appropriated for the committee has been fully justified, because it has been shown that special privileges have been sought through contributions by large industrial or public utility interests.

Smith and Brennan to Stick.

Non-political Chicago is experiencing a shock reaction as a result of the committee disclosures; nevertheless the public seems to agree with the politicians that neither Frank L. Smith nor George E. Brennan has any idea of quitting the Senate race in November. To do so, their friends say, would be convicting themselves in advance, and so these same friends say that the Reed committee has not proved that the $250,000 given to Smith and the $15,000 to Brennan by the public utility interests were anything more than the ordinary political contributions.

Discussion of an independent candidate was little heard today, the general impression being that it was scarcely worth talking about if Mr. Smith and Mr. Brennan were to remain in the race. Democrats who are not tied up to the Brennan organization say former Senator James Hamilton Lewis could win easily over Smith were Brennan to relinquish the nomination.

Smith's supporters, although still nervous from the past week's revelations, insisted he would not only be elected by a strong vote but would be seated when the showdown came in the Senate in March. No matter how determined Democrats might be to weaken Republican control in the Senate, there would still be enough Old Guard strength there to put Colonel Smith through when the ballot came, they maintained. They pointed out that Mr. Brennan would be under the same handicap as Colonel Smith if the Democrats won in Illinois and faced the Senate in March.

Evils Laid to Direct Primary.

The direct primary came in for an attack from several camps today as the cause of all the trouble and the necessity for the huge expenditures. Philip Pitt Campbell, former member of the House from Kansas and Republican whip two years ago, said while passing through Chicago he believed the primary responsible for a large part of corruption.

Chicago newspapers strongly denounce the two public officials, Robert E. Crowe, State's Attorney for Cook County, and Thomas W. Cunningham, clerk of a Philadelphia court, for refusing to reveal facts about contributions. The Chicago Daily News said this afternoon that while there might be a technical worth to the contention that the committee could not examine into money for local candidates, yet it was "manifestly impossible" to say it was not used to aid the contestants in the Senate primary.

"He would be a gullible person," says The Chicago Journal, "who would believe all that has been told, even apart from what Senator Reed did not learn about expenditures to support the ambitions of Cook County candidates. The county candidates can go into the campaign wearing only a few tell-tale tags, but Colonel Frank Smith will present the general aspect of a Mardi Gras float covered with banners."

Judge Jarecki, head of the Board of Election Commissioners, who will run against the Crowe candidate, Captain Joseph Savage, for County Judge, replied today to the charges of Morris Eller, Crowe-Barrett leader in the Twentieth Ward, that Jarecki and Czarnecki, an election commissioner, sent gunmen, confirmed criminals and disreputable men there as election judges. Judge Jarecki said Eller's accusations were a tissue of falsehoods. John S. Rusch, chief clerk of the election board, said seven men Eller named as the gunmen sent, did not even serve.

"Certain wild and baseless rumors having become current regarding the relations supposed at present to exist between the Government of India and the Nizam's Government, it is considered desirable to contradict these rumors, which are wihout foundation.

"The real facts are that certain departments of the Nizam's Government, being in need of reforms and improvement the Government of India, invited the attention of the Nizam's Government and offered friendly advice.

"It may be added that the subject already had been receiving the close attention of the Nizam's Government, and the necessary steps which are under contemplation will take effect at an early date."

WELCOME AT STADIUM TO AUDITION WINNERS

Alice Godillot, Enrique Ros and Giuseppe Rossi Make Excellent Impressions.

Three audition winners made their appearance with the Philharmonic Orchestra at the Stadium concert last evening conducted by Henry Hadley. They were Alice Godillot, soprano, alternate for Norma Fauchald, now in Norway; Enrique Ros, pianist, and Giuseppe Martino-Rossi, baritone.

Miss Godillot made her Stadium début in the aria "Plus grand dans son obscurité" from Gounod's "Reine de Saba," before a large and friendly audience. Her voice is agreeable, being best in the middle and upper ranges, but with no clarion top notes to strike the ear with surprise. She has an excellent legato and a diction that permitted every word to be heard. Also, she was beautifully in tune. The singer did not have the cumulative power nor the breadth of style required to make a towering climax in the open air, but she had taste and musical feeling and won her audience. On being recalled she gave Schubert's "Hark, Hark, the Lark!" to a piano accompaniment.

Mr. Ros chose to appear in Grieg's piano concerto in A minor, in which he displayed a clear and brilliant technic. He played with a lively, decisive touch, putting additional weight into his forte passages to emphasize them, and outlining his pianos with proportional neatness. He aroused the interest of the audience from the first movement and won four recalls. For his encore Mr. Ros chose to play a favorite Chopin number, somewhat too delicate for the purpose and the place.

The third winner, Giuseppe Martino-Rossi, sang before the intermission instead of after it, a concession to the uncertain weather. He gave the aria from "The Barber of Seville" with the voice, the manner and the style of the Italian operatic baritone. He has a robust voice that carried well, with no telling upper notes. The audience was very much taken with his singing of Figaro's song and cries of "Bravo!" were heard amid the applause. Mr. Rossi was recalled several times and gave a Neapolitan ballad as an encore, to a piano accompaniment.

Needless to say, the Philharmonic Orchestra and Mr. Hadley gave the soloists every assistance.

SLOAN'S SILVER WEDDING.

Artistic Folk Help New York Painter Celebrate at Santa Fe.

Special to The New York Times.

SANTA FE, N. M., Aug. 7.—John Sloan, New York painter and President since its foundation of the Independent Society of Artists, and Mrs. Sloan celebrated their silver wedding anniversary here tonight with a party attended by writers, musicians and artists from all parts of the country.

Sloan was a struggling young artist on The Philadelphia Press when he married Dolly Wall in Philadelphia twenty-five years ago. Doing everything on the newspaper from drawing the Sunday puzzle to substituting for the regular cartoonist, he had little thought that the day would come when his paintings would hang in the Metropolitan Museum and be in important collections abroad.

A feature of the party was the chanting of an ode written for the occasion by Witter Bynner, members of the party chanting as a Greek chorus. Poems by Alfred Kreymborg and Arthur Davison Ficke were also read.

Among others present were Paul Rosenfeld, critic; John M. Oskison, Hildegarde Hawthorne, Eric Howard, Frederick K. Wells and Mary Austin, writers; Will Shuster and Willard Nash, painters; Princess Tsianina Oskenonton, Rafael Diaz of the Metropolitan Opera Company, and Charles Wakefield Cadman, musicians.

J. D. Williams, Film Producer, Here

J. D. Williams, motion picture producer, who is making the picture "Tip Toes" in England with Will Rogers, Nelson Keyes and Dorothy Gish in the leading rôles, arrived yesterday on the Berengaria.

Williams said he was anxious to produce pictures in England equal to those in the United States and establish an interchange between the two countries, as audiences everywhere get tired of too much of one type of production. He added that he had built a large motion picture studio at Elstree, twelve miles from London, which had eight stages, each measuring 100 by 300 feet.

Trini, Dancer, Back From Spain.

Trini, the Spanish dancer, returned yesterday from Spain on the Cunarder Berengaria after visiting her parents in her home at Seville. She was queen of the annual festival on July 15, at which the King and Queen of Spain were present. She will go on the Keith circuit shortly for a tour of the country.

MADMAN TORTURES MOTHER TO DEATH

BECAME SUDDENLY INSANE

Son of County Treasurer Bearse Unable to Give the Police a Motive for His Deed.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Aug. 6.—In a sudden frenzy of insanity, Richard Clarence Bearse, 25 years old, a mechanical engineer, son of County Treasurer Fred A. Bearse, killed his mother, Mrs. Etta S. Bearse, in her home in Palmer Avenue early this morning. Bearse admited to the police that he choked his mother, but the opinion of Medical Examiner F. D. Jones, after an autopsy, was that death was not due to strangulation but to shock, caused by mutilations. Mrs. Bearse, 56 years old, had been divorced from the County Treasurer.

Bearse was arraigned in District Court this afternoon on a charge of murder. A plea of not guilty was entered for him and he was remanded to jail until Aug. 13. In the interval he will be examined by alienists. The police say that he is unquestionably insane.

Bearse was arrested early this forenoon, when he was found, covered with blood and sitting beside the body of his mother in the kitchen of his home.

"Love of God and love of her," was the reason given by Bearse for his deed. His story, however, was disconnected and rambling.

When he was discovered by the police Bearse had the mutilated body in his arms and was apparently attempting some form of resuscitation.

"She died twice in the night," he told the police, "and I revived her once. I arrived at my mother's house at about 11:30 or 12 o'clock last night, after spending the evening with a friend. Mother was not feeling well when I arrived, so I got her a drink of water. She said her lips were burning. I got her some cough drops and then I threw water over her. She had been sick for a long time and I wanted to relieve her of her pain. She is in heaven now."

The first known of the murder by the police was when a neighbor telephoned to Police Headquarters at about 6:30 o'clock this morning and said that something terrible was going on in Mrs. Bearse's home. She said there had been screaming in the house since 3 o'clock in the morning. The officers forced a door and entered the house. A thorough search revealed no knife or other weapon and the police say it is apparent the young man inflicted the tortures on his mother with his bare hands.

SCOLDED ABOUT CAT, GIRL ENDS HER LIFE

Perth Amboy Man a Suicide—Another Man Dies in Leap Under Subway Train.

FREEPORT, L. I., Aug. 6—Two hours after she had been scolded because she insisted upon bringing a stray cat into the house Martha Stewart, 18 years old, of 311 Smith Street, shot and killed herself in her room tonight, Nassau County authorities said.

According to Acting Police Captain Clarence Van Riper, Mrs. Agnes Stewart, who is deaf, rebuked her daughter when she came into the house just before dinner with a strange cat. The girl ate her dinner quietly and then asked her brother, Morton, to do an errand.

When the brother returned he called to his sister and getting no response went to her room and found the door locked. He got a ladder and, climbing to the window of her room, saw Martha lying on the floor with a pistol nearby.

The family said they knew of no reason, aside from the scolding, why the young woman should have taken her life.

PERTH AMBOY, N. J., Aug. 6.—Christian Peterson, 32 years old, cut his throat with a razor in his room at the Salvation Army Hotel today, according to the police. He died soon after he arrived at the Perth Amboy City Hospital. Domestic trouble caused him to take his life, police said. He leaves a wife and two children.

An unidentified young man committed suicide shortly after 5 P. M. yesterday by jumping from the express platform of the 125th Street station of the Lexington Avenue subway in front of a northbound train. The motorman applied the brakes, but before he could halt the train the man had been ground under the wheels of the first three cars.

About 500 persons saw the suicide and several women fainted. Police reserves were called to restore order. There was a twenty-five-minute delay in service. The man was described as having been about 25 years old, five feet seven inches tall and weighing about 140 pounds. A purse containing $1 in small silver was found on the body.

COBHAM TO RESUME HIS FLIGHT TODAY

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

SYDNEY, Aug. 6.—Alan Cobham, who reached Australia yesterday from England in his plane, was busy today fixing land gear to his machine and will resume the flight tomorrow.

In conversation at Port Darwin with Australian men and women, blacks with their women, Japanese residents, Chinese, Malayans and Filipinos around him, Mr. Cobham said the main object of his flight is to stimulate public interest in aviation and to show that flying is not a stunt but a sound commercial proposition when properly organized.

Describing his last hop, Cobham said he flew six and one-half hours and covered 525 miles against a head wind, mostly flying only twenty feet above the water.

The crowd waiting to see him land yesterday was touched to observe his tribute to the memory of an air pioneer by flying round the Ross Smith statue before landing on the water.

JERSEY DEMOCRATS GATHER AT SEAGIRT

SENATOR EDWARDS THERE

Special to The New York Times.

SEA GIRT, N. J., Aug. 6.—Politicians from numerous New Jersey counties, most of them from South Jersey, came to the Little White House, Summer home of Governor and Mrs. A. Harry Moore, to celebrate the second Governor's Day of the season this afternoon.

The day was set aside for seven counties, Burlington, Cumberland, Camden, Gloucester, Salem, Somerset and Union. But the usual number from Essex, Hudson, Mercer and Monmouth were among the thousand or more who attended.

The South Jersey delegates furnished the only bit of political gossip when they announced a boom for Supreme Court Clerk Edward J. Kelleher of Camden for the Gubernatorial race in 1928. Mr. Kelleher is running as Democratic candidate for Congress from the First District, which includes Camden, Gloucester and Salem Counties, against Charles A. Wolverton, Republican. Mr. Kelleher said that his attention just now was centered on his Congressional fight.

One hundred and twenty men and women Democrats, led by State Committeewoman Mrs. Florence W. Jacobus, came from Cumberland County, and wore ribbons declaring that they were solidly behind their local candidates. Mrs. Ann Morton is seeking the office of Auditor, Walter W. Van Sciver is running for Sheriff, Hans Froelicher is a candidate for the Assembly, George Alloway for Surrogate and Engle Conrow is out for Freeholder.

Senator Edwards, Congresswoman Mary T. Norton, both of Jersey City, State Treasurer William Read of Camden, State Secretary Joseph Fitzpatrick and State Senators Clarence E. Case of Somerset, J. Gilbert Borton of Salem, Arthur N. Pierson of Union, and Firman A. Reeves of Cumberland were present.

A feature was a demonstration of a war strength battalion in attack by men of the 114th Infantry, New Jersey National Guard. Later the regiment passed in review before Governor Moore and his staff.

S O S INTERRUPTS RADIOS.

British Freighter in Distress Off Bermuda—Gale Reported.

All broadcasting stations were silenced at 8:40 o'clock last night when naval communications picked up an S O S call from the British freighter Antonio, in distress somewhere off Bermuda. An S O S had been received at 7:15 o'clock by the Independent Wireless Company, but the operator was unable to get the name of the ship. The broadcasting stations were permitted to resume at 9:05 when it was believed the vessel was in no immediate danger.

An Associated Press dispatch yesterday from Bermuda said a gale was sweeping the island and interfering with shipping. The steamship Fort St. George, due at Hamilton, Bermuda, yesterday from New York, was hove to forty miles away and unable to enter the port because of the gale. Small pleasure craft in the harbor there were swamped, the dispatch stated, and ferry service between Hamilton, Paget and Somerset was stopped.

POPE RAISES VATICAN PAY.

Officials and Employes to Get Five-fold Rise Over Pre-War Wage.

ROME, Aug. 6 (AP).—Pope Pius has approved a new scale of wages for Vatican officials and employes, drawn up by a special commission of Cardinals, whereby their pay will be brought to a figure equaling five times that received before the war.

At the same time the Pontiff expressed a desire that the working day of the employes be increased, effective in October. At that time the working day, which seldom amounts to more than three hours of actual toil, will be lengthened to five or six hours.

The new wage scale will burden the annual Holy See budget by between two and three million lire.

Recently there has been agitation among the Vatican employes for increased pay, some of the gardeners going so far as to declare a strike.

Man Is Only Victim Reported as Wave Breaks—Cooler Tonight.

With the breaking of the heat wave only one heat prostration was reported yesterday. William Brown, 71 years old, of 140 Avenue C, was stricken at the corner of Ninth Street and Avenue C. He was treated by Dr. Christenson of Bellevue Hospital and sent to the hospital.

The highest temperature yesterday was 79, at 12:55 P. M. The lowest was 67 degrees at 8 A. M., and the general average was 73. The average on Aug. 6 last year was 70 degrees, and the average on Aug. 6 for the last forty-six years 74.

The forecast for today is probable thundershowers with cooler temperature at night and thundershowers Sunday.

Railroad Shares of All Classes Respond Buoyantly to Large Half-Yearly Earnings.

It was not at all surprising that the railroad shares as a group, and the best class of these shares especially, should have made vigorous response yesterday to the remarkable statement of earnings for the first six months of the year, made by the Bureau of Railway Economics, showing a net operating income of $494,866,776 for the half-year, an increase of more than $5,000,000 over the 1925 period. This was despite losses in the first half of the year by twenty-two railroads. It appeared to dawn on Wall Street that with the crop-moving season just ahead the railroads of the country have a very good chance to establish record earnings this year. Certainly, under present calculations, these will run well above $1,000,000,000. With this excellent statement as a background, the railroad shares pushed forward under the influence of buying which appeared to come from all parts of the country and which took in not only the high-priced dividend-paying shares, such as Atchison, Atlantic Coast Line, Baltimore & Ohio, New York Central and others of the same sort, but many of the smaller roads, too, which are not dividend payers but which, nevertheless, have what has been termed "merger possibilities." Trading in the railroad group was on a very large scale and the combined average of these shares advanced to a new high point for the year at 95.55 for the combined average of twenty-five representative railroad issues.

In other directions the market appeared to have been benefited by the midweek irregularity which brought declines in many directions a few points off the topmost prices of the leading stocks. The market was a broad one and the turnover of approximately 2,000,000 shares was featured by some exceptionally big blocks of stock. The run-up of call money to 4½ per cent. in late trading did little more than slacken the pace and brought about no reaction whatever. Solid basis for the gains which have been established in the stock market, as well as the general air of prosperity which characterized the business of the country, was to be found yesterday in the reviews for the week by the commercial reporting agencies. Dun's Review remarked that "the present comparative activity of business during what is normally the quietest period of the year continues to attract attention." Bradstreet's stated that "buying for Fall has made itself visible at an increased number of markets, and as industry enters August a slightly faster pace is shown despite the fact that July showed less than seasonal slowing down."

The franc once more was strong yesterday and for the first time since the Poincaré Cabinet assumed financial control was quoted in the markets of the world at above the 3-cent figure. At its maximum price for the day the gain was a full ¼ cent, but some of this appreciation was shed before the close of the market, and the last price was slightly below the 3-cent figure. In view of the denials from abroad that financial assistance is to be sought at this time, through the medium of an international loan, the fresh advance in the French currency was considered rather surprising. The market is, however, a highly speculative one, and probably this very state of affairs is responsible for the drastic swings which have taken place.

EXCHANGE HAS GAIN IN BROKERS' LOANS

The Stock Exchange announced yesterday that the net loans of its members carried on collateral in New York City as of July 31 aggregated $2,997,759,527, an increase of $71,461,182 over the total as of June 30. Wall Street regarded the increase as surprisingly small in view of the greatly enlarged speculative activity and the strong upward movement of stock prices in the last month. The Federal Reserve Board, which issues weekly figures covering similar ground, also has failed to report any expansion in brokers' loans commensurate with the stock market movements.

The Stock Exchange total is made up of the following items: Net borrowings on collateral from New York banks or trust companies, demand loans, $1,917,959,415; time loans, $664,589,307; net borrowings on collateral from private bankers, brokers, foreign bank agencies or others in New York City, demand loans, $365,017,305; time loans, $50,193,000, making a total of $2,282,976,720 of demand loans and $714,782,807 of time loans.

Half-Billion Below Peak.

The Exchange brokers' loans total is now $230,359,013 above the low point of the year, which was established on May 28, and $537,830,794 below the high point reached at the end of February.

The Exchange loan figures in a general way have followed a trend similar to that of the Federal Reserve figures, although the territory covered is not exactly identical. The latest Federal Reserve figures reported that loans made by Federal Reserve member banks have aggregated $2,602,042,000 as of July 28, which compared with a high of $3,141,125,000 on Jan. 6 and a low of $2,408,695,000 on May 19.

| | Demand. | Time. | Total. |
| April 30— | 1,969,869,852 | 865,848,657 | 2,835,718,509 |

Not a Market Reflection.

Considerable comment has been caused recently by the failure of the loan figures to reflect the expanding stock market activities, the latest Federal Reserve figures in fact having shown a decrease. It was said yesterday, however, that in all probability the figures did not give an entirely accurate picture of the amount of collateral credit outstanding, but merely a general trend. The Stock Exchange figures apply only to the loans contracted for and carried in New York and there is nothing to prevent a trader borrowing in other centres if he does not desire his operations to be reflected in the loan figures. The Federal Reserve figures apply only to loans made by members of the system to brokers and dealers, and it is understood that many traders who formerly obtained credit through their brokers now obtain loans on their securities direct from the banks, in which case they would not be covered by the loan statistics.

The figures, however, are regarded as an index to loan activities in connection with stock trading. Bankers said they would furnish a truer guide after publication had been in effect a year or so, and comparisons could be made on a more comprehensive basis.

$1,000,000 GOLD TO CANADA.

Latest Transfer Brings Total to $5,500,000 Since Last Week.

The International Acceptance Bank shipped $1,000,000 worth of gold to Canada for the account of the Bank of Toronto, making a total of $5,500,000 of such transfers since the movement began last week. The shipments are the result of the premium on Canadian exchange, which is within a shade of its highest point of the present year.

Canadian exchange was quoted yesterday at a premium of five thirty-seconds of 1 per cent. Earlier in the week it had been quoted at eleven sixty-fourths of 1 per cent. premium. At about the latter level, bankers calculate, the transfer of gold becomes profitable as an exchange transaction. The strength in Canadian exchange is attributed to the large amount of Canadian financing recently effected here. No large movement is expected until Autumn, when Canadian products move to the American markets in large quantities and usually call for gold shipments.

FRENCH FRANC UP TO 3.08.

Passes 3 Cents for First Time Since June Under General Buying.

For the first time since early in June the French franc went above 3 cents yesterday under general buying that originated in the London and Paris markets. In New York it reached a high point of 3.08 cents, representing a net gain of a quarter of a cent over the closing quotations of Thursday. Profit-taking by previous buyers produced a reaction, but the close at 2.95¼ cents represented a net advance of eleven points for the day.

The strength of the franc was attributed to the continued progress of the Poincaré Government in stabilizing French conditions. It is expected here that speedy action will be taken on the French-American debt agreement and that, in spite of denials from abroad, a large international credit will be arranged within a short time.

$40,000,000 for Bethlehem Plant.

Expenditures of the Bethlehem Steel Corporation for modernization and improvements at its Lackawanna plant at Buffalo will amount to $40,000,000 before completion. The work has been under way since the plant was acquired in 1922 and is nearing completion.

Rail Stock Margin Interest Ready.

The New York Curb Exchange announced yesterday that checks for the interest due on the $3,000,000 in margins on the new Nickel Plate stock, formerly traded in on the Curb, were ready for distribution.

FOREIGN EXCHANGE.

Last-Minute Pressure Cancels Franc's Forenoon Gain—Belgian Heavy—Chinese at New Lows.

What was generally regarded more a collapse of an overbought position than to anything in the news to account for it, Paris francs ran into a tremendous wave of selling orders in the final minutes of trading yesterday as a result of which the rate broke to 2.95 cents, from an earlier 3.08¼ cents. Speculative brokers were prominently mixed up in the transaction, to which was added the activity of some foreign selling. However, the day's final was more than 11 points above Thursday's closing.

Business was on a very active scale in the forenoon, coincident with the life of the Continental markets and it was during this period that the greatest gain was registered. Just as soon as the markets abroad closed, about midday here, the session drifted along quietly until the last flare up of liquidation and short sales about 5 o'clock.

The Belgian franc improved in the morning, with the French bill, but later broke to 2.78¼ cents, 16 points under the forenoon's high, but yet 2 points up overnight. Italian was in good demand and finished 3 points up at 3.36¼ cents. Sterling and Scandinavians were firm, but the Swiss, Spanish and Holland heavy.

New lows were registered in the Chinese currencies as silver was swept off to record lows both here and in London. Japanese yen on the other hand improved.

SHORT LINES OPPOSE LOREE'S RAIL PLAN

Declare They Are Disregarded in Unification Move of Larger Roads.

QUOTE TRANSPORTATION ACT

Association Prepares to Oppose Program Involving Systems in the Southwest.

Complaining that Leonor F. Loree, proponent of a plan for the joint operation of the Missouri, Kansas & Texas, St. Louis Southwestern and Kansas City Southern Railroads disregards the "short lines" in the territory served, officials of the American Short Lines Association are making plans to oppose the plan when it comes up for a hearing before the Interstate Commerce Commission.

"The Loree plan," said a spokesman for the association yesterday, "absolutely disregards the short lines, while the railroads it is supposed to coordinate connect with more short lines in Arkansas, Louisiana and Texas than probably any other system.

"The Transportation act of 1920 makes clear that in matters of consolidation the larger carriers will not be permitted to do the picking. If the railroads of the country are to be unified the plans must take in the skimmed milk as well as the cream."

Of particular interest to the Short Lines Association is the Paris & Mount Pleasant Railroad, which its officials believe should go to the St. Louis Southwestern. Other lines in the territory which might or might not be included in the Loree group are the Louisiana Railway and Navigation Company, operating 344 miles, which has been the subject of negotiation with Mr. Loree; the Missouri & North Arkansas, 365 miles; the Kansas City, Mexico & Orient, 740 miles; the Midland Valley Railroad, 382 miles; the Louisiana & Arkansas, 302 miles, and the Louisiana & Northwest, 99 miles.

Should these roads not be included in the Loree combination their owners feel there is strong possibility they will be taken into the other pending consolidations in the Southwest which include the Frisco-Rock Island alliance, the Missouri Pacific System and the Southern Pacific System.

DENIES HARVESTER MERGER

International's President Calls Report of Case Deal False.

Alexander Legge, President of the International Harvester Company, yesterday denied that his company was planning to take over the J. I. Case Threshing Machine Company, saying there was "absolutely no truth or color" in the report.

Leon R. Clausen, President of the Case company, was quoted in Chicago as saying his company's business had been "good in the South this year because of excellent crops, but not so good in the Northwest, where conditions are spotty." Asked for an explanation of the recent sharp rise in the price of the company's stock, he said:

"We never pay any attention to the stock market and don't care at what price our stock sells. I will make no comment on our earnings. Whether there is to be any special dividend action is up to the directors. I do not know what they will do."

STUDENTS VISIT EXCHANGES

Group From University of Pennsylvania Inspects Operations.

Students from the Summer school and the Wharton School of Commerce of the University of Pennsylvania visited the New York Stock Exchange, the Cotton Exchange and other places of interest in the financial district yesterday. # TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

News, Comment and Incident, On the Stock Exchange and In the Financial Markets.

Interest in the stock market yesterday centred largely in the railway and utility issues. Both of these groups were strong, the latter more so in the morning and the rails making their best showing in the afternoon. Among the industrials there were many signs of irregularity, particularly on the part of stocks which have been leaders in the recent advance. The rails responded to the recent highly favorable earnings statements. New York Central and Atchison made notable gains, the former closing with a net advance of 3⅛ while the latter ended with a net appreciation for the day of 3⅞. Atlantic Coast Line was up 2 points at the close, Southern Railway 1⅝ and Southern Pacific ⅞. In the industrial group, Brooklyn Edison distinguished itself by a gain of 2 points, while Consolidated Gas, Brooklyn Union Gas and some others were particularly active and strong. United States Steel showed a net gain of only ⅝, General Motors was up 3⅛ at the close, American Brake Shoe 5 points, American Locomotive 1⅛, Cudahy Packing 2⅝ and du Pont 2½. Several of the industrials were down sharply at the close.

Standard Oil Dividends.

The establishment yesterday of an annual dividend rate of $1.60 a share by the Standard Oil Company of New York as compared with the previous rate of $1.40 was about what had been expected in the light of the company's conservative dividend policy, but it was disappointing to many persons who had looked for an increase of 25 per cent. or more. The action was accepted as an indication that the company intends to adhere to its well-known ideas on the subject of dividends. The increase was only about 10 cents a share more than was necessary to equalize the rate with the return which holders of General Petroleum, recently absorbed by the Standard of New York, have been receiving. Naturally, Wall Street was disposed to consider the action as a possible cue to the dividend course of the Standard of New Jersey, the directors of which will meet for dividend action soon.

Europe Bids Up the Franc.

The advance in the franc above 3 cents yesterday for the first time since early in June was due entirely to operations abroad, as Paris and London now seem to be directing the movement of French exchange. The rise was attributed to the continued progress being made by the Poincaré Government toward stabilized conditions, as evidenced by the large majority by which the latest financial measure was adopted by the French Deputies. This measure authorizes dealings in foreign exchange, enlarges the uses to which gold may be put and leaves the way open for a coup similar to that which rescued the franc in the "battle" of 1924. Despite denials from abroad, the belief persists here that a large international credit will be obtained by France and that at the same time the franc will be revalued and the gold standard restored. This belief is heightened by the apparent preparations being made to ratify the debt agreements with the United States and Great Britain.

The Cotton Crop Outlook.

The cotton trade is again indulging in pre-report estimates of the cotton crop. The Government figures will be issued on Monday. Such private calculations as have appeared indicate little agreement on condition or possible yield. One company figures the condition at 68.3 per cent., with an indicated yield of 15,375,000 bales; another puts the condition at 64.5 per cent. and the yield at 14,732,000 bales; a third guesses 68.9 per cent. and 14,900,000 bales; a fourth sees a condition of 70.5 per cent. and a yield of 15,755,000 bales, while a fifth places the condition at 70.2 per cent. and the yield at 15,275,000 bales.

Bellwethers of the Railroads.

The advance of more than 3 points in New York Central and of nearly 4 points in Atchison shares yesterday was generally interpreted as due conviction that these railroads will establish record earnings in 1926 and compensate their shareholders accordingly. They are both leaders in their respective regions as well as in investment circles and are expected to take the cream of carrier profits for the current year which, it is believed, may mean 1 per cent. more on the aggregate of all railroad common stock than they did in 1925. Each has a large surplus which might be distributed if the directors see fit, while the New York Central holders have the promise of profits that sometimes accrue to consolidation plans.

A Pathway of Thorns.

If the way of the transgressor is hard so is that of the railroad consolidation promoter. Not only are there numberless details to outline if the Interstate Commerce Commission is to be satisfied from a technical standpoint, but minorities must be amply compensated and short lines absorbed, and nothing is more difficult to properly absorb than a short line the traffic of which has been removed by motor competition and the engines of which are rusting in the roundhouse. There is also the point of view held by Chairman Eastman and one or two other Commissioners that the present wording of the law does not permit the authorization of an independent consolidation plan and that all such steps must await Congressional action on the Parker bill.

The Return of French Capital.

The heavy tone which has developed in the exchanges of several of the so-called "neutral" countries of Europe is associated, in the minds of foreign exchange dealers, with recent changes in the international situation. Spanish pesetas, for instance, have fallen sharply from the high point they reached earlier in the year. It was declared yesterday that at the time of the flight of capital from France large amounts of French funds were transferred to Spain, accounting for the rise in exchange on Madrid. These funds now are being called back to France as a result of renewed confidence in the latter country, and the same is true of French funds that has been transferred to Holland, Switzerland, the Scandinavian countries and the United States. Large French balances are still held abroad, however, and bankers declare that when they begin returning in volume they will constitute an important factor in the French stabilization program.

Baltimore & Ohio Prospects.

Bankers and brokers are talking of an increase in the Baltimore & Ohio dividend at the next directors' meeting, but officials of the road give the idea little encouragement. While denying any knowledge of what may take place, they feel that the directors will await the results of the first three-quarters of the year and possibly the fourth before debating the question of an increase. The road is said to be in the best shape of its history and notably free from labor problems. The loss of some of its local passenger traffic it is believed would have little, if any, effect on earnings, as not only is this business a small contributor to gross revenues, but that originating in New York furnishes a slight portion of passenger receipts.

A Business Indicator.

One of the important indicators of trade conditions lies in the statements of sales from time to time of chain and department stores. The public buying power, a factor which carries considerable weight in the determination of business and trade conditions, is directly concerned in this type of retail business, and when chain and department stores' reports are optimistic, it is a generally accepted conclusion that the mercury of the business thermometer is rising. Thus far a dozen or more of these concerns have submitted reports of sales for July and the first seven months of the current year, and in no one case has there been demonstrated any falling off in business. Rather, increases in sales have been the ruling factor; in several cases the gains have mounted well over 100 per cent. in comparison with periods of last year.

WEEK'S BOND ISSUES SMALLEST OF YEAR

INCREASE IS LOOKED FOR

New bond offerings during the week ended yesterday were the smallest of the present year, amounting to only $18,225,863, which compared with $89,415,000 last week and $74,378,000 in the corresponding week of last year. The midsummer dullness has become pronounced in the field of new securities, but negotiations are under way which will result in important issues in the next few months. The offerings, by groups, of this and last week were as follows:

| | This Week. | Last Week. |
| Industrial | $9,075,000 | $22,000,000 |
| State and municipal | 4,150,863 | 3,915,000 |
| Public utility | 3,500,000 | 41,750,000 |
| Farm loan | 1,500,000 | 500,000 |
| Total | $18,225,863 | $89,415,000 |

The largest issue of the present week was one of $3,500,000 of the Jersey Central Power and Light Company, and this was the only offering in the public utility field. An equipment trust issue of the Fruit Growers Express Company, amounting to $2,175,000, was brought out, while industrial offerings included bonds of companies in the pulp and paper, theatrical and cottonseed businesses. One farm loan issue was sold and there was a scattering of State and municipal offerings, the largest of which was for $1,000,000.

A large Missouri Pacific issue is expected soon, as that road has applied to the Interstate Commerce Commission for authority to sell more than $22,000,000 of 5 per cent. mortgage bonds. Kuhn, Loeb & Co. are likely to offer this issue, of which the Guaranty Trust Company will be trustee. Many foreign loans, particularly in South America, also are in prospect. Several banking groups are bidding for a $45,000,000 Colombian loan and Peru is expected soon to sell a good-sized issue, while Chile, Argentina and several Provinces are mentioned as probable borrowers.

A revival of European financing also is considered likely within the next few weeks. Several Hungarian mortgage issues are being negotiated and a number of German loans probably will make their appearance in this market.

The bond market was quiet during the week and price changes were narrow. Interest centred mostly in foreign bonds, which moved up sharply in response to the improved outlook in France.

Public offering will be made next week of an issue of $5,000,000 5 per cent. serial notes of the Midland Utilities Company of Indiana and Ohio. The issue has been purchased by Halsey, Stuart & Co., Inc.

A. B. Leach & Co., Inc., was the highest bidder for an issue of $4,000,000 of 4 per cent. Chicago South Park bonds. The successful bid was 98.71.

For Better Dining Car Meals.

In order to establish and maintain uniform excellence of dining car meals, the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad has created the position of traveling chef, which will be filled by Joseph Press, cook of the private car of President Daniel Willard. It is believed by B. & O. executives that under the supervision of an experienced dining car man this service can be hugely improved.

JULY CLEARINGS FALL SLIGHTLY BELOW JUNE

Smaller Total Due to Reduced Commodity Prices and Seasonal Industrial Inactivity.

The turnover in checks at the principal clearing houses of the country during July revealed a small decrease from the aggregate in June, the decline being eight-tenths of 1 per cent., an aggregate of $43,785,325 in July, compared with $44,163,009,912 in the preceding month. However, the total for July was the largest on record for that month.

New York City clearings were likewise smaller in July when compared with the preceding month and July a year ago, the shrinkage amounting to 1.8 per cent. from the June total and 2.3 per cent. when contrasted with July a year ago. Outside of New York City drawn checks were about the same in July as in the preceding month, but larger when compared with July a year ago by 7.3 per cent.

The usual seasonal slack in Summer purchases, a contraction in commodity prices, together with the fact that a number of industrial concerns follow a policy of shutting down operations while taking stock and inventory, was generally believed the reason for the shrinkage in exchanges.

July clearings for the country as compiled by The Commercial and Financial Chronicle compare as follows with those of previous months and years:

According to Max Epstein, Fall Buying Will Be Heavy.

The Fall months will see a heavy rate of railway equipment buying, exceeding the highly encouraging rate obtaining at present, according to Max Epstein, President of the General American Tank Car Corporation, which recently made a survey of this field.

"The purchase of railway equipment now looms large," Mr. Epstein said, "and investigation which we have made points to a tremendous amount of business this Fall, in which this company will share largely. Business thus far this year has been very satisfactory and General American Tank Car has several months business booked ahead."

GAIN OF 6.7% IS MADE IN BANK CLEARINGS

TOTAL WAS $9,389,158,000

Decrease in Outside Aggregate Due to Falling Off in Only Seven Centres.

Twenty-three leading cities in the United States, including New York, report aggregate bank clearings of $9,389,158,000 for the week ended Aug. 5, which represents a gain of 6.7 per cent. over the $8,799,800,000 reported for the corresponding week a year ago.

The gain is attributed to a substantial increase here, where the total was $5,984,000,000, or 11.2 per cent. in excess of the figure for the week in 1925. The clearings at outside cities aggregated $3,405,158,000, a decrease of 0.5 per cent. from the $3,420,890,000 reported last year.

Of the twenty-two cities outside of New York reporting—two of which, Minneapolis and Atlanta, forwarded only estimates of their clearings—thirteen showed increases for the week, as against seven showing decreases. The best gains were made at Boston, Los Angeles, Portland, Ore.; Cleveland, Kansas City and Dallas.

PLUMBING TRADE HOLDS UP.

Prices in July Steady—Deferred Deliveries Increasing.

July business in the plumbing and heating trade was exceptionally well sustained, the usual midsummer recession being replaced in several lines by expanding activity, according to Domestic Engineering. Shipments during the last week in the month fell off somewhat, but specifications for Aug. 1 delivery were large.

"Prices in general are steady," the periodical reports. "The range boiler and pottery markets might be called the only exceptions to a satisfactory price situation. Lead prices advanced 5 per cent. during the week, the only change announced. While of no consequence to buyers as yet, reports of deferred deliveries are becoming more general, particularly in the case of steel pipe."

NEW RAIL BOARD TO BE TESTED HERE

First Hearing Involving Wage Claims on Eastern Roads to Open on Monday.

WILL ACT AS MEDIATOR

Failure to Come to Agreement Will Lead to Overtures for Arbitration.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6 (AP).—The newly created Railroad Board of Mediation will have its first test Monday in New York, when it will hear a wage dispute between the Order of Railway Conductors and the Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen and virtually all Eastern carriers.

The entire board membership will attend the meeting for a general discussion of the policies and attitude of the board, but later negotiations in the case will be turned over to one or two members.

Under the law, the board will lend its good offices to the dispute, but will make no decision or award. Should the mediation fail, the contending parties will be invited by the board to accept arbitration.

The Railroad Board of Mediation was created at the last session of Congress under the terms of the Watson-Parker act, to replace the Railroad Labor Board, which was abolished by the same act. Its members are Samuel E. Winslow, former member of the House; Edwin P. Morrow, former Governor of Kentucky; G. Wallace Hanger, former member of the Railroad Labor Board; Hysel Davies, formerly of the Department of Commerce, and Carl Williams, editor of The Oklahoma Farmer-Stockman.

In addition to the wage dispute, there are pending before the board wage claims of the Brotherhood of Railroad Firemen and the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers.

The conference of the mediation body here Monday concerns only the Eastern roads. It is understood that Southern and Western roads have claims for settlement of various disputes, which they will submit to the new board as soon as it can give attention to them.

In the second quarter the company earned $538,648 before Federal taxes, equal to $2.42 a share on common, against $1.88 a share in the same quarter last year.

UNUSUAL EXPANSION NOTED IN BUSINESS

PRICES HOLDING STEADIER

Interior and Pacific Coast Buyers Show More Interest—Crop Prospects Favorable.

More active buying for the Fall trade by interior and Pacific Coast cities is reported and industry throughout the country is proceeding at a slightly more rapid pace. Crop reports are generally more favorable, although a decrease is anticipated in corn and Spring wheat. Chain stores and mail order houses made record sales in July and the seven-months period, and business in general shows a gain over last year at this time.

Dun's Weekly Review of Trade says:

"The present comparative activity of business during what is normally the quietest period of the year continues to attract attention. Mid-August is not the time to expect commercial expansion, yet evidences of it appear now in some channels, and the position of different sellers has been visibly strengthened. The downward course of markets for some important commodities has been checked recently and various buyers, though adhering closely to a conservative policy, have shown less hesitation in their operations. Optimism regarding Fall prospects is the ruling sentiment.

"Labor troubles are not so widespread as to curtail appreciably the general purchasing power; stocks of goods, in the main, are relatively low, and in most instances production has been kept in balance with actual consumption."

Bradstreet's says:

"Retail trade is slower to get under way than is primary and secondary distribution, although seasonal sales are a feature. The constructive trades still lead in activity, with steel holding premier position and showing a gain in capacity. Interest in the textiles, notably cotton goods, seems to continue at some primary markets and more is doing at leading Western centres."

STRONG UNDERTONE IN UNLISTED STOCKS

CHAIN STORES ARE FIRM

Strong Demand Is Recorded for Johns-Manville, Ide, Celluloid, Rolls-Royce and Rubberoid.

An undertone of strength, enhanced by good demand and fair activity, prevailed in the over-the-counter market yesterday. The inquiry for investment issues continued, although some abatement from Thursday was noted. Public utility and industrial specialty shares provided the major interest, and considerable firmness was apparent among the chain stores stocks. Other groups were quiet.

Johns-Manville, George P. Ide preferred, Celluloid preferred, Rolls-Royce of America preferred and Rubberoid experienced the strongest demand in the industrial group, while some improvement was recorded in Crowell Publishing, A. O. Smith, Royal Baking Powder and Knox Hat preferred. In the late trading Celluloid sprang to the forefront and added sharply to its gain of the morning. Southern Baking and United Milk Products eased off toward the close and recorded slight losses on the day.

Further attention was attracted to the investment possibilities in the chain stores stocks by the calling for redemption by Mercantile Stores of 40 per cent. of its preferred stock and, as well, by the increases in sales reported by several of these system stores. Neisner Brothers, Leonard, Fitzpatrick, Mueller, Inc., Metropolitan Chain and J. J. Newberry contributed mostly to the day's activity in this section.

Augusta-Aiken Railroad and Electric recovered from its slump of Thursday and recorded a fractional gain on the day. An easier tone appeared in Erie Railways and United Electric Railways common, the latter being uninfluenced by reports of a merger with the Narragansett Electric Lighting Company.

The banking stocks were generaly quiet, although some inquiry appeared for First National, which ran up several points late in the session. Several fair gains were made in the insurance section, notably in Travelers and U. S. Merchants and Shippers. Sugar and tobacco stocks were quiet, but firm.

STANDARD OIL STOCK TO PAY $1.60 YEARLY

With the declaration yesterday of a quarterly dividend of 40 cents a share, the Standard Oil Company of New York established an annual rate of $1.60, as compared with the previous rate of $1.40 a year, or 35 cents quarterly.

This increase a little more than equalizes the rate for holders of the stock of the General Petroleum Company, which the Standard of New York recently absorbed. General Petroleum had been paying $3 annually, and its stock was exchanged on a basis of one share for two of Standard of New York. The quarterly disbursement of 40 cents by the Standard of New York gives the old holders of General Petroleum the equivalent of $3.20 a share.

The increase also gives to holders of Standard of New York who had stock prior to the absorption of General Petroleum the equivalent of $2 a year, since the former company declared a stock dividend of 25 per cent. several months ago.

The action of the directors of Standard of New York yesterday was about in line with expectations and was interpreted as indicating that the company was adhering to its traditional policy of conservative dividends. In some quarters the prediction had been made that the increase would be larger, but interest close to the management looked for a rate of about $1.60.

The Standard of New York's action was weighed in Wall Street as a possible index to what the Standard of New Jersey may do at its dividend meeting next week. Standard of New Jersey now pays $1 a share, and it is expected that an increase will be ordered. There is also talk of an extra cash disbursement. The management has given no indication of its intention.

Minneapolis Road Saw 48% of Wheat Being Diverted to the Lake Port.

Two adverse conditions, it was learned yesterday, caused the Minneapolis & St. Louis Railroad to order the 6-cent reduction in rates on grain and flour, which has not only upset the Western railroad rate situation but has given serious concern to the Eastern carriers serving the Buffalo market.

The most important condition was the continued growth of Duluth as a milling centre at the expense of Minneapolis. W. H. Bremner, receiver of the Minneapolis & St. Louis, gave out figures showing that whereas in 1917 Minneapolis mills were receiving 83.1 per cent. of the grain crop of the Northwestern States and the Duluth mills 16.9 per cent., by 1924 the Minneapolis percentage had fallen to 52 and the Duluth percentage increased to 48.

"We have viewed with a great deal of apprehension," says E. E. Nash, chief operating officer of the road, in a letter to the Western Trunk Line Committee, "the continued decrease in the all-rail movement of grain and grain products from Minneapolis to Eastern territory and we feel that you [other railroads in the territory] are equally interested with us in the restoration of this tonnage to the all-rail route, and we have the assurance of Minneapolis shippers that the rate provided in our tariff, while only partially equalizing the present rate of disadvantage, will result in very material increase in the all-rail tonnage from Minneapolis to Eastern territory."

It is also charged that recently most of the Kansas wheat has been moving into Minneapolis over the Chicago Great Western Railroad as the result of the construction of certain tariffs of the Great Western which permitted grain to move at lower than the regular rate. The officials of the Minneapolis & St. Louis contend that while the Chicago Great Western asserted that its tariff did not authorize such a rate, no determined effort was being made to collect the balance.

In addition to the rivalry engendered among the milling centres of the country by the Minneapolis & St. Louis reduction, the question has revived the competition of the all-water and all-rail route.

BUDGET PRINTING COST CUT

City Saves $32,400 as Competition Brings Price to $48,600.

The Board of City Record effected a saving yesterday of $32,400 in the cost of printing the city budget for 1927, as compared with the cost this year because of competition for the job between the M. B. Brown Printing and Binding Company and The Brooklyn Daily Eagle Job Printing Company. The Brown Company finally cut its original bid 40 per cent. and offered to print the budget for $48,600.

The Brown Company, which does more than a million dollars of city printing annually, at first bid $81,000, the price it received for printing this year's budget. The Eagle Company bid 10 per cent. less, the Brown Company met that bid and The Eagle Company finally offered a 17½ per cent. reduction.

After a discussion between Acting Mayor Joseph V. McKee, Charles F. Kerrigan, assistant to the Mayor; Deputy Controller Frank J. Prial and Corporation Counsel George P. Nicholson, it was decided that each bidder should submit sealed bids. When the sealed bids were opened it was found that the Brown Company had made a 40 per cent. cut and that The Eagle Company had submitted a bid 22 per cent. lower than the original offer.

CLOSER RELATIONS SEEN WITH COLOMBIA

President Mendez, Who Assumes Office Today, Regarded as Friendly to America.

Dr. Miguel Abadia Mendez, who has been described by New York bankers who have met him as "the Calvin Coolidge of South America," will take office today as the President of Colombia, to serve for the next four years. He has the distinction of being the only President of Colombia ever elected by a unanimous vote.

The inauguration of Dr. Mendez is regarded as important here because he has always encouraged the promotion of trade with the United States. American capital is flowing to Colombia, as to other Latin-American countries, in increasing amounts, and further expansion is expected.

Daniel Del Rio, manager of the Latin-American division of the Central Union Trust Company of New York, who has just returned from Colombia, said in an interview yesterday:

"Five years ago there was virtually no American capital in Colombia, with the exception of relatively small investments by the United Fruit Company, while now the amount of capital that America has poured into the country for purposes of railroad construction, roads, public works, agriculture, &c., is estimated at more than $100,000,000.

"I met President-elect Mendez while in Colombia and found that in many respects he resembled President Coolidge. Like Coolidge, he is a man of great energy but of few words; he lets his acts speak for themselves. In politics he is close-mouthed. On the eve of his assuming office no one yet knows who will compose his Cabinet."

In addition to his political attainments Dr. Mendez is Professor of Law in the National University of Bogota and conducts classes in Rosario College. He is the author of a Latin grammar, of a textbook on medieval history and of a volume on geography. He contributes editorials and articles to the Conservative press in Bogota.

Dr. Mendez was Minister of Finance when he was 26 years old, and has within the last thirty years held all Cabinet portfolios. On several occasions he has been Senator or Representative and has presided over both houses of Congress. He was Minister to Chile, and was Minister of Government during the Concha Administration.

CRUDE RUBBER AGAIN HIGHER

Active Trading Follows Strong News From London.

Crude rubber prices resumed yesterday the advance which set in late on Thursday and prices closed from 70 to 170 points up. The market was a broad one, seven positions being dealt in for a turnover of 659 contracts, the largest since June 3 last.

The move to higher levels was attributed to an announcement from the Colonial Office in London that there would be no change in restriction conditions during the next quarter, and that 21d. would remain the pivotal price. This was largely responsible for a fresh outburst of buying, in which factory purchases played a substantial part. Short covering was likewise a factor in the rise.

The greatest activity centred in the distant positions, December and January monopolizing the bulk of the business. December sold up 170 points and January was up 140 points, but part of these gains were canceled later.

Blanks for Stagger Plan Count to Go to All Employers.

Special arrangements were made yesterday for taking the transit census on Manhattan's east side. The Greater New York Taxpayers' Association offered to distribute census forms and circulars among 5,000 property owners and employers. Each census blank will be accompanied by a letter of directions in English and Yiddish. This part of the census is considered particularly important because it is estimated there are 500,000 persons in the section south of Fourteenth Street.

"The east side has a grievance in regard to the transit situation," said I. Berger, manager of the Greater New York Taxpayers' Association. "While other sections of the city have benefitted by the additional facilities the east side has lost. In fact, its only transit system, surface car lines, was withdrawn.

"The east side has come to the conclusion that if it is to get help in reducing transit congestion it must help itself. The real estate owners of the east side are very glad to cooperate in any movement to improve traffic conditions and they are anxious to give the stagger plan a chance to diminish overcrowding. Of those living in the section 90 per cent. go out of it to work."

Major Philip Mathews, chief executive officer of the Transit Commission, said it was important that the census should include the workers of small firms as much of New York's business was made up of small units. Of 7,568 business concerns checked, he said, only 5 per cent. had more than one hundred employes. He urged all small firms to mail in the census reports, and said that the failure of the small firms to make returns would imperial the success of the census.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—The late Lord Dunraven, the British yachtsman whose fight for America's cup provoked an international incident, has left an estate of over $3,600,000.

Sir James Boyton, who left an estate of $2,000,000, made a proviso that each time any of his grandsons is a competitor or spare man at the Henley regatta, he is to receive $75.

Return of Confidence in Government Securities Is Expected to End Wave of Buying.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Aug. 6.—The business and industrial world of France faces a complete readjustment owing to the rise of the franc from the neighborhood of 48 to the dollar to 35.

Although exporters have not voiced a protest against the rapid appreciation of the national currency, many have been calling the Government's attention to the serious difficulties facing them on this score.

For several years the French export trade has been increasing because of the continual fall of the franc. In the present year the export trade continued to grow, but profits decreased because prices had not been readjusted to meet the increasing costs of imports on the other side of the trade account.

A month ago a movement was begun to increase export prices to a point slightly below the prices quoted for the same goods by other countries, but well over the former French prices.

The natural consequence would be price-cutting, but owing to various Government measures credits have grown dearer. Freight rates are expected to rise again because of increased transportation taxes; the business turnover tax has been increased; the new tax on ordinary exports and the tax on luxury exports have been heavily raised; salaries must be readjusted to the increasing cost of living, and many lesser items of expenditure have been swelled by such measures as increased postage rates, &c.

For these reasons price-cutting appears impossible, and as a result the export trade is expected to suffer a loss. Even domestic trade is expected to decrease because of the return of confidence in Government securities, the majority of the people no longer fearing their savings deposits will disappear because it is believed the franc will at last be stabilized at a rate preventing further loss.

This, in turn, means an end to the wave of spending in which a majority of the people has been indulging in order to have something tangible to exchange for their lifetime savings.

With spending except for sheer necessities eliminated many industries will find it difficult to market their products at home, just as foreign trade will be injured by the elimination of the difference between French and foreign price lists.

Business is expected to face the situation by a severe economy campaign, which may mean the discharge of many of the 2,000,000 foreign workers now employed in France. No change of policy has occurred yet, as is shown by the Employment Bureau figures published today.

Only 342 men and women are drawing unemployment benefits, against 547 in January, 1926; 705 in January, 1925; 1,227 in January, 1924; 2,674 in January, 1923; 10,071 in January, 1922, and 91,225 in March, 1921, the post-war peak.

Meanwhile, 3,847 foreign workmen entered and 888 left France last week. Of these, 2,331 received factory and 1,516 agricultural jobs. Frenchmen obtained 28,143 jobs last week in public agencies, while 12,546 jobs remained unfilled. All the figures go to show that the labor shortage still exists and that discharges have not begun.

To a minor degree, price-cutting is expected, especially by industries with modern equipment. Many automobile factories, on the other hand, are installing labor-saving devices which they had hoped to put into operation before stabilization began.

BRITISH SILVER AT NEW LOW

Falls to 28⅝ Pence, Lowest Price Since March, 1916.

LONDON, Aug. 6 (AP).—Silver fell to 28⅝ pence today, the lowest price since March, 1916. The slump, it was said in financial circles, was due to Indian selling as a result of the recent Royal Currency Commission report and to lack of buyers.

The Royal Currency Commission, appointed last year to examine Indian currency and exchange, recently issued a report advocating a true gold standard in India. The report recommended the retention of the currency note and silver rupee as the ordinary medium of circulation, but the stability of the currency in terms of gold should be secured by making the currency directly convertible into gold.

Another recommendation was that paper currency should cease to be convertible by law into silver coin, but that no change be made in the legal tender character of the silver rupee. Gold and gold securities, the report stipulated, should form not less than 40 per cent. of the central bank reserve.

CURB PRICES HIGHER, SPECIALTIES IN LEAD

Trading Interest Again Centres in Durant Motors, Which Fails to Better Previous High.

LOSSES IN OTHER MOTORS

Prices closed higher in the curb market yesterday. Trading, however, was much after the fashion of that in vogue recently in that preference was shown for specialties which, as a class, carried off major honors in the matter of price advance. Durant Motors, which has been the centre of interest lately, had another larage turnover, but failed to better Thursday's high and closed practically unchanged. Losses were registered by other motors, particularly Stutz, although gains elsewhere in the industrial group greatly overshadowed the declines.

On the down side of the account there were such securities as Seaman Brothers, Truscon Steel, Dominion Stores and United Biscuit, but, aside from losses running beyond the point area in Celotex, Libby Owens and Pittsburgh & Lake Erie, the declines were small. Public utilities held to the improvement made during Thursday's session. The only wide changes of consequence were in Southeastern Power and Light, Columbia Gas new and Associated Gas and Electric.

Standard Oils presented a spotty appearance, although, in the main, prices ruled higher. Standard of New York eased off a small fraction notwithstanding the increase in the annual dividend rate to $1.60 a share.

There were only a few important changes in either the domestic or foreign bond sections. Cities Service "D" 7s ran up to a new high for the year at 107¼ and Rand Kardex 5½s sold at 118, thereby equaling the year's high.

New Madison Mortgage Stocks.

Stockholders of the Madison Mortgage Corporation have authorized an additional issue of $1,000,000 of 7 per cent. cumulative first preferred stock and an increase in the no par value common stock from 42,500 shares to 100,000 shares, it was announced yesterday. The proceeds of the new preferred stock will be used to meet capital requirements.

WHEAT UNSETTLED, PRICES RANGE LOWER

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—Wheat futures were very unsettled within a range of 1⅜ to 1¾ cents, an early break of ⅝ cent being followed by a bulge to the high point of the day, when a number of the local operators and several commission houses changed their position on the market. The finish was easy, due to the decline in corn, and the close was at net losses of ⅜ to ⅝ cent. Trade in the aggregate was not large and the market easily influenced. A weakening in the Winnipeg market, which was off ⅞ to 1⅛ cents at the close, had considerable effect here toward the last. Minneapolis, however, was firm and unchanged to ½ cent lower, while Kansas City was off ⅝ cent. Expectations of a marked improvement in the export demand, wtih decided improvement in the Southwest, were the bullish influences early.

Around 1,000,000 bushels of cash wheat is expected to be moved out before Monday for shipment to Montreal, and charters for the grain have been made during the past week. The trade looks for another big incerase in the domestic visible supply to be shown in Monday's statement, as Kansas City will increase around 3,000,000 bushels or more for the week.

The development of export business from Chicago and more Eastern markets is attracting attention, as it would seem to indicate that there is more business passing than is being reported. At the same time there are indications that much of the business passing at the Gulf is between exporters who are changing cash grain or covering shorts. There is no pressure from the country and purchases to arrive are small. Minneapolis is receiving a few cars of new wheat daily, which sold today at liberal premiums, but country offerings and loadings so far are very light.

Some of the Minneapolis mills are said to be booking flour sales at somewhat in excess of daily capacity, and Kansas City mills are also doing a good business. Despite the talk of a better export demand, the seaboard reported only 200,000 to 300,000 bushels sold abroad, with No. 2 hard at the Gulf for August shipment quoted at 8¼ cents to 8¾ cents over Chicago September and first half September at 7½ cents over.

Primary arrivals today, 2,954,000; week ago, 3,900,000; last year, 1,688,000. Shipments, 1,213,000; week ago, 1,376,000; last year, 753,000.

While corn showed moderate strength early due to damage reported from Kansas, the close was about the bottom, with net losses of ⅝ to 1¼ cents, with September leading. Cash houses bought September and sold December at 4¼ to 4⅝ cents differences, the widest so far, and at one time the spread was 4½ cents. In the sample market cash grain was slow and steady to 2 cents lower as compared with September, No. 2 mixed selling at September price and yellow and white at ½ cent over.

PROSPECTS OF RAIN LIFT COTTON PRICE

Several Large Private Crop Estimates an Influence on the Day's Trading.

Following the liquidating movement and the decline earlier in the week, predictions of showers over Western regions caused a quarter of a cent recovery in cotton at one time yesterday. Uncertainty over Monday's Government report and several large private crop estimates produced an irregular market, with final quotations 12 to 15 points higher than Thursday. Weather continued the most favorable in several weeks, nearly every station in Oklahoma registering 100 degrees maximum during the previous twenty-four hours, with virtually no moisture in the entire West belt. Scattered showers occurred in Mississippi, Alabama and Georgia, with heavy rains in the Carolinas.

Though early Liverpool quotations proved slightly lower than the previous day, reports of a tropical disturbance near the Bermudas strengthened the foreign market before the local opening. This is the second storm to develop in the past two weeks, and as they are not normally a feature until September, the early appearance this year has attracted considerable attention. Of more immediate influence as a market factor in both New York and New Orleans was the possibility of another spell of unsettled weather in regions where additional warm, dry conditions are needed.

As various lines of long cotton had been liquidated during the decline of over three-quarters of a cent, the execution of overnight buying orders found fewer contracts for sale. Trade demand for October was a feature of early trading here, and all three markets improved in tone. Owing to the comparatively slow fruiting and lateness of the crop in Texas, a light early movement of cotton is indicated.

Private estimates issued yesterday included several in excess of 15,000,000 bales. The Southern Cotton Company placed the indicated crop at 15,755,000, Procter & Gamble at 15,375,000 and the Housman-Gwathmey Company at 15,275,000. The Memphis Commercial Appeal gave 14,976,000 and The Daily News Record 14,732,000 on a condition of 64.5, which was considerably lower than other condition estimates. The average indicated crop on the fifteen private reports issued so far is 14,837,000, with a range from 15,755,000 to 14,090,000.

DISPUTES OTTINGER'S AUTHORITY IN INQUIRY

E. J. MacNamara Calls Martin Act Proceeding Extra-Judicial —Wants Subpoena Vacated.

On the ground that the Attorney General is exceeding his authority, an application was filed in the Supreme Court yesterday by Edmund J. MacNamara of Lewisohn Brothers, at 11 Broadway, to vacate a subpoena directing him to testify in the Martin act inquiry concerning the practices of The Wall Street Iconoclast and George Graham Rice in the sale of securities. The subpoena directed Mr. MacNamara to bring with him all books and documents relating to the sale of Columbia Emerald Development Company stock.

Through his attorney, Louis Marshall, Mr. MacNamara says he is President of the Columbia Emerald Development Corporation, but he has had no dealings with the Wall Street Iconoclast or with Rice. He asserts that the proposed inquiry is "an extra-judicial and summary inquisition by the Attorney General, who is acting as complainant, inquisitor and sole judge of such proceedings," and intends to pass on all constitutional and legal rights of such witnesses as may be called, who, he says, are not permitted by the Attorney General to have the advice of attorneys.

Mr. MacNamara contends that neither himself nor the corporation of which he is President is subject to an inquiry under the Martin act because all its stock is sold in Boston, where it is listed on the Boston Curb. He asserts that to compel him to testify before the Attorney General "in star-chamber proceedings" and to give evidence against himself would amount to a violation of his constitutional rights.

Gas and Electric Appliance Trade.

An increase of 36.1 per cent. in sales of gas and electric appliances and installations for the first six months of this year is reported by the new business department of Henry L. Doherty & Co. These sales totaled $4,494,171, as compared with $3,302,538 for the like period of 1925.

BRITISH STRIKERS HERE TO GET HELP

WOMAN M. P. AS CHAIRMAN

End of Trouble Not in Sight, She Says—Ben Tillett Among Others in Party.

Six British delegates arrived yesterday from England on the Sunard liner Berengaria to deliver addresses in this country under the auspices of the American Federation of Labor with the object of raising money for the relief of the British miners' wives and children, who are suffering from the long strike.

The accredited delegates are Joseph Jones, General Secretary, Yorkshire Miners' Association; James Robson, President, Durham Miners' Association; Paul McKenna, Scottish Miners' Association; Oliver Harris, Treasurer, South Wales Miners' Association; Ben Tillett, member of the General Council, British Trades Union Congress, and Miss Ellen Wilkinson, M. A., M. P., Women's Relief Committee, Chairman of the delegation.

When Miss Wilkinson was informed of the statement made on Thursday by Premier Baldwin that the miners were not really in want, she said there were at least 2,000,000 children who were in need of food and clothing, and their mothers also were in need. The only relief that they were reciving, apart from that givn by the Women's Relief Committee, came from some, not all, the Boards of Guardians in the towns in the coal district.

"The maximum sum that the board can allow," Miss Wilkinson continued, "is $5.60 a week for a family, irrespective of the number of children to be fed. In some of the poorer districts the Poor Law Guardians can afford to pay only 85 cents a week for a wife and one child and $1.48 for a wife and children. No relief is given by the Guardians for any child more than 14years old.

"The Women's Relief Committee has received $100,000 from American labor organizations through its agents here. All this money is used to provide the wives and families of the miners with the necessaries of life. Not one penny goes to the strike funds."

Asked about conditions in England, Miss Wilkinson said they were bad. More than 20,000 men in the engineering trades in the North had been thrown out of work by the coal strike and the number was increasing daily.

"Do you think there is any probability of the strike being ended in the near future; the woman Labor member of Parliament was asked.

"No," she replied. "I am sorry to say I do not see any chance of the finish of the strike. The bishops have done a great deal of good and the government has tried to do its best, but the owners will not give in. The miners would accept the eight-hour day."

Ben Tillett was of the same opinion as the Chairman of the delegation, and said there was no truth in the report that the coal strike would end on Aug. 20. He continued:

"There are 1,000,000 men involved in the dispute, and they with their dependents constitute nearly one-tenth of the British population. The low wages of the British miners, coupled with short-time and unemployment for the last five years, have given them no chance of saving money to meet such a crisis as this. It will be agreed that their families should not be faced with stavation and the loss of homes through an idustrial upheaval over which the families have no control.

This is Mr. Tillett's fourth visit to America. He came first in 1876, next in 1904 and again in 1921.

Miss Wilkinson is 33 years old, short and slim, has red hair, brown eyes and a bright, cheerful manner. She esaid the delegates were not going to talk politics in America, but hoped to appeal for the ever-generous help of the American workers and all sections of the American public, which always had responded to the call of suffering childhood.

Mr. Tillett said they must be back in England to attend the Trades Union Congress on Sept. 4.

The delegates were met at the Cunard pier by representatives of labor organizations and started later for Washington to confer with William Green, President of the American Federation of Labor. Miss Wilkinson represents Middlesborough, North Yorkshire, in the House of Commons. She was the first woman Labor member to be elected.

DRY GOODS HOLD STEADY.

Fewer Customers in the Market Than This Time Last Year.

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Aug. 6.—Marshall Field & Co., in their weekly review of the wholesale dry goods trade, say:

"Current wholesale distribution of dry goods maintained about the same figure as a year ago during the corresponding week. Road sales continued in about the same volume as the past few weeks, although they failed slightly to reach that of the same week last year. There are fewer customers in the market than in 1925 during the same period. Collections were approximately the same as last year for the corresponding period."

Canadian Wheat Crop Reduced.

The Bank of Montreal in a survey of crops prepared from telegraphic advices from branch managers throughout Canada reports that lack of rain and hot weather over almost the whole of the prairie provinces are causing wheat to ripen prematurely and will reduce the yield materially.

SCOFFS AT THREAT OF CLOAK MAKERS

CITES POWER OUT OF TOWN

Union Controls Labor Wherever Firms Would Move, He Says—Sees Veteran Workers Needed.

Morris Sigman, President of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, in a statement yesterday, characterized as "an attempt to intimidate the striking cloakmakers" the announcement by the Industrial Council of Cloak, Suit and Skirt Manufacturers, Inc., that it had made arrangements to take all its production out of New York City.

"They flatly contradict that statement," said Mr. Sigman, "when they announce that they will make a vigorous attempt next Monday morning to induce the cloakmakers to return to work."

Mr. Sigman said:

"Any one who knows something about the cloak industry will tell you offhand that this talk about 'moving the industry' to small Connecticut and New Jersey towns is sheer nonsense. It is particularly impossible in the case of the so-called 'inside' manufacturers who depend upon highly skilled labor and whose product includes the best annual 'style' output in the market. These employers surely do not expect to convince anybody that they could produce garments which require experience acquired by dozens of years of work, by 'green' laborers recruited in small towns.

"Another matter which these manufacturers ought to know, is that the International Union is not a New York City organization only. In that district alone, to which these employers threaten to move their shops—Connecticut, Northern New Jersey and Hudson River Valley—our organization has thirty-five local unions composed of workers living in those towns.

"It is about time that, instead of putting up straw bogey-men to scare the strikers, the 'inside' manufacturers got down to business and negotiated a lasting peace with their workers."

Mr. Sigman said that the strikers had planned an elaborate picketing demonstration to take place Monday when the manufacturers attempt to induce workers to return.

Samuel Klein, manager of the Industrial Council, admitted the truth of Mr. Sigman's claim that the union would still have jurisdiction over workers in the Connecticut, Hudson Valley and New Jersey territory. But he maintained that there were non-union shops in which workers could be employed without interference by the union.

Mr. Klein denied charges that the manufacturers had been hiring gangsters to intimidate the workers.

Samuel Dorman of 933 Freeman Street, the Bronx, was held in $500 bail on a charge of malicious mischief by Magistrate Short in the Bridge Plaza Court, Brooklyn, for a hearing Monday. The charge was based on the damage done to garments by strikers who entered the shop of William Blandenberg, 246 Floyd Street, Brooklyn. Some of the strikers held Blandenberg in a corner while others used knives, scissors and water on garments.

GARMENT WORKERS CARRY WAR UPSTATE

Group Believed to Be Members of Brooklyn Local Attack Plant in Sullivan County.

Special to The New York Times.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Aug. 6.—Echoes of the New York garment workers' war were heard near Middletown for the second time within two weeks when twelve men and a woman believed to be from Local 2 of the Ladies' International Garment Workers' Union of Brooklyn attacked the operators of a small independent cloak company at Haven, Sullivan County, smashed the machinery in the place and poured acid over a stack of garments.

The factory was owned and operated by five former New York workers. They employed only one extra hand. One of the owners, Abraham Gross, of Brooklyn, is in the Monticello Hospital with a possible fracture of the skull. He was hit over the head with an iron bar. Another, William Hedder, of Brooklyn, was struck with a piece of pipe and burned with acid. He is at his home in a serious condition. Three others escaped by locking themselves in an upstairs room.

Sheriff Rhodes said today that the authorities had a strong suspicion that the attackers were from the Local 2 of Brooklyn, which was based on information they did not care to disclose.

†Nominal.

The sharp downward trend in the general list was reflected in the foodstuffs, where fourteen declines contrasted with only four advances. In the local market for provisions all of the listed flours were lower. Declines of 15 and 10 cents a barrel, respectively, were seen in Spring patents and Winter soft straights, and there was also a drop of 15 cents a barrel in the fancy variety of Minnesota family flour. Middle Western lard was lower here, and there was also a decline in bacon. Hams did not change.

At Chicago lower prices were seen for live hogs, live sheep and short ribs. Live steers were higher, and mess pork did not change. The only listed change in the dairy products was a rise of 1½ cents a dozen in first quality fresh-gathered eggs.

Both the fresh and dried fruits in the list were bare of changes, and there were not many revisions in the vegetables. A rise in choice pea beans contrasted with a drop in choice red kidney stock, but the feature was a break of $1 a bag in onions.

Save for a decline in No. 7 Rio coffee, the beverage list was without change. Fine granulated sugar was not revised this week, but there was a further rise in 96-degree centrifugal raw sugar. In the spices the changes consisted of declines in Zanzibar cloves, black Lampong pepper and white Singapore pepper.

All of the changes in the grains list this week were declines. These were in wheat, oats, rye, corn and malting barley. For the first time in many weeks neither hides nor leathers showed any revisions. Tallow declined.

None of the major items in the metals list showed change this week, but in the minor ones a drop in zinc contrasted with rises in antimony, copper, lead and tin. The listed building materials were without change, but eight revisions were seen in lumber. Seven of them were declines. The only advance was in common fir, rough.

Changes in the drugs, chemicals, dyestuffs and oils were featureless this week. There were eleven of them, and eight were declines. A rise in resin and a drop in turpentine were the only changes in the naval stores.

Both Brazilian and Eastern crude rubbers were lower this week. In the paint list advances took place in American litharge and American red lead. The miscellaneous changes included advances in hemp, Japanese raw silk and strawboards, and a decline in jute.

The week in the textiles was again without particular feature. Nothing of special interest transpired in woolens or silks. Burlaps were unsteady. In the cotton goods the changes occurred in unfinished cloths, some of which advanced a little.

HUTH FUR AUCTION OVER.

Sales on Final Day Bring the Grand Total to $1,300,000.

Active buying of wolf and raccoon featured the closing sessions of the Huth fur auction here yesterday. Together with Northern muskrat on the first day, these articles supplied the "bright spots" of the sale.

The wolf collection, which included 22,000 skins, was said by Huth executives to be of fair average quality. It moved freely, with bidding general, at prices ranging to $18.50 for the best skins. The 16,000 raccoon pelts sold up to $12.50.

Next to that for wolf and raccoon, the demand for wolverine was best yesterday. Bidding was fairly active when timber wolf, silver fox, cross fox, kitt fox and South American fox were under the hammer, but white, blue, Australian, red and sundry foxes sold poorly. Fisher was neglected.

These were the top prices received yesterday for skins other than wolf and raccoon: Timber wolf, 21; wolverine, $18; fisher, $60; white fox, $44.50; blue fox, $68; silver fox, $225; cross fox, $47; kitt fox, $5; Australian fox, $2; South American fox, $6.35; red fox, $29 and sundry fox, $4.

Sales for the final day reached $400,000, which brought the grand total to $1,300,000. Prompt day will be Aug. 24. The auction just concluded is one of a series of monthly sales announced recently by Huth & Co. The next will begin here on Sept. 15.

THE BUSINESS WORLD

COMMERCIAL PAPER.

Thursday—4 per cent. for the best names.
The quotations are for six months' paper.

Hard Coal Demand Broadens.

Predictions that August would be a good month for the anthracite trade are in a fair way of being borne out, Saward's Journal will say today, if the amount of business booked this week can be taken as a criterion. Consumer buying is making its appearance in larger volume, and the retailers are placing orders more freely now that they are moving out tonnage faster. It is reasonable to assume that not only will this activity continue during the remainder of the present month, but that it will become more pronounced as Autumn draws near. Perhaps the most noteworthy development of the week in the bituminous market has been the reappearance of export inquiries on a larger scale than during the preceding fortnight.

Colored Voiles Are Wanted.

Plain colored voiles and rayons are in greatest demand in wash goods at the moment. The demand for dots has receded to such an extent, according to the market letter of the National Wholesale Dry Goods Association, that in many cases they are being offered at reductions for clearance. Silk and cotton crepes continue in fair demand, and there is an apparent call for cotton pongees and English prints. Small prints, in the opinion of many, will remain in high favor. Challie voiles and challie-finished poplins are outstanding items for Fall, with the call for prints predominant. Considerable optimism regarding the coming season is expressed by wholesalers.

Gray Goods Sales Were Fair.

Gray goods trading was fair in this market yesterday, the feature being the activity of certain printcloth constructions. Buyers paid 7⅝ cents for considerable quantities of 38½-inch 64-60s for devilery in August and September, and there was also trading in that construction for October shipment at 7½ cents. Late in the day that price was no longer acceptable to sellers for October goods. Other printcloth sales included near-by deliveries of 39-inch 80-squares and 38½-inch 68-72s at 10¼ and 8⅝ cents, respectively. Similar deliveries of 37-inch 48-square, four-yard sheetings were sold at 9 cents, and there was trading in 37-inch 3.95-yard drills at 8½ cents. In the specialties business was done in 37½-inch 64-104, 4.37-yard sateens at 11½ cents. Fine-yarn cloths were quiet.

Name Delegates to Council.

The "Pride in Industry" movement in the women's ready-to-wear field has gained considerable momentum with the submission to David N. Mosessohn, head of the National Council of Women's Apparel Trades, of the names of the representatives in the council of five of the seven organizations in its membership. Each member-association will have three representatives, and those which have sent in names so far are the Associated Dress Industries of America, the Associated Fur Manufacturers, Inc., the United Women's Wear League of America, the National Wholesale Women's Wear Association, the Eastern Millinery Association, Inc., and the National Association of Ladies' Hatters. The organizations which have yet to name their representatives are the National Garment Retailers' Association and the National Retail Dry Goods Association. It is planned to have the council begin active work as soon as the remaining names are sent in.

More Orders for Fall Neckwear.

Additional orders for men's Fall neckwear are reaching local wholesalers, and the indications are that much of the delayed buying by retailers will be done within the next few weeks. Reports in the market here agree that for the most part the retail turnover of this merchandise during the Spring and early Summer was good and that there is not likely to be any disturbing carryover into the Fall. While there is still a marked tendency toward bright shades in ties for next season, the color effects have been toned down considerably when compared with last Fall and the early Spring. Bias stripes and small figured effects dominate in the patterns of cut silk merchandise, while in the knitted silk ties the trend is strongly toward ornate all-over jacquard designs.

Few Cloth Coats Are Offered.

Cloth coats are not figuring to the extent expected in the women's ready-to-wear sales now being staged by retailers. While in the past two years cloth coats, as well as fur, were offered to the public, this year fur coats predominate by far. This is due in part to the strike in the coat industry, but it also reflects the judgment of the retailers that, while it pays to feature fur coat sales, it is not profitable to "play up" the cloth garments. This is traced mainly to the consumer psychology, which makes possible the successful offering of high-priced fur coats in August, while Fall cloth coats, in order to have a good turnover during that month, must be almost of the bargain variety.

Spanish Styles in Furniture.

Spanish styles dominate in the better grades of furniture, they being featured in dining and bedroom sets and occasional single pieces. In the woods used for this merchandise, rosewood and satinwood in novelty finishes are favored most. In popular-priced merchandise, which has received the bulk of the recent demand, walnut and combination woods continue to lead. In parlor sets the call for mohair upholstering continues strong, but there is said to be increasing interest in sets featuring new imported pile brocades. Gay colors are the rule in the cushions. Particular favor is accorded mulberry and green, with taupe the preferred shade for the rest of the set. Buyers are operating very cautiously.

Ready-to-Wear Buying Improves.

Buying activity in ready-to-wear for Fall is increasing. Were it not for the strike in the coat and suit industry, it is figured that the number of buyers here this week would have been exceptional, but even as it was, the number in the market during the first three days was large. Owing to the staging of the Fall style show of the National Garment Retailers' Association at the Hotel Commodore on Tuesday evening, which will really mark the opening of the wholesale season, it is anticipated that the number of buyers who will be here next week will be very large, greatly increased buying is expected to follow the show.

Light Felt Hats Not Popular.

Aside from the selling of men's light-weight felt hats by some of the better-class stores during recent weeks, not a great deal has been done toward further popularizing this type of headgear for general wear. The average retailer, according to views expressed here yesterday, is unwilling to feature these hats because of possible injurious effects to the sale of regular Fall-weight felts. It was pointed out that the lighter felts can be worn well into November, or even later, which would cut down by a considerable percentage the early buying of Fall hats. From the consumer standpoint, it was said, the general tendency is to regard the light hat as an extra one for sports or travel, and not as a substitute for the sennit or body hat for general wear.

To Show Only Staples at First.

The general tendency to go slow in offering women's wear fabrics for Spring is shown by the announcement of one of the leading producers that it will confine its first showing to such staples as poiret sheens and twills. On such fabrics, it is felt, the mills can go ahead safely at this time, but it is a different story when general lines, particularly ones of a novelty character, are considered. With much business yet to be placed in fabrics for the coming Fall season, the mills fail to see what can be accomplished by general Spring openings now. It is pointed out, in support of this position, that the cutters-up, probably more than ever before, are now adhering to the policy of covering their requirements as closely as possible to the time of selling the finished garments.

MITCHELL'S HOME SOLD

The Shuberts yesterday added the northwest corner of Broadway and Sixty-second Street to their long list of Manhattan realty holdings.

The property involved in the transaction is a six-story automobile building on a plot 116.2 by 106.7 feet. It was purchased by Sam S. and Lee Shubert from the Motors Realty Company, which company acquired it from Colonel E. H. R. Green several years ago.

The Shuberts own the adjoining garage at 19 and 21 West Sixty-second Street, running through 18 and 20 West Sixty-third Street, which is between the Century Theatre and the property just acquired. The purpose of the purchase was not announced.

The property consists of a five-story residence built, on a lot 25 by 120 feet, between Seventy-fourth and Seventy-fifth Streets. Mr. Mitchell owns the adjoining residence at 934, which was formerly the Hoppin town home and which he purchased last year to prevent an apartment house being built on the Fifth Avenue frontage. Other residents in the same block include Mortimer L. Schiff and Edwin Gould.

The five-story residence at 56 East Seventy-third Street, on lot 17 by 102.2 feet, has been sold for the Huntly Trading Company through John J. Kavanagh, represented by Edward F. Reilly.

The four-story dwelling at 51 West Seventy-sixth Street, 21 by 100 feet, has been purchased by the Nak Realty Corporation from Charles Astwood. The brokers was the Del Sappenfield firm.

WILL REMAIN DOWNTOWN.

Real Estate Exchange Leases New Vesey Street Quarters.

The Real Estate Exchange, for years located in Vesey Street, is to remain downtown, despite recent rumors to the contrary.

Negotiations are reported to have been closed yesterday for a three-year lease on the store space at 56 Vesey Street, between Church and West Broadway, owned by the White Tar Realty Associates. The building covers a plot 25 by 100. Possession will be taken on Sept. 1.

The exchange, more popularly known as the Vesey Street Salesroom, will be able to retain this designation with the new address on the same street in the block to the west. The move will be the first in twenty-three years.

Transfer of Slain Man's Property Missing—Two Men Also.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Aug. 6.—Four pages recording the transfer of property in Mizpah, N. J., from Antonio Cosella, recently murdered, to Orazio Cataldi, liberated three weeks ago after being held on suspicion of the crime, have been taken from a deed book in the office of County Clerk Blair at May's Landing, and Cataldi and his brother Nicoli have disappeared.

Cosella, supposed to have been wealthy, left his home in Mizpah on June 3 for New York. On June 5 his body was found in a burlap bag in Frankford, Pa., a suburb of Philadelphia. A week later State Troopers arrested the Cataldi brothers. They were held in jail at May's Landing until July 9, when they were freed without bond by order of the County Prosecutor.

The deeds the records of which were destroyed, were dated May 27, and filed for record June 2, the day before Cosella was murdered. They covered forty-six lots in Mizpah.

During the first seven months of 1926 there was an aggregate of $657,250,200 worth of new building and engineering work started in New York City, compared with $448,011,900 during the corresponding period of last year, the increase being 47 per cent.

Through the requirement of bank and business references from all advertisers under Business Opportunities and the fact that advertisements are subject to censorship, The New York Times aims to protect both reader and advertiser against the unscrupulous.

Independent investigation is urged before closing negotiations, as, despite the care exercised by The Times over its advertising columns, a dishonest statement may appear. Prompt report of discovery of such will be welcomed by The Times for immediate inquiry.

FOUNTAINS OF CITY MAY BE DISINFECTED

SUGGESTS SWIMMING POOLS

They Should Be in Congested Parts of the City as Boon to the Youngsters, He Declares.

Disinfection of the water in public fountains so that children may safely splash about in them during the hot weather is being considered by the authorities, it was announced yesterday. Dr. Louis I. Harris also said the establishment of open air, municipal swimming pools, especially in the tenement house districts, would be a boon to the children of the city.

Unless chemical purification of the waters of park fountains was undertaken, Dr. Harris said, there was grave danger of contracting diseases from the polluted water. This had already been demonstrated by four cases of typhoid fever traced to the wading pool in Tompkins Square, between Avenues A and B, East Seventh and Tenth Streets, he explained.

"Open air bathing pools in all sections of the city, but more especially in the crowded districts where they are needed most, would be of great benefit," said Dr. Harris. "They should be properly chlorinated and the water should be constantly changed to prevent pollution. If proper health engineering methods were employed, I can see no drawback to the plan.

"Let me explain how important I think open pools, exposed to the health-giving sunlight, would be, by describing an incident I saw last night as I passed a group of children at Eleventh Avenue and Thirty-ninth Street. It was stifling hot and men, women and children in that crowded section were sitting about on steps and crowding the sidewalks. A group of about thirty children were trying to cool themselves in a pool of liquid in the gutter. The dirty puddle was opposite a slaughter house and about thirty feet to the northward was a stable. All the children were bathing in this filth, but four of them were submerged with only their heads sticking out of the pool.

"Any one with only an elementary knowledge of how disease is transmitted could not help but be aghast at a scene like this. It is a strong argument for providing swimming pools for the multitudes in hot weather."

WATER CALLED BAD; TOWN IS ALARMED

Officials of Pompton Lakes, N. J., Hold Secret Sessions—One Admits 40% Bacteria.

POMPTON LAKES, N. J., Aug. 6.—Reticence among officials here has caused a growing alarm among residents over reported contamination of the water supply, which has been the cause of secret meetings of the Board of Health and the Borough Council. The only definite statement which has been made so far was by Dr. Durland Van Orden of the Board of Health, who admitted that the water supply "showed 40 per cent. bacteria and caused intestinal trouble."

The whole situation has been referred to J. Willard De Yoe, Borough Attorney, who lives in Paterson. What action will be taken, and when, has not been made public. The Board of Health does not meet until Monday and the Borough Council until a week from next Wednesday. Meanwhile official secrecy has left the residents afraid to drink the water and unable to learn the true situation.

On Wednesday the State Board of Health returned reports of the analysis of samples of the water which had been submitted to it. The report is said to have been so condemnatory that a special secret meeting of the local Board of Health was called the same night. This was followed by a secret communication to Mayor Stephen J. Jacons and the Borough Council, which was taken up at the regular meeting of the Council last night.

The local water supply comes from two or three mountain lakes about ten miles away, beyond Butler. It is furnished by a company on a twenty-five year contract. The same company, through the same system, supplies water to Riverdale, Bloomingdale, Butler, Midvale, Wanaque and Haskell.

Pompton Lakes has no sewer system, and a severe typhoid epidemic some years ago is still remembered by residents. Dr. Thomas Wood, health officer, has announced that there is "no immediate danger," but has not explained further.

DUGGAN TURNS UP AGAIN.

Argentine Flier, Missing Since Monday, Arrives in Rio Grande do Sul.

BUENOS AIRES, Aug. 6 (AP).—A dispatch to La Nacion from Rio Grande do Sul, says that Bernardo Duggan and his fellow-aviators, who have been missing since Monday on their flight from New York to Buenos Aires, have arrived at Rio Grande do Sul. If the weather permits, the Argentine flier will continue his trip tomorrow hopping off for Montevideo.

The dispatch says that the aviators were forced to descend Monday after leaving Ararangua at Christovao Pereira, near the southern end of Lake Patos, because of fog. They received hospitality from a Brazilian family at whose home they remained until this morning, when they continued to Rio Grande do Sul.

80 Dickens Letters Bought by New Yorker; In One Writer Sought Circus Slang Terms

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Eighty unpublished letters from Charles Dickens to Mark Lemon, the first editor of Punch, have just passed out of the Lemon family into the possession of Gabriel Wells, the New York bookseller. The London Times, at whose disposal the collection was placed by Mr. Wells, published a selection of the letters, all of which throw light on the friendship between the author and the editor and some which illumine typical aspects of Dickens's own character.

Dickens, for instance, wrote in 1854: "Will you note down and send me any slang terms among tumblers and circus people that you can call to mind? I have noted down some. I want them in my new story, but it is probable that you will recall several which I have not got."

There was a break in the continuity of the letters, explained by the fact that Mr. Lemon's sympathies were on Mrs. Dickens's side in the differences between the novelist and his wife. The breach, however, was later healed.

Dickens drew up the letter from Lemon to the proprietors of Punch asking for the grant of an interest in the paper to the editor who had contributed so materially to its success. Mr. Lemon had begun to edit Punch at 30 shillings a week, but in later years his salary, it is supposed, reached the "princely" sum of £1,500.

ROBBER GETS $11,000 IN CONEY HOLD-UP

He Cows Two With Pistol, Then Scoops Up Payroll of Hotel Being Built at Beach.

BRONX GANGSTERS FOILED

They Come Just After $8,000 Is Paid Out—Gather Up $145 From Twelve Employes.

Two bands of payroll robbers made raids in the city in the middle of the day yesterday. One of them escaped with $11,000 stolen from a construction company at Coney Island, almost on the Boardwalk. The other miscalculated the time and arrived 20 minutes too late to capture an $8,000 payroll in the Bronx. The robbers contented themselves with holding up twelve employes and got only $145.

The Coney Island hold-up was executed by one man, described vaguely as of dark complexion, about 5 feet 6 inches tall and well dressed. It took place at the site of the fourteen-story Coney Island Hotel being erected by the Cauldwell-Wingate Company for a syndicate composed largely of Coney Island business men. Several hundred men were at work on the building at the time of the hold-up and scores of bathers were passing to and fro.

Drew $17,000 From Bank.

The money was in charge of Vice President Butler Whiting of the construction company and Robert T. Thornton, assistant paymaster. They drew $17,000 from the Manufacturers Trust Company at 381 Fourth Avenue and went first to Fifty-sixth Street and Sixth Avenue, where they paid $6,000 to the men on a building job there. Then they boarded a B. M. T. subway train and arrived at Coney Island at 2:30 P. M.

Mr. Whiting and Mr. Thornton carried the money into the company's shack alongside the new hotel building at West Twenty-ninth Street, between Surf Avenue and the Boardwalk, and began sorting out the envelopes for the 1,500 men who were to be paid. Some one entered the door behind them and said, quietly:

"Get up. Face to the wall. Don't look around." Then he added, "Be quiet and no one will be hurt."

Then the thief ordered them into a rear room. Neither Whiting nor Thornton was armed and they obeyed. Thornton was a little tardy, and the robber struck him with the butt of his gun.

The robber scooped up the envelopes, wrapped them in paper and departed. A moment later the two men emerged from the rear room and gave the alarm.

Payroll in Armored Car.

Five robbers were in the gang who fared less well in the Bronx. At 11:30 A. M. an armored car arrived at the plant of B. A. & G. N. Williams, Inc., and the South Dover Marble Company at Walnut Avenue and 133d Street, with $8,000 for the payroll. Frank Geiss, an armed guard, stayed behind to protect the pay-off, in company with a policeman, and the money car drove on.

Carl Grantfield, paymaster, summoned the employes, and when all but seven, who were not on hand, had been paid off he dismissed the policeman. Geiss put his pistol back in its holster and sat on the step to await the return of the armored car.

At that moment the five robbers walked up and marched into the office with revolvers drawn. They forced Geiss ahead of them and compelled the entire office personnel, ten men and two women, to put their hands in the air. They ordered a woman bookkeeper to open the safe. It was empty. They took the seven remaining pay envelopes and marched out again.

$75,000 BAIL IN MAIL THEFT.

Harry Sullivan to Be Taken for Trial in $300,000 Robbery.

Harry Sullivan, 24 years old, brought here from England under an indictment charging him and three others with a $300,000 mail truck robbery in San Francisco on April 7, 1924, was held in $75,000 bail yesterday by United States Commissioner Francis A. O'Neill for removal to California for trial. His three alleged confederates are serving twenty-five-year sentences.

Postoffice Inspector C. M. Christiansen, who brought Sullivan from London on the United States liner President Roosevelt, appeared before Commissioner O'Neill to testify to Sullivan's identity, but that question was waived by Raymond L. Wise, who appeared as Sullivan's attorney. Assistant United States Attorney David P. Siegel asked that bail be fixed at $100,000 and Mr. Wise pleaded that it be not in excess of $25,000.

According to Christiansen, who was handcuffed to Sullivan day and night aboard the steamship, the youth and his three alleged confederates, James Nagel, William Crowe and Morris Daniel, dissipated their loot from the mail truck robbery in less than three weeks.

Man Dies in Cotton Exchange.

Stricken with internal hemorrhages while at work in the Cotton Exchange, 60 Beaver Street, yesterday afternoon, Thomas Foxton, 55 years old, a secretary, of 37 Morningside Avenue, dropped dead in his office on the fifth floor of the building. Police of the Old Slip Station were notified and an ambulance from the Broad Street Hospital took the body to the undertaking parlors of M. J. Cashman, 1,432 Amsterdam Avenue.

NEW FIGHT BEGINS ON HOPKINS MILLIONS

SEARLES HEIRS INVOLVED

Late Widow of Methuen Millionaire Was Wife of Testator Whose Estate Is Now $300,000,000.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 6 (AP).—The Examiner says that the purported "lost will" of the late Mark Hopkins, multimillionaire railroad builder and California pioneer, was brought to this city Wednesday night and today will become the foundation of a legal attack upon the Hopkins fortune, now estimated as in excess of $300,000,000.

The will was supposed to have been found recently in a deserted house near Hillsborough, N. C. It is to be filed for probate in Superior Court here. If upheld as the genuine will of the famous member of the "Big Four" who built the Central Pacific Railroad, it will divert the Hopkins fortune to 137 heirs, and upset all recognized genealogies of the Hopkins family.

Illiterate Document Long Hidden.

Hopkins died on Oct. 29, 1878. No will was found and his estate, then appraised at about $20,000,000, was distributed among various relatives. The new contestants for a share of the fortune claim that on Dec. 25, 1874, Hopkins wrote a will in San Francisco and mailed it to North Carolina to a "Mrs. Moore," said to have been a former sweetheart.

Because she was not named as one of the beneficiaries, Mrs. Moore was said to have never revealed the will, and its existence was not disclosed until found in her former home by her grandson, David S. Moore. The document was illiterately written on a single piece of paper.

Doubt as to the authenticity of the will already has been expressed. Boutwell Dunlap, an authority on California history, said that Hopkins was bookkeeper for the "Big Four" and was a well educated man.

Also, Dunlap said, the Hopkins family, of which Mark was a member, has one of the best known and best established genealogies of all New England families. The family is descended from Stephen Hopkins of the Mayflower.

Widow Married E. F. Searles.

LAWRENCE, Mass., Aug. 6 (AP).—Mrs. Mark Hopkins, widow of the railroad builder and pioneer in California whose "lost will" is reported to have been found, married the late Edward F. Searles, multimillionaire of Methuen, a suburb of Lawrence. Mr. Searles inherited her fortune and at his death, in 1920, the major part of his fortune went to Arthur T. Walker of New York City.

The late Methuen millionaire in 1881 traveled to California for his health and as an interior decorator did some work for the rail king's widow.

Later she had him design and supervise the building of Kellogg Terrace, her Summer home in Great Barrington, Mass. Although she was twenty years his senior they were married before the building was completed, the service taking place in Trinity Chapel, New York, on Nov. 8, 1887.

Mrs. Searles died on July 21, 1891 and her will was contested by her adopted son, Timothy Hopkins. The dispute was compromised, however, and Searles received a large share in the estate. A part ownership in the Southern Pacific Railway was included and the estate was administered by the law firm of Stillman & Hubbard of New York.

TRYOUT FOR FONCK'S PLANE

Craft Which Is to Try Paris Flight to Make Cross-Country Trip.

ROOSEVELT FIELD, L. I., Aug. 6.—The giant Sikorsky biplane which is to hop off from here this month on a flight to Paris is to receive a cross-country "shake-down" cruise within two weeks, it was announced tonight by Colonel A. T. Hartney, general manager of the transatlantic flight.

The huge airplane is to fly to the Sesquicentennial grounds at Philadelphia, and after an overnight stay to proceed to the naval air station at Anacostia, D. C., and thence to McCook Field, Dayton, Ohio. From Ohio it is to return to this field.

The flight will give Lieutenant A. P. Snody, navigator who is to make the transatlantic hop, an opportunity to check his instruments. Captain René Fonck, chief pilot, his relief pilot, Captain Homer M. Berry, and Lieutenant Snody are to form the crew of the test run. They are to have as passengers Captain John R. Irwin, radio officer; Colonel Hartney, and Igor Sikorsky, designer and builder of the airplane.

Four or five guests are also to be invited for the flight. They probably will be newspaper men, Colonel Hartney said.

Bus Franchise Plea Put Off.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., Aug. 6.—Supreme Court Justice Seeger adjourned today until next Friday argument on an application by the Third Avenue Railroad system for an injunction which would restrain the City of Yonkers from selling fifteen motor bus franchises individually. The company, which is understood to be seeking the franchises so that it may operate the buses in conjunction with the Union Railway Company, its Yonkers subsidiary, contends that the franchises should be sold together.

SUICIDE BORROWED POLICEMAN'S PISTOL

Ex-Soldier Asked to Compare Weapon With Pistols in A. E. F.—Then Shot Himself.

Special to The New York Times.

HARRISON, N. J., Aug. 6.—Borrowing the service pistol of Patrolman Frank Burrell, a rookie of the Harrison police force, James Barry, 28 years old, a World War veteran, went into the rear room of his soft drink place, three blocks from the Harrison police station late last night and shot himself in the head. He died instantly.

Burrell was ordered held in the Harrison jail by Medical Examiner Amos O. Squire pending an inquiry, but he was released late this afternoon when Dr. Squire pronounced the case one of suicide.

Captain Andrew Munro, head of the Harrison police department, suspended Burrell from duty until a hearing by the Police Commissioners next week on charges preferred against Burrell by Captain Munro for surrendering his pistol.

Burrell had entered Barry's store before going on his tour of duty last night and Barry had asked to see his pistol to compare it with one he had obtained while a member of the A. E. F. He took the weapon from Burrell's holster and went into a rear room. A shot sounded and Burrell ran in to find Barry dead on the floor.

Relatives of Barry said he had been ill and was despondent.

UNION PACIFIC PLANS TO HIRE NO MORE GIRLS

Will Engage Men for All but a Few Headquarters Jobs, Hoping for Executive Material.

OMAHA, Neb., Aug. 6.—Gradual replacement of women employes of the Union Pacific Railroad Company by men as vacancies occur has been ordered by General Manager W. M. Jeffers.

The order is effective over all that part of the system between Omaha and Ogden, Utah, but does not affect stenographers and comptometer operators in the headquarters building.

President Carl R. Gray is in the East and General Manager Jeffers is away on a vacation, so a full explanation of the order could not be obtained today.

Other officials said that the order was only a return to the railroad's pre-war policy, and that the change was made in the belief that it would bring in young men who could be trained for executive positions later.

BERLIN, Aug. 6.—The sleepy little town of Offenbach, in Hesse, has a duplicate of the Dayton "monkey trial." A Communist teacher in the public schools named Weber taught his pupils that man's ancestors were apes, and declared that stories about God and the devil were purely mythical.

For two years the clergy have been trying to bring Weber before the courts and only succeeded today.

The trial was held in camera, but the Judge announced that Weber had been dismissed from his position.

SOVIET SHUNS PRESS PARLEY

But League Will Send Documents Relating to Conference.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, Aug. 6.—The Soviet boycott of Switzerland and the League of Nations meetings on Swiss territory will prevent even the telegraph agency of Bolshevist Russia participating in the meeting of the Committee of Press Experts convoked by the League in Geneva on Aug. 19, according to a letter received today by the acting Secretary General, Dr. Nitobe, from the General Director of the Soviet press agency. M. Doletzky's letter says that the agency fully appreciates the importance of the questions to be submitted to the experts and is anxious to state its views and participate in the work of the committee.

Owing, however, to the convocation of the committee in Geneva, it is obliged to abandon the idea of sending a representative.

The reply sent today by Dr. Nitobe expresses no regret for the self-enforced absence of the Russians, but merely declares that as the agency appreciates the importance of the work of the committee, the League Secretariat will not fail to send regularly all the documents concerning this meeting and any subsequent meetings which may be held.

POLICEMEN'S BEER MISSING.

Chief and Two Patrolmen Accused—One Suspended.

Patrolman Alfred Abel of West New York, N. J., who is alleged to have accused Chief of Police Charles Hangley of that place of taking a barrel of beer which remained from a recent dinner of the Patrolmen's Benevolent Association, has been suspended from the force, Police Captain Stephen Meckert said last night.

Abel is to be called before the West New York Board of Council next Tuesday night. He made his accusation to Captain Meckert, the latter said, and was suspended by the Chief until he could "prove his charges."

Adolf Bergen, Vice President, and Abel, President, have been suspended from the benevolent association, it was revealed, in connection with the disappearance of two barrels of beer after the party.

ADMIRAL BILLARD BACK; SILENT ON RUM PARLEY

Rear Admiral F. C. Billard, head of the United States Coast Guard Service in Washington, who went abroad recently with General Lincoln C. Andrews to discuss stopping liquor smuggling with the British Government, returned yesterday on the Cunarder Berengaria and was taken off at Quarantine in a revenue cutter to enable him to catch a train for New London, Conn.

He declined to discuss the London conferences beyond saying that they had been "most helpful."

Mrs. Cooper Hewitt was also a passenger on the ship. Mrs. Al Jolson, wife of the comedian, returned from Paris and denied that she had intended to get a divorce from her husband.

The Berengaria arrived yesterday for the first time under the command of the newly created Knight, Sir Arthur H. Rostron. He had been captain of the Mauretania since 1915. Captain Rostron said he liked the Berengaria very much and was sorry that Captain W. R. D. Irvine, the former commander, had to resign through ill health. "He was one of the finest men I ever knew," he said.

ONE KILLED, TWO HURT IN CHANUTE FLIGHTS

RANTOUL, Ill., Aug. 6 (AP).—One flier was killed at Chanute Field here today and another who flew to his assistance crashed down beside him, receiving injuries expected to prove fatal.

First Lieutenant C. E. Partridge of Chicago was flying at a height of 500 feet when his biplane went into a tail spin and fell.

Flying Cadet Harold C. Wilson of Selfridge Field, Mich., flew his plane to Partridge's assistance, went into a side-slip at the same place and altitude and crashed less than 150 yards away. Wilson was taken from the wreckage unconscious. Partridge was dead when extricated.

Partridge was a reserve officer, and so is Wolf.

"There is One in Your Neighborhood"

The Uniform Trust for Public Uses

THE relief of suffering, the increase of knowledge, the spiritual guidance of life, these ideals have occupied the minds of the greatest leaders of thought throughout the centuries. They have resulted in the establishment of hospitals, colleges and religious foundations. Such institutions require endowments of money, the administration of which, in accordance with the wishes of the founder, has often been a difficult problem.

Certain leaders in philanthropic undertakings have recently evolved the Uniform Trust for Public Uses, designed to carry out the intentions of the maker of a gift or bequest for charitable, educational or religious purposes and to perpetuate the usefulness of the fund.

This form of Trust has the approval of many great organizations devoted to the public good. This company, which has administered private and public trusts since 1830 has been the first institution in New York to adopt the Uniform Trust for Public Uses.

If you contemplate establishing a fund for the benefit of the public, we offer our services as Trustee for its administration under this new, complete and far-seeing instrument of trust.
